G. O. P. Wins 2 Vacant Ohio Seats in House

Mrs. Bolton Takes Husband's Place; Democrats Lose Ashbrook District

By the Associated Press

Columbus, Ohio, Feb. 27.—Ohio voters elected two Republicans to Congress today in special elections called to fill vacancies created by death.

J. Harry McGregor triumphed in the Seventeenth District, customarily Democratic. The New Deal was a prime issue there.

Mrs. Frances P. Bolton won in the Twenty-second District, which is traditionally Republican, and became the first woman to go to Congress from Ohio.

McGregor, floor leader in the Ohio House of Representatives, defeated Byron B. Ashbrook, nephew of Democratic Representative William A. Ashbrook, who died January 1.

Returns form all of the 376 precincts gave:

McGregor	27,437

Succeeds Husband

Mrs. Bolton, succeeding to the seat held eight years by her husband, Chester C. Bolton, who died October 29, defeated Anthony A. Fleger, who represented the Twenty-second from 1937 to 1939—only time the district, formed in 1914, ever went Democratic.

Returns from 684 of 726 Precincts gave:

Mrs. Bolton	39,811
Fleger	23,450

McGregor campaigned with a program calling for return of "a common sense business judgment in Washington instead of theories and ideas," while Mrs. Bolton in her one campaign speech advocated "American common sense economy in Government."

Voting Barometer

The Seventeenth District's election was regarded by many observers as a barometer of this year's voting trends in politically strategic Ohio.

McGregor, 43, tonight hailed the result as showing "a general trend away from the New Deal."

"If the result in the Seventeenth District is to be taken as an indication of the general trend, as has been emphasized by both Democrats and Republicans, then there is every reason to look forward to an early return of sane Government and prosperity throughout the Nation," he stated.

10 Months, $170,000

Arthur L. Limbach, State Democratic chairman, said November elections would "tell a different story."

The elections were declared by Gov. Bricker to reflect "Ohio's resentment at the treatment it has received at the hands of the New Deal."

"Ohio is firmly entrenched in the Republican column," he commented.

In 1938 William A. Ashbrook won the seventeenth, 51,304 to 46,300. Bolton defeated Fleger, 109,494 to 87,635, in the twenty-second, which has gone Democratic only once in the 26 years it has existed.

(In 1938 Bolton received slightly more than 55 per cent of the total vote. In the above count of Tuesday's light balloting, Mrs. Bolton has almost 63 per cent of the total.)

Both elections were for the ten months remaining in the present Congressional term. Democrats criticized Gov. Bricker for calling the elections—estimated by the Secretary of State to have cost $170,000—for the short term.

Today's elections gave the Republicans 168 members of the 435

Socialists to Hold Convention Here

Washington yesterday was awarded the national convention of the Socialist Party without bidding for it.

The party announced that it would hold its convention in the National Press Club auditorium April 6, 7 and 8. Headquarters will be in the Roger Smith Hotel.

It will be the first time the Socialist Party has held its convention here, and the first time Washington has been chosen as a political convention city in the recollection of its oldest inhabitants.

Norman Thomas, thrice the party's candidate for President; Mayor Daniel W. Hoan of Milwaukee, and Harry W. Laidler, American Labor Party representative in the New York City council, will be among the delegates.

D.C. Lump Sum Fight Likely To Be Avoided

Overton Indicates He'll Accept Figure Of Budget Bureau

By James D. Secrest

The annual battle between the Senate and the House over the Federal lump sum payment to the District will be avoided this year, it was indicated yesterday when Chairman Caldwell, of the House subcommittee on District appropriations, said he would agree to the $6,000,000 recommended by the Budget Bureau.

Caldwell said he would consent to the sum agreed on last year as a compromise after a bitter Senate-House fight, "but not a cent more."

Senator Overton, chairman of the Senate subcommittee on District appropriations, while contending the District should get more, indicated he will accept the $6,000,000 figure.

Should the lump-sum payment remain unchanged, District officials said, the District, already facing its first income tax, will need no more new taxes this year unless threatened amendments to the income levy, exempting residents who vote in the States, are adopted.

The House subcommittee on fiscal affairs will tackle this problem with the return to Washington today of Chairman Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma.

Caldwell said he expects to start executive hearings March 11 on the $49,435,000 District supply bill, and hopes to conclude within a week or ten days.

Meanwhile, the House subcommittee on District reorganization will tackle the problem of municipal reform, starting tomorrow, with con-

Rain Is Expected To Wash Snow Away From D. C.

Rain today or tonight will probably wash away most of the snow that fell in Washington yesterday, but there may be more snow tomorrow, according to the Weather Bureau.

Cloudy skies and rain were forecast for today, with temperature falling in late afternoon. There will be more cloudy weather tomorrow, and perhaps snow by night.

The snowstorm, the city's eighteenth this winter, brought calls for sanding trucks on outlying streets.

500 Rescued From Floods In California

600 Trapped, Thousands Flee Rivers Choked By Rain, Snow

By the Associated Press

San Francisco, Feb. 27.—Waterways, turned to torrents by cloudbursts and melting snow, drove as many as 3,000 persons from their homes today in a score or more northern California cities.

Almost 9 inches of rain fell in 24 hours at several points.

The storm, in its third day, left river conditions critical. More rain was in prospect, and flood conditions equaling the ravages of December, 1937, were predicted by the Weather Bureau.

In the rich Sacramento Valley "the situation appears to be grave," the weather forecaster said. "I would advise vigilance in patroling of the levees."

Olson Sends Guardsmen

In Sacramento, Gov. Culbert L. Olson declared flood conditions had caused an emergency in Yolo County and he ordered National Guardsmen to evacuate more than 70 families forced from their homes.

Gordon Garland, speaker of the State Assembly, said he was considering reconvening the Legislature "for the purpose of taking such action as may be necessary under the unusual conditions caused by devastating floods." The Legislature recessed last Sunday after a special session which considered relief issues.

High Tide Threat, Too

At Napa, 35 miles north of San Francisco, some 500 persons were rescued from flooded homes by boats. The Napa River had hurdled its banks, flooding hundreds of acres, and the city was confronted with another danger—a high tide tonight.

At Winters, 15 miles southwest of Woodland, 300 persons in a Federal migrant camp were marooned after 2 feet of water swept through their temporary shelters. In another migratory camp near Marysville, 450 persons were removed to higher ground.

The 500 persons in Pescadero, 50 miles south of San Francisco, found half their town under water at dawn.

Highways in the flood area were impassable in many instances.

No one could count the damage, but great destruction to crops and livestock was inevitable.

Three Southern Pacific lines were blocked, temporarily cutting rail service between California and the Pacific Northwest. Nine trains were held up by a slide at Pollock. Four southbound trains were at Dunsmuir, and five northbound at Gerber.

River Keeps Rising

At Santa Cruz, the American Legion disaster group was prepared for an emergency call as the San Lorenzo River swept to unprecedented heights. Boats took hundreds of persons from their homes.

At Redding some 300 houses were in from 1 to 4 feet of water. Rescue squads said all the families would be removed by tonight. The Weather Bureau said the Sacramento River, now level with its banks, would continue to rise for 48 hours. It was coming up 8 inches an hour.

Santa Cruz Cut Off

Santa Cruz, on Monterey Bay, was cut off from the rest of the State by rail, and four bridges were washed out and highways blocked. Many residents of outlying towns were rescued by boats.

The main street of Napa was under water from 1 to 3 feet deep. At the insane asylum nearby, a state of emergency was proclaimed. The National Guard turned over its equipment to the Red Cross, which set up a soup kitchen.

Don't Look Now but Tomorrow, And You'll Find an Extra Day

Tomorrow is another day.

Not just any old other day, but leap year's gift of 24 extra hours will arrive tomorrow as the calendar makes up for lost time. This odd gift has been coming regularly since the days of Julius Caesar. A survey yesterday showed that the 2,000-year-old calendar reform for many is about as welcome as two Thanksgivings. Others are glad to have it.

Col. Charles Stewart, clerk of District Court, saw in the time dividend just another working day. "We'll work," he said. "We'll put in that extra day trying to dispose of business."

He indicated, however, that the business rush will not include increase of marriage license applications from those who believe it's the woman who woos in leap year

Col. Stewart said this ancient leap year custom has not had any appreciable effect on the marriage rate. He said the outbreak of war had apparently boosted the marriage license market more than leap year, and declared:

"Women don't need leap year, I think. They have their own feminine wiles that work, leap year or no leap year. I'm for it, myself."

Whatever the effect of the extra day on marriages, a check of District records showed that between 35 and 40 Washington babies will come into the world on the strang-

License Issued Here for Admiral's Widow And N. Y. Federal Reserve President; Marriage at St. Alban's in 'Near Future'

Mrs. Alice Gertrude Gordon Grayson, widow of Admiral Cary T. Grayson, and George L. Harrison, president of the New York Federal Reserve Bank, applied yesterday in District Court for a marriage license.

Harrison, who has been seen frequently with Mrs. Grayson at parties here and in the Virginia hunting country, was a close friend of the admiral.

Mrs. Grayson issued a one-sentence announcement of the engagement, but declined to furnish reporters further details. At her apartment in the Mayflower a secretary said the marriage will take place "in the near future."

The couple can obtain a license Saturday, in accordance with the District's provision for a five-day waiting period. Harrison has a reservation for Thursday at the Carlton Hotel. Application for the license was filed by Arthur Hellen, Washington attorney.

Harrison, a bachelor, gave his age as 53. Mrs. Grayson's was listed as 48. The wedding will be performed by the Rev. Albert M. Lucas, headmaster of St. Alban's School for Boys and a canon of Washington Cathedral.

William Grayson, youngest son of Admiral and Mrs. Grayson, is a pupil at St. Alban's School. Two other

Steagall Asks $5,000,000 Home for FDIC

Would Sever Link To Treasury, Giving It Full Independence

By Felix Cotten.
Post Staff Writer

A bill which, among other things, would give the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation a palatial home, to cost $5,000,000, has been introduced by Representative Steagall (Democrat), of Alabama, chairman of the House Banking Committee.

Steagall said yesterday he was hopeful it could be passed this session. He was not aware, he said, of any formidable obstacles.

Aside from authorizing construction of a building to house the agency, the bill would increase from $5,000 to $10,000 the amount of individual deposit insurance, remove the Comptroller of the Currency from ex-officio membership on the FDIC and substitute another appointive member, provide greater protection for public funds and reduce from one-twelfth to one-fourteenth of 1 per cent of deposit liabil-

Roosevelt Sees Need to Double Canal Defense

Operations Extending To Ecuador Envisaged; Cruiser Starts Home

By Douglas B. Cornell
Associated Press Staff Writer

Aboard U. S. S. Lang at Sea, Feb. 27 (via wireless).—President Roosevelt said today that doubling the present number of planes and guns defending the Panama Canal was necessary for the long-range defense of the vital link between the Atlantic and Pacific oceans.

Such a program contemplates defense operations extending, if necessary, throughout Central America and as far south as Ecuador, Colombia and Venezuela, he told reporters at a press conference aboard the cruiser Tuscaloosa after he had completed a thorough inspection of canal defenses and had started the homeward voyage to the United States.

More planes and guns were needed, Mr. Roosevelt said, to allow a better opportunity to discover any attacking force—either from the air or by sea—at a much longer distance from the canal than ever had

Couple Talking of Crime Wave Robbed of $100 in Grocery

4 Bandits Loot Store as Extra Details Of Police Patrol District Streets; Brown Calls Conference for Today

A Washington grocer and his wife last night were interrupted in their discussion of the District's crime wave by four colored men who threatened them with a nickel-plated revolver and escaped with $100.

The holdup took place at 315 Q street northwest, while extra details of police patrolled the vicinity under emergency orders and investigators sought clews to the identity of two colored gunmen who shot and killed a liquor store proprietor Monday night.

All captains and inspectors last night were summoned by Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, to a special meeting at headquarters at 1:30 p. m. today to review the growing epidemic of major crime in the District.

Victim of the grocery store holdup was William Kraus, 33. He and his wife, Bella, were alone in the store when the first of the holdup men jumped over the counter, pinioned Kraus' arms behind his back and pummeled his ribs.

The second stood near Mrs. Kraus and told her to "shut up," while a third covered the couple with a revolver. An accomplice entered the store, stepped over to the cash register and scooped out about $40 in cash.

At the same time the man who had grabbed Kraus took the grocer's wallet, which contained $60. The robbers, all of whom appeared to be from 18 to 20 years old, ran north on New Jersey avenue.

Mrs. Kraus told police, "We had just been talking about the killing of that liquor dealer last night and how terrible things are in Washington when these men came in.

"I shouted at them to take anything they wanted but leave my husband alone," she related.

Despite the activity of both robbery and homicide squad detectives, no trace had been found last night of two bandits, one of whom fired a .38-caliber bullet into the heart of Herman Sirkis, 42, in his store at 4824 Deane avenue northeast.

Greatly concerned by Washington's crime figures this month—82 street robberies and 6 safe burglaries—Maj. Brown yesterday had a long conference with Capt. Ira E. Keck, acting chief of detectives. Afterward he called the meeting for today.

The police chief stated that plans had been made to station a large number of plain-clothes men on the streets at night in the First, Second and Thirteenth precincts, in which

Pope Greets Roosevelt's Peace Envoy

Taylor's Warm Reception Links U. S. and Vatican 1st Time in 73 Years

Vatican City, Feb. 27.—In a unique ceremony this morning, Myron C. Taylor established himself as personal ambassador of President Roosevelt to Pope Pius XII, thus providing the first official link between Washington and the Holy See since 1867.

Instead of a letter of credentials, the new envoy presented a private letter written to him by President Roosevelt naming him ambassador and, in place of the customary speeches, there was only another epistle in the President's handwriting to the Pope defining Taylor's mission. This letter will in turn be answered by the Pontiff, thus completing the exchange.

This ingenious solution of the juridical difficulties involved in sending a personal instead of a Governmental ambassador is naturally satisfactory to the Holy See and it is hoped that it will calm any criticism in the United States.

"Personal Angle"

The President's letter to the Pope, in fact, emphasizes that personal angle. It is addressed to "my old and very dear friend," and says Taylor has been sent "in order that our parallel endeavors for peace and the alleviation of sufferings might be assisted."

Then comes the crux of the letter, which is indeed a definition of the ambassador's position. "I shall be happy to feel that he may be the channel of communication for any views you and I may wish to exchange in the interest of concord among the peoples of the world," President Roosevelt wrote.

In his letter to Taylor, the President repeats the same idea. "I may from time to time request you to serve as the channel of communication for any views I may wish to exchange with the Pope," he wrote. "You will, of course, communicate to this Government any matters which may come to your attention in the performance of your mission which you may feel will serve the best interests of the United States."

Pope Hopes for Success

The Pope and Taylor, in a private audience, talked for the unusually long time of 40 minutes. The substance of the discussion was secret, but it was divulged that the Pope expressed his best wishes for the success of the ambassador's mission and sent warm greetings and thanks to President Roosevelt, as well as hopes for American prosperity. He concluded with a blessing to the American people but no formal benediction, since Taylor is not a Catholic.

The ambassador plans to stay in Rome a few weeks to establish his office and then he will go to his villa in Florence, where he will live most of the time. His secretary, Harold Tittman, will, in general, remain in Rome as secretary.

The offices will be in the Hotel Excelsior where, said Tittman, they "will always be on call" to act as a channel conveying communications. He said they have no plans to take any initiative for the present.

In its outward form, the protocol of Taylor's presentation did not differ from that held for regular ambassadors except that for the first time all the photographers were allowed to film the ceremony.

Three American limousines flying the papal and American flags were sent to the Hotel Excelsior to pick Taylor and Tittman. In them were two chamberlains supernumerary of sword and cape, one private and the

Finns Fall Back In Arctic, Setting Fire to Houses

Russians Attack Viipuri Over Ice; East End of Line Holds, Helsinki Says

By the Associated Press

Helsinki, Feb. 27.—The Red army tonight smashed at Viipuri, an artillery-raked no man's land cluttered with ruins where more than 80,000 persons once lived, while Finland acknowledged another Russian success above the Artic Circle.

The Finns said their Arctic army had been forced Monday to withdraw to Nautsi on the Norwegian frontier 65 miles south of Petsamo, but dispatches from Kirkenes, Norway, today said the Finns were continuing to retreat after reaching Nautsi.

The Kirkenes reports said that in fighting which started Saturday with patrol engagements and developed Monday into a major battle, the Finns had been forced back from their original positions at Jordenfoss, 8 miles north of Nautsi.

Finns Claim 2 Tanks

Every building and house in the Nautsi area was ablaze after heavy fighting Tuesday, the Kirkenes reports said. The Finnish communique, issued Tuesday evening, and covering only Monday's fighting, said two Soviet tanks were destroyed in the Arctic.

Heavy air fighting was also reported from the Petsamo area.

(The Russian communique covering Tuesday's action said, "Soviet troops, breaking through the enemy's fortified zone, occupied 13 defensive fortifications," on the Karelian Isthmus.

(The Soviet communique did not specify in what sector these gains occurred. Six Finnish planes were shot down, the Russians said.)

Attacking across frozen Viipuri Bay the Soviet forces attempted to force their way past islands southwest of Viipuri, evidently aiming at outflanking Finnish defense lines on the western rim of the Karelian Isthmus.

Encirclement of the battered city, already at the mercy of medium-range Russian artillery, also was an aim of the Russian drive. Long-range Soviet guns early in the war shelled Viipuri, once Finland's third largest city, and civilians were quickly removed.

Military sources said the Russian attack across the ice was likely to result in heavy Russian losses since the Finns have strong defense batteries along the jagged west coast of the bay.

Air Activity Increased

Groundwork for the Russian assault was laid by capture of the Koivisto fortifications farther south which had served as anchor of the Mannerheim Line's western terminus.

On land, the Finnish communique reported a Russian attack at Somme about 7 miles south of Viipuri and heavy fighting also on frozen Lake Naykki, east of Somme, along the Pero River, and at Lake Ayrapaa, 25 miles east of Viipuri.

An artillery duel continued to thunder at the eastern end of the isthmus front, where the Finns still hold their first line positions despite Russian attacks which failed to gain an inch.

Finland's air force, becoming more active on the offensive as well as defensive, bombed an unidentified air base and munitions depot "far behind the enemy's lines," the Finnish communique said, reporting 17 Soviet planes shot down.

Finns explained their general tactics were to withdraw along the Karelian Isthmus where it grows narrower to give them a short defense line and to inflict as great casualties as possible.

A retreat along the isthmus "bottleneck" would shrink the battle line from 68 to 50 miles.

The War Today . . .

FINLAND'S ARCTIC army retreated while on the Karelian Isthmus Russian troops, claiming capture of 13 Finnish forts, attempted to outflank Finland's Viipuri defenses.

Turkey Calls All Its Ships To Home Ports

Move Held 'Ominous;' Rumanian Industry Faces Mobilization

By the United Press

Istanbul (Wednesday), Feb. 28.—The Turkish cabinet coordination committee has decided to recall Turkish ships from abroad, it was learned today.

The committee decided that, hereafter, no ships flying the Turkish flag can sail in foreign waters.

The decision was regarded as most ominous, but no explanation was forthcoming immediately.

(Turkey, according to Lloyds register, has 168 steamers and 17 motorships as of 1939.)

It was learned that the Turkish commission of experts and technicians, who went to Germany to attend the last trials of six vessels of varying tonnage built under Turkish orders, had returned home without the vessels.

It was reported that the Turks refused to accept delivery of the boats in German ports on the grounds that the original contract stipulated they should be delivered to Turkish ports.

Rumania Sees "Emergency"

Bucharest, Feb. 27.—Rumania, occupying an increasingly uneasy position between conflicting German and Allied claims for her rich oil stores, was reported authoritatively tonight to be considering issuance of a royal decree for "emergency mobilization" of the nation's industry.

The prospect of this move was raised as German anger mounted over reports of three secret arrangements by which France undertakes to supply Rumania with large

Norse Ship Hits, Apparently Sinks Sub in North Sea

Bergen, Norway, Feb. 27 (AP).—A dramatic story of a collision in which a submarine apparently was sunk in the North Sea, was told today by survivors of the Norwegian steamer Arnfinn.

En route from England to Norway the sailors said, the Arnfinn collided with the submarine, which got under her keel.

The Arnfinn developed a heavy leak after the submarine apparently sank, but with the help of pumps she managed to reach the coast.

Talks With Duce 'Very Helpful,' Welles, Cheered, Leaves Rome

Copyright by New York Times

Rome, Feb. 27.—Undersecretary of States Welles left Rome in a cheerful frame of mind tonight owing to the results of his conversations with Premier Mussolini and Foreign Minister Ciano, which he described as "very helpful."

But it seems likely that his mission in Italy still is to be concluded, for Welles announced that following Mussolini's invitation he hopes to call on Mussolini again on his return to Italy prior to his sailing for the United States.

Welles said he would stop in Switzerland for two days on his way to Berlin where he planned to arrive Friday. He declined to disclose the nature of the conversations with Mussolini and Count Ciano beyond saying that "I am very deeply grateful for the courtesy shown to me by the Italian government and I find the conversations very helpful."

President Roosevelt's personal letter, Welles explained, was "merely a letter of presentation which contained greetings from the President." In commenting on his audience with Mussolini, he said he "referred to the statement made by President Roosevelt in Washington that I was to report to him on the present situation in Europe during my visit to Italy, Germany, France and England; that my report will be

Over the Coffee

RIPE FOR THE SENATE

Many of the young men who now sit in the House at the south end of the Capitol are destined some day for more roomy desk space and greater glory in the Senate at the north end.

Harlan Miller

That 120-yard hurdle is the hardest in the career of a member of Congress.

Among members still in their 30's or early 40's who bear watching as potential Senators, because of intelligence, courage, political skill and personality, and who are apt to yank a Senator's seat out from under him one of these days, these are eminent:

* * * *

COSTELLO (Calif.): Hero of the famous 1 to 360 vote. The other 360 later came around to his way of thinking—and voting. Bold, vigorous, conscientious, one of the most magnetic men on the Hill and already (in his third term) rated one of the ten most influential in the House.

* * * *

DIRKSEN (Ill.): One of the few whose speeches in the House hush the clamor. Stalwart, personable, conciliatory, openminded; has risen fast in four terms.

* * * *

CASEY (Mass.): Fearless, liberal, intuitive politician; bold yet levelheaded; one of the ablest members of the Dies Committee; one of the rare members who reads extensively.

"—the hardest hurdle"

VOORHIS (Calif.): Tenacious beneath an almost Christ-like humility and humanitarianism. Almost painfully idealistic. Reminds oldsters of the young Bryan.

* * * *

ALLEN (Pa.): A New Dealer who has swerved a bit to the right. His friends are trying to muster support for a race this year against Senator Guffey. Earnest apostle of the American way.

* * * *

ELLIS (Ark.): One of the 27 Arkansas law students who entered the State Legislature soon after graduation, having planned it that way. Calm, studious, forceful; already a leader of the young members from Dixie.

* * * *

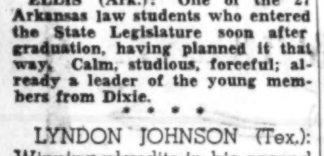
LYNDON JOHNSON (Tex.): Winning plaudits in his second term. Shrewd, poker-faced; makes friends easily. But there's so much ability in the Texas delegation that it's hard for one member to stand out.

* * * *

HALLECK (Ind.): Hard-hitting young Republican who swings from the ankles. Under fire from Townsendites in his district, he is pugnaciously eyeing Senator Minton's seat.

* * * *

SHORT (Mo.): Only Republican from Missouri. If he lived in a G. O. P. State he'd probably be in the Senate now. Silver-tongued hill-billy educated in Europe. House listens gleefully to his anathemas and jeremiads against the New Deal. Once a preacher.



"—yanking the Senator's chair"

FERGUSON (Okla.): A rough-diamond rancher with considerable polish. Frank Capra would cast him as an Oklahoma Senator. Really a conservative with deep liberal convictions. One of the few who'd rather be right than reelected.

* * * *

MAAS (Minn.): Rugged, belligerent World War aviator who wants a big Navy. Only 42 but prematurely graying. One of the G. O. P. anchor men. Flies often alone, above the Potomac.

* * * *

Among the older men marked for the Senate are Dempsey of New Mexico and Woodrum of Virginia.

Dempsey, who moved West from the sidewalks of New York, is one of the most popular and influential men in the House.

Woodrum is the work-horse of the Appropriations Committee and probably knows more about where the money goes than any other man.

Bruce Barton, Sol Bloom and Joe Martin are others of Senatorial caliber—whatever that is, as one peers down at the Senate. About half the Senators wouldn't set the House on fire.

Bridges Urges Anti-3d Term Resolution

Probably Will Offer It If Democrats Fail To, G. O. P. Candidate Says

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

Senator Bridges, of New Hampshire, active candidate for the G. O. P. Presidential nomination, yesterday proposed Republican sponsorship of a Senate anti-third term resolution if the Democrats fail to move first.

Bridges, just back from a ten-State Western speaking tour, said he would support either a Senate resolution placing the Senate on record or an amendment to the Constitution barring a third term for any President.

"I have been hoping those Democrats known to oppose a third term would offer a resolution," said the New Hampshire Republican. "If they don't, I probably shall."

Bridges' statement coincided with action by New York's Republican Legislature memorializing Congress to prohibit a third term for any President. The State's Republican-controlled Assembly approved 82 to 47 a Democratic State senator's anti-third term resolution passed through the State Senate Monday by a voice vote.

Found Third-Term Opposition

Bridges called the New York Legislature's action "very interesting, coming as it does from the President's home State." He said that "everywhere, and without exception, during my 9,000-mile Western trip, I found very determined and violent opposition to the third-term idea."

A Democrat—Senator Rush Holt, of West Virginia—previously had announced he will introduce an anti-third term resolution if the initiative is not taken by other of his colleagues. Conservative Democrats opposed to a third terms are said to be canvassing the Senate strength of such a move.

Last week's series of Democratic "smoke out" statements was said to have followed a White House interview with one of the group, who was told by the President he did not wish to run but his decision might hinge on international developments.

The war argument for a third term meanwhile was attacked by Senator Wiley (Republican), of Wisconsin. Senators urging the President to run because no successor could readily acquire his knowledge of foreign affairs are guilty of "ridiculous, willful thinking," said Wiley.

"Straw Bogeyman"

"Any attempt to retain the President on this basis is a deliberate attempt to set up a straw bogeyman to scare the man on the street," Wiley said. "To direct our American foreign policy, a President needs primarily to know what is best for America and not what is best for Europe."

Other developments:

A second Western primary duel between Thomas E. Dewey, New York's district attorney, and Senator Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, was assured when petitions for Dewey and Vandenberg were filed in Lincoln, Nebr. Vandenberg and Dewey already are pitted against each other in the Wisconsin primaries, April 2, a week in advance of Nebraska trials.

In Madison, Wis., Vice President Garner was officially matched against a third-term movement. A slate of 24 Garner delegates was entered against a slate previously filed for the President. In Illinois, where Garner is also matched against the President, failure of Mr. Roosevelt to sign a declaration of candidacy will go to a test Saturday. Secretary of State Edward Hughes predicted the State certifying board would rule the President's entry valid.

The Cook County Democratic Central Committee meeting in Chicago indorsed President Roosevelt for a third term. The Chicago organization, composed of Kelly-Nash machine sponsors of the President's Illinois primary race, adopted a resolution expressing the hope that Mr. Roosevelt would consent to "continue as Chief Executive."

In a speech, Mayor Kelly quoted the President as having said he was tired and perhaps should retire, the Associated Press said.

"I told him that he couldn't quit," Kelly said, "that he has enlisted for the duration and that the people demand that the President stay in office so that the Roosevelt policies can be continued."

The President's comment was made in the course of several conversations in the White House, the mayor said at a Democratic campaign rally. He did not say when they took place.

Textile Workers Urge Third Term

In Boston, Joseph Salerno, State director of the Textile Workers of America (C. I. O.), announced more than 40,000 Massachusetts textile workers "unanimously" urged a third term for the President. While in conflict with John L. Lewis' recent criticism of the President, Salerno said the textile worker action "proves the C. I. O. is a democratic organization and refuted charges of dictatorship."

Senator Davis (Republican), of Pennsylvania, said he would file as a delegate-at-large to the Republican National Convention.

Davis said he favored an uninstructed Pennsylvania delegation and was personally pledged to no Republican Presidential candidate.

Defense of the President's silence on the third term issue meanwhile came from a number of stalwart Administration Senators at the Capitol.

Senator Herring (Democrat), of Iowa, whose colleague, Senator Gillette, has announced vigorous opposition to a third term for any President, said it "would take a new man at least two years to learn as much as Mr. Roosevelt has about foreign affairs."

Herring and Senator Hughes (Democrat), of Delaware, said the President is wisely keeping silent on the issue, and Senator Minton (Democrat), of Indiana, said "there would be a bitter intra-party row over the nomination" if the President said he was not a candidate.

Senator Clark (Democrat), of Idaho, said it would be wise for the President "to say something within a reasonable time."

"The spirit of sportsmanship toward other candidates may lead him to declare his position soon," said Clark, who added that the President had a perfect right to run and a right to say nothing about it.

Senator Brown (Democrat), of Michigan, declared against a third term "except in an extraordinary emergency" but said he could see "some indications that such an emergency may arise."

Wallace Speaks for Trade Pact

The Gallup Poll

77% of Survey Voters Favor Bill to Ban Campaign Soliciting of U. S. Workers

By Dr. George Gallup
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Feb. 27.—The drive in Congress by Senator Hatch to cut down politics in Government by making it illegal to solicit campaign funds from Federal employes is widely supported by voters in a Nation-wide poll of public opinion.

GALLUP

It has been a time-honored custom for Government workers in election year to contribute part of their wages to the party, either voluntarily or as a result of solicitation. A bill sponsored by Senator Hatch would bring sweeping changes to this practice, for, while it would leave Government workers free to contribute voluntarily if they wished, it would prohibit anyone from soliciting money from them for a candidate or a political party.

The amount of public sentiment for this drastic change, as measured by an Institute survey, is such as to indicate that the public is almost completely out of sympathy with the old practice of collecting funds from Government workers through overt solicitation by party bosses or workers. Instead, the majority of voters have apparently adopted the principle that a Government worker owes no more financial obligation to his party than any other type of citizen.

The issue put to voters in the Institute survey was:

"Do you think it is all right for people to solicit money for political campaigns from Government employes, or do you think this should be prevented by law?"

The vote of those expressing an opinion was as follows:

All Right to Solicit 23%
Soliciting Should be Prevented 77

Approximately one voter in nine (12 per cent) expressed no opinion.

The public vote is significant in view of what might happen in case the bill, which is now in Senate committee, is passed. It a party worker were to be arrested for soliciting funds from Government employes—a practice of long standing up to now—would public opinion consider the infraction serious enough for punishment? While much would, of course, depend on the circumstances of the case, the vote in today's survey indicates that sentiment would likely be in favor of carrying out the law.

"Federal Workers Owe Party Obligation"

The body of voters opposed to the Hatch "reform" marshal two main arguments.

They declare, first, that since "Government workers depend on their party for jobs, it is perfectly legitimate for the party to demand support from them;" and second, that Government workers owe it to themselves to contribute funds because "if they don't and if the party loses an election, they will be left out in the cold."

Arguments in favor of the Hatch proposal, as gleaned from the comments of voters upholding the bill, are that the present practice puts "unfair pressure" on the Government employe, tends to encourage party graft and bribery, and "puts a price on jobs." A comment typical of many in the survey was: "A man shouldn't have to buy his job."

Sentiment on the Hatch proposal cuts across party lines, the poll results show. Of the Republican voters reached in the survey, 82 per cent declared soliciting should be prevented, and the same sentiment was expressed by an overwhelming majority of Democrats—73 per cent.

Rep. Norton Asks Delay on Changes In Labor Act

Advocates of speedy amendment of the Wagner Labor Relations Act received a setback yesterday when Representative Norton (Democrat), of New Jersey, chairman of the House Labor Committee, urged a delay.

Mrs. Norton said she would oppose consideration by her committee of an interim report to be made about March 1 by the special House committee, headed by Representative Smith (Democrat), of Virginia, investigating the National Labor Relations Board.

"I feel that we should await a complete and final report by the Smith committee before taking action on amendments," Mrs. Norton said.

Representative Cox (Democrat), of Georgia, however, declared on the floor, "It's about time we liquidated the board and amended the law.'"

Wallace Hints Powers, Plans To Save Trade

U. S. Ready to Protect Economy Against Blows Arising From War

By Stanley Carroll
International News Service Staff Writer

Vast powers and secret plans to meet the impact of the European war upon the economy of the United States are in possession of the executive branch of the Government, Secretary of Agriculture Wallace said yesterday.

Application of these powers can be made at any time without new legislation, he said. Indicating that their invocation would have a far-reaching international effect, however, he said he was not at liberty to disclose their nature.

Revelation that plans have been perfected for instant pressure on belligerents to protect American economy came when the Secretary appeared before the Senate Finance Committee to urge a three-year extension of the reciprocal trade act.

Pressed by La Follette

Hard-pressed by Senator La Follette (Progressive), of Wisconsin, who asked him if devices should not be provided now to force Britain and France to take a certain percentage of American farm products if the United States is to continue as the source of munitions, Wallace replied:

"There rest within the executive branch of the Government adequate power and adequate methods to meet the impact of the totalitarian economic policies of the nations at war, but I wouldn't care to state them for the record."

"Well, I'd like to have you tell me privately what they are," La Follette replied. "I don't want to see the American farmer pay the price of Britain and France for winning the war, just because those nations are more interested in buying munitions than in buying our farm products."

Wallace Fears Reprisals

Wallace expressed grave fear that if this Nation should force Britain and France to buy large quantities of farm products here, in return for the privilege of buying munitions, both nations might resort to reprisals when the war ended.

Emphasizing "the tremendous responsibility" which would rest on the United States when the European war ends, because of this Nation's vast store of gold and its position as the world's greatest creditor, the Secretary said:

"While the war continues we must proceed on a day-to-day, week-to-week basis. But when the war is over we should be able to use the reciprocal trade program as a valuable foundation stone for the reconstruction of world trade. Nothing would be accomplished by scuttling this one proven means of preserving and advancing healthy foreign trade."

Wallace contended the interests of the American farmer have been amply protected under the reciprocal trade program. The American farmer, he said, is primarily a surplus producer and could not benefit by a high tariff system.

Grady Backs Program

Following Wallace to the stand, Henry F. Grady, Assistant Secretary of State, declared the trade program had proved itself "sound," has greatly benefited American trade and would be invaluable when the European war ends, in stabilizing world markets.

"To permit this power (to negotiate trade pacts) to lapse when the present act expires in June," Grady said, "would be interpreted internationally as an important change in our foreign policy. And if the President loses this power to make new agreements, he also loses the power to adjust existing trade pacts if and when the war ends."

French Decree Forbids Farmers To Leave Land

Paris, Feb. 27 (AP).—France today requisitioned the services of her 7,000,000 farmers who will be held to their lands by military control to maintain the food supplies of a nation at war.

The decree shifted control of farm workers from private employers to the government, the chief object being to check an exodus from the country to the cities.

To make sure of the spring planting, rural workers were forbidden to seek city employment unless their requisition is lifted by special councils named to execute the decree.

By this and further measures to be taken before the wheat-planting season in March the government expects to avoid the necessity of importing food which would have to be paid for with money urgently needed for buying war material.

Farm Tenancy Attack Seeks Private Loans

House Group Proposes $350,000,000 Program To Be Insured by U. S.

By the Associated Press

A new $350,000,000 attack on the problem of farm tenancy was recommended yesterday by the House Agriculture Committee.

Under the plan, as explained by Chairman Jones (Democrat), Texas, the money would be raised from private investors. The funds would be lent to farm tenants so they could become farm owners, or would be used to refinance existing mortgages. The Agriculture Department would insure the mortgages securing the loans, for the purpose of making the investments attractive to private capital.

The measure would authorize $50,000,000 for the 1941 fiscal year, $100,000,000 for 1942 and $200,000,000 for 1943.

Since 1937, the Government has been granting direct loans to farmers under the Bankhead-Jones act. Only a few weeks ago, however, the House refused to grant $25,000,000 for this program for next year, and the agriculture committee asserted today that the Bankhead-Jones act was inadequate.

Referring to the new bill, the committee said:

"The bill substantially expands the program now authorized without any resulting drain on the national treasury . . .

"The insured mortgages will be self-liquidating. Contingent losses of the Government will be negligible.

"The insurance features will have the effect of minimizing risks and thus making it possible for private funds to be invested at low rates of interest in the field of farm mortgages. Thus private investment will be encouraged and the desirable result of reducing farm tenancy will be accomplished on a larger scale than is possible under the present law."

Russia Buys More U. S. Tin, Says Briton

Blockade Minister Has No Data to Show Re-export to Nazis

By James MacDonald.

Copyright by New York Times

London, Feb. 27.—Shipments of tin and rubber from the United States to Russia in the last few months have increased but those of petroleum appear to have decreased, according to Ronald Cross, minister of economic warfare, who told Commons he had no information showing whether part of these raw materials were being reexported to Germany.

Cross explained that the first objective in Great Britain's various war trade agreements was to obtain guarantees from the governments concerned that their overseas imports, especially foodstuffs and raw materials, would be used exclusively for their domestic needs, and would not be reexported to Germany.

During the questioning concerning the tin and rubber trade with the United States, Geoffrey Mander, Liberal, asked if Cross had made any approach to the United States to obtain assurance that such material is not being reexported to Germany.

Cross replied, "the United States is a neutral country and is well aware of the circumstances, and I do not think it would be the best course to make any direct approach."

Mander then asked, "isn't it a fact that we are conducting negotiations with a large number of neutral countries to prevent this kind of thing? Why should the United States be excluded?"

"For the simple reason," Cross replied, "the countries with which we are conducting these negotiations are subject to our contraband control. There is no such sanction where the United States is concerned."

Cross said Russian imports of war material, except from Germany, appear to have been considerably reduced in recent months, although imports of rubber, copper, molybdenum and other raw materials during the period from September to January were larger than during the same period two years ago.

He added that these imports had entered the Soviet Union at Vladivostok and had come from the United States either directly or through Mexico or had gone from the Philippines, Netherlands and the East Indies.

Cross said the carrier ships seemed principally to be Soviet, Dutch, Japanese and Norwegian. There is no contraband control in the Pacific.

Cross declared that there was evidence of efforts to ship contraband via Vladivostok and "possibilities of checking such shipments was being considered."

Cross said goods cannot be shipped from Spain to Germany without passing through the area of British or French contraband control.

War in Balkans Sure to Involve Italy, Says Gayda

Rome, Feb. 27 (U.P.).—Italy will enter the war if it spreads to the Balkans, Virginio Gayda, Fascist editor, said tonight.

He said the Danubian waters were the key to Italian security.

"War in the Balkans would make it impossible for Italy to stay out, much as she desires peace," Gayda said.

Jury Indicts Beady-Eyed Bandit Suspect

Colored Man Held Under $25,000 Bond; 34 Others Accused

David H. Martin, 25, colored, who was identified by several victims as the "Beady-Eyed Bandit" who ran a one-man crime wave in the Northwest section for several weeks, was indicted on 15 charges in the District Court yesterday. He has been held on bonds totaling $25,000.

The charges include robbery, housebreaking, and larceny and assault with intent to rob. Among other places, Martin was accused of entering a house at 2222 S street northwest, which belonged to former Senator David Reed.

Martin was one of 35 persons accused in 48 indictments presented by the District grand jury before Justice Peyton Gordon yesterday.

Those indicted were:

Second degree murder—Lee Davis, 47, colored, for the death of James Truesdel, 39, colored, on February 10 of knife wounds he suffered in a fight in a doorway at 612 Seivers court northwest.

Prison breach—Matthew Harper, 22, colored.

Hull's 'Good-by' To Senator King Turns Face Red

Secretary of State Hull Monday evoked gales of laughter in a packed committee room while testifying on reciprocal trade treaties when he unintentionally told departing Senator King (Democrat), of Utah: "There's nobody I'd rather see leave."

King had excused himself from the hearing to attend another committee meeting.

Hull's embarrassed correction was lost amid laughter of spectators and committee members. When it had subsided, the red-faced Cabinet member explained:

"I meant, of course, there's nobody I hate more to see leave. I hope that wasn't misunderstood."

"I never misunderstood you, Mr. Secretary," King replied.

Insurance Chiefs Look For Prosperity

Investments Will Gain With Business, Monopoly Group Told

Officials of three major life insurance companies expressed confidence before the Monopoly Committee yesterday that more prosperous times would solve the industry's increasingly acute problem of finding safe investments at attractive rates of interest.

John W. Stedman, vice president of the Prudential Insurance Co. of America; Dwight S. Beebe, vice president of the Mutual Life Insurance Co. of New York, and F. W. Ecker, vice president of Metropolitan Life Insurance Co., all testified that the present scarcity of desirable private bond issues has forced their companies to turn to less-lucrative Government securities on a larger scale than they preferred.

"I am not so discouraged," Stedman told the committee when asked what the insurance companies would do about the lack of demand for capital, "as to believe we won't have a very material increase in prosperity. There is room for a very substantial increase in production."

War's End May Help

He expressed the opinion, however, that such a development could not be counted on for the next few years. He suggested that when the European war was over, capital might flow abroad on such a scale that there would be renewed demand at home for other funds.

Beebe testified that the companies felt that they were "getting a lot of competition that would not normally be here." Potential venture capital, he said, "is seeking security at any price," adding that "in a different environment it would seek employment elsewhere."

Ecker told the committee that the present bond market was the result of economic conditions and "we just don't feel that they are going to continue as they have been."

Rockefeller Bonds Cited

Responding to questions, Ecker described as "very satisfactory Metropolitan's investment of $43,000,000 in bonds of Rockefeller Center, New York. The outstanding bonds held by his company, he said, had been reduced to about $33,000,000 and earned 5 per cent interest.

Gesell said his figures showed the property had been operated at a total deficit of $39,000,000, made up by contributions from John D. Rockefeller, jr.

F. H. Ecker, Metropolitan board charman, said Rockefeller had guaranteed the rent on the ground and taxes to Columbia University, so that the improvements would be free of these expenses if it were necessary for the insurance company to take over the buildings.

Park Board, Commissioners Favor Stadium

Tacit Indorsement Given; Bill Runs Afoul Of President's Plans

The Randolph bill to authorize construction of a stadium, parade field, and swimming pools in Anacostia Park yesterday was tacitly indorsed by the District Commissioners and the National Capital Park and Planning Commission but ran afoul of the President's legislative program.

The Park Commission, in fact, could not indorse the measure on that account although Frederic A. Delano, chairman, in a letter to Chairman Randolph of the House District Committee, pointed out that the commission has envisoned such a recreational development for several years.

The Commissioners said they had no objection to the passage of the bill so long as it does not provide that funds shall come from the District.

The Park Commission suggested an amendment to give the Secretary of Interior broader powers in the operation of the recreation center and to authorize the appropriation of "any funds in the Treasury not otherwise appropraited" as Congress may determine.

"The commission has cooperated with the National Park Service in working out comprehensive plans and is now in the process of revising and bringing up to date these plans. The purpose of this bill is, therefore, in entire accord with the plans of this commission," Delano wrote.

Noting that the bill carries no appropriation, Delano said a general authorization act should first be obtained and thereafter appropriations provided to construct one of the facilities at a time "so that each facility provided will be a part of the comprehensive, harmonious plan"

"As it is anticipated that charges would be made for the use of many of the facilities proposed, the projects will be at least partially self-liquidating."

In the final paragraph of the letter Delano said: "The commission is advised that the enactment of the proposed legislation, either in its present form or if amended as suggested by the commission, would not, at this time, be in accord with the program of the President."

Ayers Refuses To Ask Extradition Of Gene Buck

Helena, Mont., Feb. 27 (AP).—Gov. Roy E. Ayers refused today to ask extradition of Gene Buck, president of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, from Arizona on a charge of obtaining money under false pretenses.

Buck was arrested at Phoenix, February 22 on a telegraphic warrant from Missoula, Mont.

County Attorney Edward T. Dussalt, of Missoula, said the charges were based on A. S. C. A. P. notification to Montana radio stations and other enterprises that their licenses to play A. S. C. A. P.-owned music would be revoked unless demands for payments were met.

Dussault said the sheriff at Phoenix would be notified the warrant for Buck, at liberty under a $10,000 surety bond, had been withdrawn.

Reporter Indicted By Tokyo Court

Tokyo, Feb. 27 (AP).—James R. Young, of Springfield, Ill., correspondent here for International News Service, was indicted today on charge of spreading false rumors and was remanded in Tokyo District Court for trial.

A foreign office spokesman said he was charged with sending, while on a visit to China, "extremely slanderous news reports regarding the Japanese forces" and with "spreading fabrications and rumors" among Japanese and foreigners in Tokyo after his return.

(Joseph V. Connolly, president of International News Service, said in New York February 2: "All steps are being taken to insure that Mr. Young is adequately defended when his case is brought to trial."

Arm of the Law Is in a Sling

INSPECTOR BERNARD W. THOMPSON, chief of detectives, Metropolitan Police Force, at his home, 4436 Kansas avenue northwest, yesterday was nursing his injured arm and shoulder dislocated when he slipped on a raised trapdoor in the line of duty Monday night

Billion More Yearly Urged For Schools

Ultimate addition of a million dollars to the Nation's annual school bill to raise American productivity and buying power was recommended yesterday by a commission of educators.

The proposal was contained in a report of an educational policies commission named by the National Education Association and the American Association of School Administrators.

Written by John K. Norton, professor of education, Columbia University, the report, entitled "Education and Economic Well-Being in American Democracy," urged adoption of this three-point program:

Expansion of the school system to provide compulsory school attendance for at least 10 years for every American child with free schooling available to American youth for an average of 14 years.

Expansion of "well-planned" vocational education to the point where boys and girls leave school ready to enter productive jobs.

Provision of free college or university training for every child of superior ability who wants to go on with his education, even though he and his family are unable to finance the advanced schooling.

The program which the report, representing the findings of 20 outstanding educators, held "basically necessary," should be financed as the Nation's prosperity increases with appropriations stepped up gradually.

"A high output per worker is associated with a high level of education, vocational intelligence and skill—never the reverse," the report said. In States where public education has received generous support, it declared, per capita wealth has increased.

The commission suggested that States adopt the rule that schooling should continue until the pupil "can get and hold a job."

60 per cent of the recent holdups were reported.

Additional detective cruisers also were ordered to patrol the precincts.

Police said last night that two dozen colored men were questioned in connection with the murder. Six of these had been arrested.

Police meanwhile arrested a colored man in connection with a housebreaking late yesterday afternoon in the Whitelaw Hotel apartment of Thomas Barlow.

Barlow, returning from work, met the man coming out of his door, carrying a bundle containing Barlow's gray overcoat, two pairs of shoes, a shirt, camera and .32-caliber pistol. Barlow tackled the man, who dropped the bundle, escaped. He was arrested later in the 1800 block of Twelfth street northwest by Detective F. M. White and Privates Sierk and Henson.

Reward for the apprehension of the gunmen was raised to $200 yesterday when the E. Kahn & Co., wholesale liquor dealers, announced they were prepared to pay $100. Capt. Keck posted a $100 reward shortly after the shooting.

Bullet Pierced Heart

Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald performed an autopsy on Sirkis at the District Morgue yesterday, disclosing that a bullet pierced the heart. It appeared to have been fired from a .38 caliber pistol. The bullet was turned over to Dr. Richard M. Rosenberg, deputy coroner, pending ballistics tests by Lieut. John H. Fowler.

Lieut. George Darnall, chief of the homicide squad, said the bullet entered the man's chest just above a fountain pen which he had in his pocket.

Purse snatchers and burglars continued their activities yesterday.

Two boys last night snatched a purse containing $2.25 from Mrs. Ida L. Vigness, 65, a few doors from her home at 26 T street northeast. She said the boys appeared to be 12 and 15 years old.

Almeda Cain, colored maid at a rooming house at 1312 Eighteenth street northwest, was robbed of $13. She told police a man came to the house and asked about a room. He offered to put up a $5 deposit and showed her a $20 bill. She said she had only $13 to make change and when she produced it, he drew a gun.

Yeggmen entered the warehouse of the B. B. Earnshaw Co., 1105 Eleventh street southeast, early yesterday, and made unsuccessful attempts to crack two safes. Iron bars were forced from a rear window, Alfred E. Shaw, manager, reported, and the combinations and handles were knocked from two safes.

Neither strong box was opened, Shaw stated, but $2 in change was taken from the office.

A District parking meter was included in the loot of yesterday's thieves. It was stolen from its post on Seventh street between E and F streets northwest. An undetermined amount of nickels was in the box.

Two youths grabbed the purse of Ida L. Bigness, 26 T street northeast, in front of her home. The bag contained $2.25.

Eighty-two highway robberies were committed here since the first of February. There were six safe burglaries and hundreds of housebreakings and larcenies.

Maj. Brown indicated that the special plain-clothes squads were after two colored men who have staged numerous robberies in the central section of the city. One is armed with a shiny revolver while the other carries a dark automatic.

Courts' Leniency Blamed by Nolan

If all judges here would give criminals the sentences they deserve, Washington would have far less serious crime, Dr. James A. Nolan, executive director of the Washington Criminal Justice Association, said yesterday.

The leniency of some judges, Dr. Nolan said, has given Washington the underworld reputation of being a "soft spot."

The criminologist scoffed at the suggestion that inadequate relief is responsible for the increase in crime here.

"These professionals who go around robbing stores and homes are not after bread," he said. "They are after luxuries. They wouldn't work if jobs were offered them."

Ship That Fired First U. S. Shot In '17 Sails Again

New York, Feb. 27 (AP).—A battered old liner, which fired the first American shot in the World War—a blast that sent a German U-boat to the bottom—is returning to the seas after sleeping quietly and ingloriously for five years at dingy docks around New York and Newark, N. J.

The 36-year-old President Fillmore, her paint rusting and her bottom encrusted with barnacles, is being refurbished for use in the New York-Dublin-Liverpool-Glasgow trade.

She was recently sold to the Compania Transatlantica Centro Americano, a Panamanian firm controlled by Arnold Bernstein, who was once fined $400,000 and sent to jail for 30 months by the Germans, who accused him of violating currency laws.

A 15,575-ton passenger liner, she has been renamed the Panamanian.

11 Die as Airliner Crashes in Fog In Colombia

Bucaramanga, Colombia, Feb. 27 (AP).—Eleven persons were killed near here today when a Scadta Line passenger plane crashed while attempting a forced landing in a fog.

The dead included Richard Lecouna, 29, accountant employed by the New York firm of Arthur Andersen Co., his wife and small daughter; and Hernandez Bustos, former Colombian cabinet minister and former minister to Great Britain.

Scadta Airlines said there were no survivors.

Son of T. R. Quits British, May Aid Finns

Kermit Roosevelt Expected to Lead English Volunteers

Copyright by New York Times

London, Feb. 28.—Kermit Roosevelt, 51-year-old son of Theodore Roosevelt, resigned his commission as a major of the British army three weeks ago, it was learned tonight. It is reliably reported he will have some connection with the British volunteers in Finland.

Roosevelt took out British citizenship on September 20. At first, backed by First Lord of the Admiralty Winston Churchill, it was said he was headed for a high post in the ministry for shipping, but, in October, he joined a Middlesex regiment.

May Command Volunteers

It is suggested in some quarters that Roosevelt may even be appointed by Marshal Mannerheim to command British volunteers in Finland, but it is impossible to receive confirmation of that here.

It is not even known whether Roosevelt is now in this country or Finland. Until three weeks ago he was at a machine-gun training camp.

Roosevelt fought with the British army in the last war. He served with a unit in the Mesopotamia campaign and won the Military Cross.

He was in the United States when the present war broke out, but sailed immediately for England.

Ignores Passport Ban

Though his United States passport specifically states the holder should not join a foreign army, Roosevelt waived that aside. In his view, he said, Great Britain was not a foreign country.

It is essential that he resign from his British army commission if, as reported, he is going to lead volunteers in Finland. As an officer of the British army, he would be liable to internment while traveling across Norway and Sweden.

Norway, it is learned, has agreed to allow 100 volunteers to pass through her territory en route to Finland every day. Some of these have gone, especially technicians, to assemble the British and French planes which are now being sent to Helsinki every day.

ICC Approves Railway Plan To Reorganize

The Interstate Commerce Commission yesterday approved a reorganization plan for the Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul & Pacific Railroad Co., under which the road's $744,760,713 capitalization is cut to $548,533,321.. Fixed charges are reduced to $17,966,326, from $23,739,279.

The commission found that the equity of the holders of the St. Paul's preferred and common stocks is of no value and therefore allocated no securities for their account.

Equipment obligations will remain undisturbed except that the maturities of certain series will be extended.

The St. Paul filed a reorganization plan in the Federal court on July 1, 1935, stating that it was unable to meet its debts. The reorganization plan provides that the properties of the St. Paul shall be transferred to the reorganized company or to a new corporation.

Army Asked If It Aided Youth Congress Here

Representative Hoffman (Republican), Michigan, proposed yesterday that the House ask Secretary Woodring whether the War Department furnished lodging, transportation or food to persons who attended the American Youth Congress here recently.

His resolution proposed also that Woodring be called upon to say who requested that such assistance be provided—if it was provided—and whether the department was reimbursed for the cost.

troversial issues postponed until an agreement is reached on a departmental set-up.

Kennedy, D. C. Heads Confer

Chairman Kennedy conferred with the Commissioners and members of their "kitchen cabinet" yesterday and decided on a procedure to expedite the legislation.

The subcommittee will start an examination of the Seal reorganization bill in comparison with the Kennedy-Griffenhagen measure by taking up each department in turn. Questions of local suffrage, city manager, a citizens' advisory council, and the substitution of a city council for the Board of Commissioners will not be discussed until the departmental study is completed.

Civic and trade spokesmen will not be heard until next week, Kennedy said, and organizations will be asked not to repeat testimony presented at last year's hearings.

Kennedy said that hearings will be held morning and afternoon in an effort to speed the legislation.

Chairman Randolph of the House District Committee, was advised yesterday that some Government workers may be subject to four income taxes as District officials reiterated that threatened amendments to the District levy will curtail considerably the estimated return upon which the 1941 budget is based.

James B. Burns, president of the American Federation of Government Employes, asked Randolph to have the local income tax amended to exempt Government employes or allow them credit for income taxes paid in States where they vote.

While pointing out that Federal workers are disturbed at the prospect of triple taxation, Burns added:

"There is even a possibility that a fourth tax might affect them if they live in the District and their employment is in a neighboring State.

Other Taxes Cited

"We wish also to call your attention to the fact that some Government employes living in Washington retain legal residences in States which have no income taxes but are nevertheless liable for other State taxes which may be quite as heavy."

Maj. Daniel J. Donovan, District auditor, while declining to predict what the loss in revenue may be if this amendment and others are adopted by Congress, said it would be "considerable."

The Absentee Voters' Bureau disclosed that 68,000 residents of the District hold voting rights in the States. A prior report by the Civil Service Commission said 42,000 Government employes in Washington retain legal residence in the States.

Division May Cut Receipts

Maj. Donovan pointed out that the District revenue for the present fiscal year will fall possibly $1,600,000 below the estimates drawn up when the 1941 budget was prepared, due to the adoption of the split-payment amendment.

When the earlier estimates were prepared, he said, it was expected that the entire income tax would be collected on or before March 15. As a result of the amendment, however, half of this tax may be held over by the taxpayers until the next fiscal year or as late as October 15.

To make up this loss the District may be required to obtain an advance from the Treasury. The split-tax amendment authorizes the Secretary of the Treasury to make the loan.

British Yield Nine Germans To Japanese

Decision a Compromise On Dispute Over 21 Taken From Liner

By the Associated Press

Tokyo (Wednesday), Feb. 28.—The Japanese foreign office announced today the British would surrender nine German sailors taken from the Japanese liner Asama Maru tomorrow "somewhere in Yokohama waters." The time was not given.

A British warship is bringing the men from Hongkong, where they were taken with 12 other Nazis last month after a British cruiser seized them from the Asama Maru.

After their release, the Germans will be placed in care of the German Consul General.

On January 21, the British warship halted the Asama Maru off Yokohama and took off 21 German seamen, en route from the United States to Germany by Japan and Russia. Japan made vigorous protests and Britain's decision to release nine men represented a compromise.

French to Be Paid

Tokyo (Wednesday, February 28 (U.P.).—The foreign office announced today that Vice Minister of Foreign Affairs Masayuki Tani has agreed in principle to the proposal of French Ambassador Henry that Japan pay compensation for the deaths of five French nationals in the Japanese bombing of the Yunnan Railway in South China last month.

The amounts to be paid have not yet been determined.

The foreign office also announced it is preparing a reply to the United States aide memoire, submitted in connection with the bombing as a reminder to Japan that Americans in the interior of China are dependent on this French-owned railway to reach the outside world.

seats in the House. There are seven vacancies.

Republican Gov. John W. Bricker campaigned for McGregor.

William J. Kennedy, former secretary of state, in campaigning for Ashbrook accused Gov. Bricker of calling the elections because "Mrs. Frances Bolton wanted to go to Congress in the Twenty-second District and she had enough money to pay off the national Republican deficit."

Kennedy, one of numerous Democratic leaders speaking for Ashbrook, declared a vote for Ashbrook was "a vote for the New Deal."

The State Republican chairman, Ed D. Schorr, declared the Democratic candidate's campaign "has been conducted largely by outsiders, not the least of whom was Capt. Victor Hunt-Harding, of California, sent into Ohio by the New Deal high command in Washington in an obvious effort to elect another 'rubber stamp' Congressman."

Mrs. Bolton, 54, and the mother of three grown sons, made only one formal campaign talk. She spent most of the campaign at her Palm Beach, Fla., home. Descended from Cleveland pioneers who made millions in industry and the law, she is one of America's wealthiest women. She has been active in politics since her husband's first election to Congress and was a member of the national Republican program committee which recently reported.

Fleger, in contrast to Mrs. Bolton, made frequent public appearances. A 39-year-old Cleveland lawyer, he won support from many pension clubs and announced he favored the Townsend plan.

G. O. P. Misjudges U. S., Says McNutt

Fulton, Mo., Feb. 27 (AP).—Federal Security Administrator McNutt accused Republican politicians tonight of having "misjudged the temper and intelligence" of the American people in their attitude toward domestic security.

"The Republican leaders have fallen into the common political error of thinking people are always selfish," he declared in an address before a students' political forum at Westminster College.

"They know that no one likes to pay taxes, so they think that Americans are willing to let their country slide downhill just to save their pocketbooks."

Allies, Nazis Push Air War; 3 Planes Lost

40 Reich Bombers Fly Near Paris, British Scout Baltic

By James B. Reston.

Copyright by New York Times

London, Feb. 27.—Spreading north to the Baltic and south into the Paris alarm area, the air war on both the Allied and German sides is entering a much more active phase.

About 20 British bombers flew along the Baltic coast, penetrated as far as Berlin, and reconnoitered west and central Germany during the early hours of this morning.

At the same time, about 40 German bombers, flying in groups of five or six, sent sirens roaring in Paris and northern France. And, this afternoon, one British and two German bombers were shot down over the North Sea.

[Dutch antiaircraft batteries opened fire tonight for the second successive day on strange planes flying over Amsterdam, the Associated Press said. The firing continued from 10 p. m. until nearly midnight. Number and nationality of the planes was not determined.—Editor's note.]

Air officials here, however, were more interested in the flight of German bombers over France than today's small battles over the North Sea. It is estimated in military quarters here that the Germans will have had their greatest superiority in men and equipment on the western front during the period from March 15 to June 15, and that, between now and mid-March, the Allies expect ever increasing activity of German scouting planes.

Face Antiaircraft Fire

The massed flight over Paris followed last night's flight by two scouting planes who flew over the city and drew antiaircraft fire.

Successive squadrons of German raiders swept over the metropolitan area for today's raid when there was a drizzling rain and low-lying clouds, which may have shielded Paris from the German fliers. No planes were heard directly over the city and no bombs were dropped.

During last night's flight of the two German planes, Paris experienced the worst air defense mishap of the year when a shell from one of the antiaircraft batteries exploded in the Latin Quarter, injuring six persons, one seriously. The shell blew a hole 2 feet deep in the street, and one man had to have a leg amputated.

British Plane Shot Down

Taking advantage of the better weather, a small British scouting party flew out over Helgoland Bight today. German fighters made a contact with the British planes and managed to shoot down one, but the official British communique described the flight as "successful."

Around noon, German planes were reported attacking shipping near the Firth of Forth, and off the Northunmerland coast. Shortly after 1 p. m., a squadron of the Royal Air Force fighter command made a contact with one Heinkel near the Firth of Forth. They converged on it from below and behind and brought it down in the sea.

Less than an hour later, another fighter squadron sighted a second Heinkey off the Northumberland coast. Immediately, the Nazi plane banked and turned to powerdive but flattened out only a few feet above the water. The British Spitfires, the fastest, trimmest and newest of the British fighters, managed, however, to overtake it. After several bursts of fire from the fighters, the Heinkel starboard engine went out of operation a few seconds later and began to break up slowly. The Heinkel turned and settled to the surface of the water, spreading a wide trail of oil.

Nazi Fliers Save Selves

Three members of the German crew managed to launch and enter their rubber boat just as the bomber disappeared below the surface.

Though the official German communique said one British bomber was seriously damaged near Westerland by an antiaircraft shell, it is stated by the air ministry that all the British planes returned from the flight over Nazi territory.

other ordinary, dressed in the seventeenth century black costumes, and a lay chamberlain in crimson damask. They accompanied Taylor to the court of St. Damasus on which the papal apartments are situated.

Taylor In Evening Dress

At the foot of the stairs two private chamberlains were awaiting Taylor, one of them an American, Amory Mathews. A platoon of the Palatine Guards rendered honors in the courtyard. The cortege was then formed flanked by four grooms and led by the underdean of the hall with the bearer bringing up the rear. They walked up the two long flights of marble stairs into the great sala clementina where Msgr. Nardone, secretary of the sacred congregation of ceremonial joined the group.

Taylor, in the prescribed full evening dress with black spats instead of white, walked past a platoon of Swiss Guards drawn up at attention and into the antechambers of the Pope's apartment.

The pontiff, went immediately into the hall of the little throne, to which Msg. Nardone, brought the ambassador. Taylor, in accordance with the prescribed ceremonial, bowed profoundly three times as he approached the pontiff. Then the two men were left alone for the private conversation.

"Profound Gratification"

At a signal from his holiness, Tittman was brought into the room and introduced. Then both he and the ambassador retired.

After the ceremony, Taylor spoke briefly to the American newspaper men expressing his "profound satisfaction" at his welcome and his "great admiration" for the Pope.

Taylor spoke of the "very warm, dignified and friendly welcome extended by the holy father."

"This is a notable occasion," he concluded.

Hazen, Commissioner Again, Favors Third Terms

Washington's genial 72-year-old Commissioner, Melvin C. Hazen (right), was sworn into office yesterday for a third term stating he favored third terms. Geoffrey Thornett, secretary, administered the oath. Just returned from a trip to Florida, Commissioner Hazen boasted about "our city" as being the "cleanest, best policed and even has the best traffic system." He first was appointed November 16, 1933, in a Congressional recess and in January, 1934, was appointed for his first term

Duce's Talk Cheers Welles; Leaves Rome

'Very Helpful,' He Says Of Discussion; Silent On Details of Parley

strictly confidential, that I had no propositions to offer and no commitments to make on the part of the United States."

He indicated he had already informed Washington of the result of his talks here by stating "naturally, I am keeping in touch with the State Department."

Today, like yesterday, Welles had no time left for sightseeing. After holding the press conference, he received Sir Percy Loraine, the British Ambassador, with whom he talked privately for about 30 minutes, going to lunch at Villa Taverna with Ambassador Phillips, Francois Poncet, the French Ambassador, and their wives.

After luncheon he had a private conversation with M. Poncet and then saw the German Ambassador, Hans George Viktor von Mackensen for tea.

Denies Reich Peace Plan

Welles, disclaimed knowledge of reports that the Germans had drawn up a peace plan, which they intended to submit to him when in Berlin and also categorically denied that it was part of his mission to try to end the Russo-Finnish war, as indicated by Rome newspapers this morning.

Italian circles, close to the government, display the same optimism as Welles on the results of the visit. They stress the "very favorable" impression Welles had made and the "cordiality" of the conversations. The press also shares in this warm atmosphere in its friendly headlines—the first in at least two years.

It is understood that during his talk with Mussolini, Welles indicated that the United States would continue to follow its present policy of neutrality—a statement that has undoubtedly been welcomed here.

Roosevelt's Plans Outlined

It was pointed out that in order to answer questions as to the Italian government's intentions regarding peace, Welles explained first what President Roosevelt's plans were. Obviously these plans met with Mussolini's satisfaction which permitted the meeting to develop in an atmosphere of cordiality.

Some quarters inferred from this result that these plans include a desire on the part of the United States to improve Italo-American relations. This, it was pointed out, could only be done by solving the problems still open between the two countries, such as the recognition of the Ethiopian empire and of Albania and the signing of the Italo-American commercial treaty which has been hanging fire for nearly two years owing to the United States' unwillingness to recognize the empire.

However, that this does not mean that Welles made assurances on behalf of President Roosevelt, but merely that he certainly must have been made to realize by the Italian government that Italo-American good will could only be promoted by removing all differences.

Assurances Reported

The satisfaction Welles showed over the meetings is attributed also to assurances understood to have been given him that Italy has no intention of intervening in the war.

It was authoritatively learned that Welles was frankly informed of Italy's realistic attitude concerning the European conflict in the sense that she could see no possibility for peace at present. Mussolini, however, is believed to have expressed his opinion that Welles' mission was very useful.

STUBBORN BACKACHE

If you have persistent annoying backache and suspect that your kidneys are not as active as they should be, better get a 35 cent box of the famous Gold Medal Haarlem Oil Capsules—one grand kidney diuretic that has proved so effective with so many, and take as directed.

Besides backache, other symptoms of kidney sluggishness may be swollen ankles, puffy eyes, leg cramps, getting up nights, difficult, burning and scanty passage.

But be sure to ask for Gold Medal Haarlem Oil Capsules, right from Haarlem in Holland. Get Gold Medal —the genuine—the pure—the original. Refuse a substitute.

Vatican Step Taken to Beatify Mother Seton

Vatican City, Feb. 27 (AP).—The congregation of rites took the first step today which ultimately may lead to beatification of Mother Seton, founder of the Sisters of Charity of St. Vincent de Paul in the United States.

About a year ago—last March 10—Pope Pius XII blessed the cause for beatification of Mother Seton.

Mother Seton's candidacy was launched in 1881 by Cardinal Gibbons. She was born in 1774 and founded a number of Catholic institutions, including the Emmitsburg School in Emmitsburg, Md.

quantities of warplanes, machineguns and other war materials.

The decree under consideration, similar to Turkey's recent economic and defense measures, would place government officials in supreme control of all factories. Production would be regulated according to the government's estimates of civilian and military requirements.

It was reported, meanwhile, that Dr. Karl Clodius, Germany's economic expert, had postponed until next week his visit to Bucharest to discuss the breakdown of the oil contract between Germany and Rumania.

For the moment, Rumanian trade officials were devoting their attention to an Italian delegation which is here pressing for more oil, grain and other Rumanian exports. A member of the Fascist mission said, between today's sessions, that Italy was willing to agree not to resell these exports to Germany or elsewhere.

Informed quarters said, however, it appeared that Italy, with the advantages of neutral shipping, was anxious to bargain for Germany's share of Rumanian products and resell them in world markets for gold.

The reports of the arrangement with France were strengthened with the report in business circles that Maigre Dubrail, regent of the Bank of France, arrived in Bucharest during the day.

Youth Ideals War's Stake, Says Halifax

Foreign Secretary, In Classic Speech, Tells Aims at Oxford

Copyright by New York Times

London, Feb. 27.—Standing in a dim, silent room at Oxford, amid undergraduates who are preparing to go to war, Ciscount Halifax, foreign secretary and chancellor of the university, tonight discussed the reasons for the war against Germany in a speech that reads like a Chesterfield essay, and may become a wartime classic.

Regretting the world's preoccupation with an ideal system instead of an ideal individual, appealing to youth to cling to the Christian ideal, and answering the challenge that his generation caused the war, Lord Halifax said the real conflict today was not between youth and age but between youth and youth, between misled and materialistic youth of Germany and the idealistic youth of Britain.

Europe—a Waste Land

"This waste land in which we live," he said "this European civilization in which lamps are burning dim, has not been brought to its present pass merely by the mistakes of pride and selfishness of the older generation.

"What has, for example, been the driving force behind the Nazi movement in Germany? It has been German youth. Deliberately deprived, as they have been, of the elements of true judgment, it is they who made the movement and who still sustain it.

"Their point of view stands in stark opposition to yours. They do not understand your way of thinking. Your ideals mean nothing to them. They have their own ideals, which to our minds are distored and deformed, but for which hundreds of thousands of them are prepared without a moment's hesitation to sacrifice their lives.

"There is what seems an impenetrable barrier, dividing you from them, which somehow will have to be broken down if the youth of Europe is to avoid living always in this waste land, and if the European temple of civilization is to deserve and win a rekindling of the lamps."

Lord Halifax said he was not disquieted by the divergences between age and youth.

British Adding 5 Battleships, Churchill Says

Admiralty Lord Admits Damage To Nelson, Barham

By the Associated Press

London, Feb. 27.—Winston Churchill disclosed today that Germany had damaged the British battleships Nelson and Barham, warned of even greater German attacks on "the sea-power by which we live," and then announced to a cheering House of Commons that Britain's five new 35,000-ton battleships would shortly join the Grand Fleet.

He also said the Nelson and Barham, both apparently crippled in December, soon would be at sea again.

The First Lord of the Admiralty unveiled this picture of the sea war in an unexpectedly sensational speech on a day which saw the sinking of two more British merchantmen, and the capture by Britain's navy of another German steamer attempting to reach home.

Reports U-Boat Sinkings

Churchill, whose speech was occasioned by his request for admiralty appropriations, gave Commons an added tonic by remarking —almost casually—that one German submarine had certainly been sunk in the last two days and "two almost certainly."

He warned, however, of newly-built German U-boats coming "increasingly into play," but asserted they would be met by new craft "specially adapted to their destruction."

The French navy today described the sinking of one German submarine by the destroyer Simoun off Cape Finisterre, northwest Spain.

"There was instant action," said the French navy ministry. "The Simoun approached the enemy at full speed and attacked vigorously with grenades.

"She turned around and found herself again directly in front of the periscope . . . The Simoun ran into the submarine . . . A large spot of oil spread out over the point where the submarine sank."

Churchill placed German submarine losses at 35, at least, during the war's first four months and said that the net British shipping destrution was less than 200,000 tons out of a total of 21,000,000 tons. The net loss is the difference between tonnage sunk and new tonnage put into commission.

Churchill proudly indicated the superiority of the British battle fleet, despite the damage he said was done to the 33,950-ton flagship Nelson, considered the mightiest British man-of-war, by a magnetic mine in December, and to the 31,100-ton Barham by a torpedo, presumably also in December.

The secret of the crippling of these two ships was well kept and only now had leaked into Germany, after the knowledge was of no importance, Churchill said.

Scapa Flow Abandoned

Churchill disclosed that Britain had not used her North Sea naval base at Scapa Flow since the battle ship Royal Oak was sunk there by a German submarine October 13 with a loss of 810 lives.

The five new battleships which are soon to be ready are the King George V class which were launched last year. Today's statement was the first official hint that they were nearing readiness for action. The grand fleet already has 11 battleships and three battle cruisers, and the additions will make it the mightiest capital ship force in the world.

They are 35,000-ton vessels, lighter armed but faster than the Nelson, doing more than 30 knots to her 23. The original plans call for ten 14-inch guns and special armor protection against air attack. Their names and dates of launching last year are: King George V, February 21; Prince of Wales, May 3; Duke of York, September 16, and the Jellicoe and Beatty, November 11.

For protection against German attacks on British shipping Churchill said that 2,000 British merchant vessels now were armed

Reich Tense As It Waits Big Offensive

People Believe Armies Will Clash In 30 Days

By Otto D. Tolischus

Copyright by New York Times

Berlin, Feb. 27.—The arrival of spring weather and the approach of March, which always has been a fateful month in National Socialist history, are putting the German people on tenter hooks of painful anxiety that turns around to questions as to whether Germany will launch a great offensive in the west.

Such an offensive, frequently hinted at in Fuehrer Hitler's speeches, also is the essence of Germany's traditional military strategy, affirmed anew by Col. Gen. Walther von Brauchitsch, who recently declared that victory lies in the Frederician policy of attack.

March Held Deadline

At the same time military quarters hold that if an offensive is launched at all, it will be in March, if only for the reason that the offensive must be undertaken at the earliest possible moment, which is March, or be abandoned for the British policy of slow economic attrition.

It is conceded generally that the question of an offensive, as such, must now be finally decided within the next 30 days; and it must, therefore, also decide the future conduct of the whole war.

The general impression in Germany is that there will be an offensive. All preparations are taken to point in that direction. Even a zero hour is being whispered about, namely, March 15, although this date obviously is picked because on that day all civilian air defense wardens have been ordered to stand by for trials.

For the moment an unusual number of soldiers are on furlough, but so far as is known all must report back long before March 15.

That the National Socialist regime also professes to expect an early victory is indicated by reports that it is already making preparations for a monster victory celebration Artists already have been charged with making designs for decorations for triumphal arches appropriate for such an occasion.

Guns Blaze in West

Paris, Feb. 27 (AP).—Artillery blazed sporadically on the Western Front today during brisk localized engagements between advance guard units.

The French high command reported the accelerated activity following a quiet night.

(Reports from neutral Luxemburg said intensified shelling along the northern part of the front shook houses of frontier villages.

(The bombardments were accompanied by heavy German troop movements across the Moselle from Luxemburg. Luxemburg observers said the southern movement of Nazi cavalry, cyclists, infantry, ammunition and food columns had been under way by rail and highway since Saturday.)

House Fights Finn Aid Bill As Too Little

Vote Is Postponed By Debate on Floor; Passage Due Today

By John B. Oakes.

Chiefly on the ground that it does not go far enough, the bill authorizing the Export-Import Bank to make a $20,000,000 nonmilitary loan to Finland was subjected to an intensive bipartisan attack yesterday in the House.

With Democrats and Republicans alike generally in favor of some aid to Finland, the proposed measure was criticized mainly because the loan is discretionary with the bank, and because in any case funds cannot be used for military purchases.

Despite yesterday's onslaught, House leaders expect the bill will pass in substantially its present form. The measure, which has been approved by the Senate, was scheduled for passage yesterday; but late in the afternoon, the leadership decided to defer final action until today.

House Members Tired

Official reason for postponing the vote was that members of the House were tired after five hours' debate and that numerous amendments have to be argued and voted upon. However, one member of the Banking and Currency Committee, which reported the bill, pointed out that many Representatives had gone for the day and there was consequent danger that some "objectionable" amendments might pass if the vote had been taken last night.

As it now stands, the bill would increase the loan authorization of the Export-Import Bank by $100,000,000, of which $20,000,000 could be lent for nonmilitary purchases to any nation not in default to the United States Government.

Friends and enemies of the measure insisted during yesterday's debate that it was actually not a "Finnish loan bill," as it has frequently been called. Friends insisted that it was intended to stimulate American exports, while opponents charged that even if the Export-Import Bank decides to make the loan, the purchases permissible under the bill would do Finland little good.

Eaton Urges No Limitation

When the House convenes at 11 a. m. today, Representative Eaton (Republican), of New Jersey, will propose that the bill be amended to permit Finland and China to purchase anything they wish with whatever loans are granted them.

Among the other amendments will be one by Representative Fish (Republican), of New York, who will suggest that the Export-Import Bank be ordered to lend $20,000,000 to Finland irrespective of whether the bank thinks the loan can be repaid.

Some Republican opposition to the bill in its present form was based yesterday on the charge that the Finnish question was being used as a screen for enlarging the lending power of the Import-Export Bank. It was recalled that the "spend-lend" bill defeated in Congress last summer contained a provision increasing the bank's power by $100,000,000.

Subterfuge Charged

The bill is "a cloak to extend the authority of the Export-Import Bank," declared Representative Johns (Republican), of Wisconsin, adding that "$20,000,000 wouldn't save any nation with the power of Russia against it."

That the bill is not solely a Finnish loan measure was emphasized by Acting Chairman Williams of the Banking and Currrency Committee. The legislation is intended to make funds available to the citizens of our own country, to help them dispose of surplus agricultural commodities, he said.

Representative Gifford (Republican), of Massachusetts; Allen (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, and Celler (Democrat), of New York, urged lifting the restriction on military purchases.

The bill was characterized by Representative Eaton last night as "a slick piece of confidence-gaming" because, he charged, Republican friends of a loan for Finland were "stood up against a well and forced to vote for the Export-Import Bank if they want to vote for a Finnish loan."

Polish Relief Issue Up

Meanwhile, the House Foreign Affairs Committee heard that from $35,000,000 to $40,000,000 was believed necessary for the relief of the conquered population of Poland.

At hearings on bills authorizing from $10,000,000 to $20,000,000 for Polish relief, Chauncey McCormick, of Chicago, testified that American money, food and clothing were desperately needed.

State Tax Payments Held Nondeductible

The Internal Revenue Bureau has ruled that State and local governmental employes who paid State but not Federal income taxes last year cannot deduct the amount of their State income taxes from the Federal income tax returns they must file this year.

This year is the first in which all State and local governmental employes are subject to Federal income tax. In future years these persons will be able to deduct the amount of their State income taxes from their Federal returns.

Two Deputy Governors To Leave FCA

Lyons Confirms Report Of Resignation; Green To Head State College

Two more top-ranking Farm Credit Administration officers have resigned, it was learned yesterday, and it was authoritatively reported a third would follow within a few days.

LYONS

Gerald E. Lyons, first deputy governor of the FCA, yesterday confirmed reports he had quit but declined to comment except to say he will return to law practice at Cresco, Iowa.

The FCA announced Roy Green, another deputy governor, had accepted the presidency of Colorado State College at Fort Collins but will remain at his present post until late in the summer.

Goss Also May Leave

It was said that Albert S. Goss, veteran land bank commissioner of the FCA, will send his resignation to President Roosevelt on the latter's return to Washington. Goss, however, declined to comment.

Yesterday's resignations followed by less than ten days that of Peyton R. Evans FCA, general counsel since 1935.

Conflicts over policy since the FCA lost its independent status by last summer's reorganization orders were believed in large part responsible for both Evans' and Lyons' resignations. Both men formerly played a major part in setting the direction of FCA affairs but have been reported as "out of the picture" since resignation of former Governor F. F. Hill.

Hill Quit December 20

Hill, who resigned December 20 with a protest that integration of FCA with the Department of Agriculture would damage the credit and stability of his $6,000,000,000 agency, was succeeded by Dr. A. G. Black, then in charge of marketing and regulatory work for Secretary Wallace.

Black and Wallace announced at that time that no major changes in FCA policy would be made. Subsequently, Governor Black stated he did not contemplate any important personnel changes in his executive staff.

Lyons, who was graduated from the University of Minnesota law school in 1916, was in private practice until he became general counsel for the FCA Omaha district in 1934. Two years later he became general solicitor for the agency here. He resigned in July, 1938, but returned last March at request of Governor Hill to become deputy commissioner.

Sergeant Agnew Wins Lieutenancy

Sergt. John J. Agnew, night inspector at police headquarters, was promoted yesterday to the rank of lieutenant by the Commissioners. He succeeds Lieut. Frank A. Varney, who retired. Both the new appointment and Varney's retirement become effective Friday.

Private Reid L. Hammann, at the same time, was promoted to the rank of sergeant, succeeding Agnew.

Station PDS Presents Young People's Choir

The guest artists on the PDS program this morning will be members of the Young People's Choir and the Girls' Trio, of Alexandria. The trio is composed of Miss Pauline Bolton, first soprano; Miss Mable Morgan, second soprano, and Miss Elizabeth Fox, alto. The choir is under the direction of W. W. Anderson, with Mrs. W. W. Anderson as accompanist. They sing at the church services. This program will be broadcast over Station WMAL.

"Station PDS Presents," broadcast by Lee Everett from the Peoples Drug Stores Studio, Eleventh and G streets northwest, is presented each weekday morning from 7:30 to 8:30 over Station WMAL by Peoples Drug Stores in cooperation with The Washington Post. Anyone over 18 years old may participate in the auditions at 7:30 p. m. Tuesdays at the N. B. C. Studios. Performers are paid $5 for their appearance on this program.

Ex-Observer Asks Embargo On Japan

Former Marine Major Says Ban Would End War Quickly

An embargo on shipment of war materials to Japan would halt the Far Eastern war within six months, Maj. Evans Fordyce Carlson, former American military observer with the Chinese armies, predicted here yesterday.

Maj. Carlson, who resigned his Marine Corps commission a year ago to campaign for the embargo, is convinced that the Japanese, if victorious in China, would use the conquest as "a stepping stone to further aggression."

The major was in Washington to address the National Press Club last night. He appeared at a meeting sponsored by the American Committee for Non-Participation in Japanese Aggression, of which former Secretary of State Henry L. Stimson is honorary chairman.

Visions Japanese Challenge

"Sooner or later Japan would challenge us," he said, "and it might be very costly in wealth and lives to meet the challenge. But, today, we can make it physically impossible for Japan to go on, and do it with very little risk of war."

The American Embassy at Peiping, where Maj. Carlson was stationed as Assistant Naval Attache, assigned him to duty as a special observer at the outbreak of the battle for Shanghai in August, 1937. He spent 18 months with the Chinese forces on various fronts, including 4 months with the famed Eighth Route Army, operating on both sides of the Japanese lines in northwest China.

A veteran of 18 years service with the Marine Corps, Maj. Carlson says he learned "a good deal about discipline" from China's guerrilla fighters.

Praises Chinese Discipline

Soldiers of the Eighth Route Army and the half million "partisans" who join them in guerrilla campaigning are motivated by "discipline from within," the American officer stated.

"Those men have a very strong sense of duty—to be performed because they want to, and not just because someone tells them to," he said. Maj. Carlson thinks the theory might be "worth trying" in the armed forces of other democratic countries.

The section of North China which the Japanese claim to control is actually "a vast checkerboard," he reported. "The Japanese hold the lines and the Chinese hold the squares."

Japanese control extends only for about 5 miles to either side of the chief railway lines in north China, he said. Maj. Carlson, on a half-dozen occasions, joined the route army in night dashes across these Japanese-dominated belts.

"I spent three years with the Marines chasing Sandino in Nicaragua," he recalled, "but I felt I had really learned something about guerrilla warfare when I saw this Chinese army in action."

Maj. Carlson served as an Artillery officer with the A. E. F. in France. In the Marine Corps he had eight years of Far Eastern duty.

Lord's Prayer Banned by WPA, Cleric Charges

By the United Press

New Bern, N. C., Feb. 27.—The Works Projects Administration has cracked down on recital—on Government time—of the Lord's Prayer by WPA workers on a sewing room project, the Rev. W. B. Everett, pastor of St. Mary's Free Will Baptist Church, charged tonight.

Everett disclosed he had written to State WPA headquarters asking by what authority repeating the Lord's Prayer by the 44 women in the sewing room here had been banned. He charged such a move was a violation of their constitutional right.

The pastor quoted Mrs. Mollie Rountree, sewing room superintendent, as saying the women "were terribly hurt when they were denied the privilege and some of them cried. They said nothing because they feared they would lose their jobs." Some confusion was evident as to who issued the order.

Italy Enjoys Trade Revival Under Thumb of British Navy

English Coal and French Ore Make Stacks Of Industry Smoke; Blockade, However, Controls Every Ounce of Imports, Exports

(This is the fourth and last of a series of articles on Italy's position on the outskirts of the European war.—Editor's note.)

By Frazier Hunt.

Copyright International News Service

Rome, Feb. 27.—The war in Europe is bringing Italy more real prosperity than she has enjoyed in a decade. The upturn has almost the proportions of a small boom.

In Milan and Turin and in the great northern manufacturing centers of Lombardy and Piedmont, smoke is rolling out of tall chimneys for the first time in months, and in some cases in years. Long trains come in at one end of the factories with British coal, French ore and raw materials of all sorts that have passed the Allied control. When these trains pull out they carry aeroplane motors, cars, guns, shells and a score of other war items to France and England.

FRAZIER HUNT

Despite the war and a tight-fisted, thick-skinned control of every ounce of imports and exports by the British navy, Italy already starts counting up the profits in millions. In New York, London and Paris her dollar and pound credits begin to show large dimensions. Because not only must the Allies furnish the raw materials for the war goods that Italy makes for them, but they must pay Iitaly her profits in real money.

For some time secret negotiations have been going on between a British commission and Italian government officials over the details of a single trade agreement that will total close to $50,000,000. The profits on this business alone will run between 5 and 10 million dollars for Italy. It is a tidy sum for any country at any time. Normally Britain does somewhere around $30,000,000 annual business with Italy.

The hitch in these trade negotiations has centered around coal. In ordinary times Italy imports some 13,000,000 tons of coal every year. Some 8,000,000 have been coming from Germany—5,000,000 by German railroads and 3,000,000 by steamer from German ports. The remaining 5,000,000 tons have come from England. It is the 3,000,000 tons ordinarily shipped by sea from Germany that is the stumbling block in the present secret negotiations.

With her coal supply hampered, or reduced, Italy's ability to manufacture war supplies for the Allies is cut down. To keep this from happening England has offered to increase her own coal shipments to Italy by the 3,000,000 tons that Germany can no longer sell her but at the price set in England for home consumption. Since this is several dollars more a ton than the pre-war German price, Italy balks, and the entire agreement is held up until this single point can be satisfactorily ironed out. England may as a compromise permit this coal to pass by sea from Germany.

In the meantime Italy's industries make ready for the busy days ahead. Not only have their French and British orders been practically doubled, but they developed booming new markets with all the Balkan and Danubian neutrals. The sky is the limit—save for one single point. No ounce of imported raw materials, and no ounce of manufactured goods made from these materials, must be allowed to find its way into Germany.

This is an absolutely unbreakable rule that has been laid down by the Allied control. Both the Italian government and industry pledges its word that this order will be obeyed in spirit as well as in letter.

The same holds true when it comes to the equally essential item of oil. Italy has established large refineries in Trieste and at other points, but they can operate only on the pledge that no single quart of gasoline or lubrication oils reach Germany. Large quantities are being shipped to Switzerland, but positive assurances are given that none of it finds its way into Germany.

A certain amount of oil can, of course, come by tank cars to Italy from Rumania, but it is only a small part of what Italy must have for her normal use. Most of her Rumanian importations come by tank steamer from the Black Sea, through the Bosporous and across the Mediterrenean. These shipments, along with her oil from the Mosul, Persian and American ports, are completely under the domination of the British control. Shippers either do exactly what the British say or, in American slang, "No soap."

There is nothing dramatic or spectacular about this British control. It works quietly, unemotionally, and most effectively. It is the essence of what British domination of the seas really means. American cotton, for instance, cannot be delivered to Italy unless this British control has the positive assurance that not one boll of it will reach Germany.

By a system called the Black Diamond arrangement goods of a suspicious nature may be unloaded from a ship and held in an Italian port until their ultimate use and destination are discovered. Even outgoing shipments by sea from Italy are under an equally stern control. Britannia does rule the waves.

In this present economic phase of the war this is of greatest importance. Neutrals have absolutely no choice in the matter of how they are handled by the British blockade. If they want to use the seas of the world they must make their peace with Britain. They simply can take it or leave it.

Italy, leading European neutral though she is, has found it wise to accept this definitely humiliating position of having both her exports and her imports under the rather heavy thumb of England. She does not relish it, but she wants the oil and ore and cotton and the score and and one raw materials without which she is utterly helpless.

It is pleasant for her to see the smoke rolling once again from cold chimneys, and pound and dollar credits pile up in London and New York banks. War, after all, is an unpredictable phenomenon with endless ramifications.

TO SOME people, this spruce and sprightly Buick SPECIAL may be just one of those ambitions they hope some day to achieve.

But if you ask owners—especially those who have stepped up to Buick from the lowest-price field—you'll find it's really an eye-opener to a new and sounder slant on automobile buying.

Actually, the money difference between lesser cars and this nimble traveler is smaller than most people think. And when you've driven a Buick a while you find that spending these few extra dollars is really the soundest kind of economy.

They buy more power. They buy more room. They buy the matchless comfort of all-coil springing and the welcome feeling of having come up in the world.

They also buy more automobile. A bigger, solider, more durable frame. A husky, time-defying chassis. Top-grade materials, superfine precision, "on the money" craftsmanship, things that make the difference between an adequate car and a good one.

You get your money back in tangible things, such as engines balanced after assembly, wider outlook through Safety Plate Glass only, some six dozen features from automatic choke to the Flash-Way Direction Signal with automatic cut-off.

Every mile you drive you'll see how you profit by spending enough to get something really good.

And what you spend, as you'll see if you call on your Buick dealer, is less than you're asked to pay in some places for a six!

Not a six but an EIGHT for $895 *and up delivered at Flint, Mich.

Funds to Build Extra Canal Locks Denied

House Committee Rejects Roosevelt, Army Recommendation

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

An economy minded House Appropriations Committee yesterday rejected President Roosevelt's request for funds to start a $277,000,000 spare set of locks for the Panama Canal, a project described by Army officials as a key item of the national defense program.

Slashing the War Department "civil functions" supply bill $16,609,683 below Mr. Roosevelt's budget estimates, the committee disapproved a $15,000,000 cash outlay and $99,300,000 contract authorization for the new locks.

Favorable action was deferred, it was said, because the committee refused to commit the Government to such a "vast costly" undertaking before detailed plans are complete and because of some doubt of its worth.

"We are now engaged in building protective works around existing canal facilities at an estimated cost of $39,570,000," the committee said. "If this work does not give the protection sought, an auxiliary waterway closely paralleling the present one and similarly protected would be of doubtful value. Both would be equally vulnerable."

The committee's action brought the total of cuts made from President Roosevelt's budget to more than $290,000,000. The amount recommended was $203,472,567, with most of the money going for rivers and harbors and flood control work.

A proposal to spend $700,000 of rivers and harbors fund for dredging at the mid-Pacific island of Wake was eliminated.

All other budgeted projects for rivers and harbors save $1,351,540 for maintenance and all flood control work was approved by the committee. A fight is expected when the measure is taken up on the floor tomorrow over the failure to increase the total.

Rivers and harbors funds allowed, $86,721,510, are about $30,000,000 below current appropriations, while the $100,000,000 proposed for flood control is $172,000,000 less than is available.

In rejecting funds for starting the new Panama locks, the committee allowed $850,000 for preparation of plans. Detailed specifications will not be ready for two years, and because it will be six years before the locks can be completed, the committee said the project "had questionable standing as an urgent defense measure."

A total of $19,000,000 in cash and $6,370,000 in contractual authority was allowed, for "special protective works" in the Canal Zone, a project which has been hidden in great mystery but is believed to be placing vital lock machinery under ground. Several members expressed the opinion that elimination of the new locks was ordered so that funds for Army weapons and supplies will not have to be slashed.

Meanwhile, Chairman Vinson, of the House Naval Committee, challenged Secretary Edison's proposal to create an agency for coordinating all naval shore activities as a "super-bureau" which would dominate the Navy. He urged instead that the office of the Chief of Naval Operations take over shore facilities.

Edison immediately objected before the subcommittee considering Navy Department reorganization that Vinson's plan would set up a military control of the department which would "box off" the civilian head of the Navy.

He also revealed that his proposed merger of shipbuilding facilities, the absence of which have been blamed for the alleged "top-heavy" destroyers and building delays, had been sought by him earlier, but blocked by the late Secretary Swanson and the then Chief of Naval Operations, Admiral William D. Leahy.

Health Officials Fear Wave of Flu After Damp Snow

Influenza and pneumonia cases, which were beginning to show a decline, probably will go on another rampage in the District as a result of the damp snowfall yesterday, public health officials fear. In the week ended last Saturday, 55 cases of pneumonia and 15 deaths were reported to the Health Department, the lowest figures in more than a month. Influenza is not a reportable disease.

The greatest number of pneumonia deaths this year occurred in the week ended February 3, when 45 persons succumbed. The case total was highest, however, in the week ended February 17, when 72 were reported. Since January 1, there have been 371 cases and 158 deaths reported to the Health Department.

Wife, CAA Aide, Faces Annulment Suit

John L. Schaffert, filling station proprietor, of 4501 Fourteenth street northwest, asking the District Court to annul his marriage, yesterday denied his wife's charges that he tossed her out in the corridor of their apartment house without clothes. Mrs. Schaffert, a Civil Aeronautics Authority employe, of 3100 Connecticut avenue, sued recently for a legal separation without alimony. She accused her husband of moody silences, not paying bills and having a violent temper.

Schaffert asked annulment on the ground his wife obtained a Nevada divorce in 1933 from a previous husband, which he contends was void.

Committee Drops Fund to Expand National Cemetery

Army officials have informed Congress that space for 30,000 additional graves remains in Arlington National Cemetery, sufficient to take care of estimated needs, barring a war, for at least 15 years.

Col. John T. Harris, of the War Department, testifying before the House Appropriations Committee on a $33,800 proposal to begin development of 125 acres within the cemetery, said that present developed areas will not be exhausted for another five years. Burials now average 1,200 to 1,300 a year.

The committee eliminated the $33,800 request in reporting the War Department civil functions supply bill, holding that a start on a six-year $330,000 development program can be deferred.

Roosevelt Sees Need for Stronger Panama Defense

He added that he thought the first thing to do was to finish the present program for antiaircraft guns and planes. About half the total of each recommended by the Army-Navy joint board or actually authorized had been delivered so far, he said.

The President stated he had discussed in general long-range canal defenses at a conference aboard the Tuscaloosa with Panama's President, Augusto Boyd, and that they were in complete agreement.

Both the Presidents told newsmen canal defense was a matter of vital interest, not only to the United States and Panama, but to all Latin America.

"I think we are all in the same boat," said President Boyd. "Latin America must cooperate with the United States in the defense of the canal because we all would lose unquestionably by its destruction—Panama first of all. We are in there a hundred per cent as far as cooperation is conerned, of course."

The Tuscaloosa, accompanied by the destroyers Lang and Jouett, had arrived at Balboa in the Canal Zone at 7 a. m. today. The President inspected the Pacific defenses then conferred with officials as the cruiser passed through the canal.

Mr. Roosevelt said he would discuss canal defense also with Raffael Calderon Guardia, Costa Rican President-elect, on the latter's Washington visit next month.

Long range canal defense, the President continued, was well illustrated by a series of concentric circles which would extend over the western half of the Caribbean on the east up to and including Guatemala on the north, out 600 miles into the Pacific on the west and south to a line through Ecuador, Colombia and Venezuela.

All Central America and parts of the three South American countries come within the concentric circles, he said. Asked whether that meant defense operations in those areas if necessary, he replied affirmatively, adding that a 200-mile circle, for instance, would extend into Costa Rica and Colombia.

The President said Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands provided a further Atlantic defense line for the canal, but he wanted to impress some Congressmen, as well as the people of the United States, that those islands were contemplated primarily for the defense of the Southern States on the Atlantic and the Gulf of Mexico.

Since both the defense of the United States and the canal involved Army-Navy cooperation, he said, conferences held aboard the Tuscaloosa with Army and Navy officials were valuable in preventing overlapping.

On Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles' European visit, Mr. Roosevelt said he had nothing to add to the usual State Department messages. Welles, he said, had delivered some personal and unofficial notes for him.

The third term subject came up when a reporter asked if he had any statement about March 4, the seventh anniversary of his first inauguration. The President smilingly replied in the negative.

He was to be back in Washington on that date for a dinner to be given to him by his Cabinet, but he said nothing would be disclosed prior to Thursday about the cruise to the United States.

Dies Group Plans Inquiry Into Front

Public Hearings Will Be Started 'Soon as Possible'

By the United Press

The Dies Committee, after two days of secret sessions, announced last night that it has decided to conduct public hearings on operations of the Christian Front and, the Christian Mobilizers, and into alleged subversive activities in the Hollywood motion picture colony.

The hearings will be started "as soon as possible" and will include consumers' organizations, the committee said.

The sessions apparently were stormy. The committee said in a formal press release that a proposal by Representative Voorhis (Democrat), of California, for a specified code of procedure was defeated by a 4-to-3 vote. From other sources it was learned that a similar division rejected another proposal by Voorhis to curtail authority and rank of J. B. Matthews, chief investigator.

The schism, it was understood, found Representatives Casey (Democrat), of Massachusetts, and Dempsey (Democrat), of New Mexico, siding with Voorhis. Representatives Starnes (Democrat), of Alabama; Mason (Republican), of Illinois, and Thomas (Republican), of New Jersey, teamed with Chairman Dies (Democrat), of Texas.

Voorhis has clashed frequently with Dies and Starnes. Casey and Dempsey have supported Voorhis on most occasions.

The committee's statement, released by Dies, said the group:

Favors continuation of "its established policy of conducting public hearings except where special circumstances necessitate closed hearings."

Will begin hearings on Nazi-Communist activities on the West Coast, "including those of the motion picture industry," as soon as possible.

Will start consumers' organization hearings as soon as possible.

Voted to start "immediately" a "thorough investigation" of charges that Communist and Nazi agents from Mexico are carrying on work in the United States. Dies named Dempsey as a subcommittee of one to direct this inquiry.

Discuss War Propaganda

Decided to hold hearings "as soon as possible" on activities of the Christian Front and Christian Mobilizers.

Discussed the question of foreign propaganda "designed to involve us in the present European war," and will have some announcement later regarding investigations in this field.

Decided to continue the present staff of the committee, including Matthews, but reached no decison on employment of counsel to succeed former G-Man Rhea Whitley, who resigned.

Dies also said the committee favored continuation of the investigation of "all phases" of un-American activities. It was indicated that any public hearings will be conducted in Washington.

Dies has frequently assailed Hollywood as a hotbed of communism.

Voorhis Criticizes Dies

Voorhis criticized Dies in a House floor speech last month for writing magazine articles about the committee's inquiry into alleged subversive activities in Hollywood, charging they hampered the committee's investigation. But when the Texan returned to Washington last week, he repeated his accusations against movieland and asserted that the industry had employed "the highest-priced publicity agents in the world" to undertake a campaign of ridicule against the committee.

Voorhis also bitterly assailed Dies and Matthews last November when Dies, acting as a one-man subcommittee just before leaving for Texas, made public a report written by Matthews linking communism with the growth of consumers' organizations.

'Revolt' Began On Oil Control, Gannett Says

'Veritable' Rebellion Started by Governors, Oklahomans Told

By the Associated Press

Tulsa, Feb. 27.—A "veritable revolution, scarcely noticed over the country," was started in Washington, February 6, Frank E. Gannett said tonight.

"On that day," the Rochester, N. Y., newspaper publisher added in a speech prepared for the Republican Constitutional Club, "nine Western Governors appeared in person and three spoke through their personal representatives. They were in Washington to resist the New Deal's attempts to seize control of the petroleum industry of the entire Nation.

(The occasion was a subcommittee hearing on the Cole Bill for Federal regulation of the oil industry.)

Only Two Republicans

"Only two of the nine Governors are Republicans—Carr, of Colorado and Ratner of Kansas. Seven, including your own Gov. Phillips, are Democrats—seven Democrats opposing the march toward national socialism led by the President and by his commissar of national resources, 'Honest Harold' Ickes. . . .

"President Roosevelt's bill to put the petroleum industry under Federal control, under his thumb and under the thumb of Secretary Ickes, is a menace to more than the petroleum industry. If the Federal Government is allowed to seize petroleum, it will not be long before it will take over forests, mines and farms.

"One encroachment will provide the excuse for another encroachment until every business, in every State, will be the business of the Federal Government. The citizen will work, not for himself, but for the State—as he works for the state in Germany and Russia."

Oklahoma Still Frontier

Gannett suggested that "if the Federal Government wants to make sure of future reserves of petroleum for military use, it should go out and pay for them. Actually, the Federal Government has made a frightful mess of handling petroleum in public lands."

Oklahoma, said the speaker, "is still the American frontier . . . fighting to preserve State rights and constitutional government.

"You have faced invasion of your rights by bureaucratic power from Washington, and you have set an example of determined resistance," he added, referring to opposition by Gov. Leon C. Phillips to the proposed Red River Dam project and the Cole Bill.

Pair Who Locked Girl Out in Snow Are Fugitives

Somerset, Pa., Feb. 27 (AP).—Charges of aggravated assault and battery were filed tonight against Mr. and Mrs. Irvin Paugh, at whose home crippled Ada Paugh, 22, was found last week locked out in the snow with ears, feet and one hand frozen.

Miss Paugh was taken to Washington Sunday and given a new home by her sister and brother-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Owen.

Efforts to locate Paugh, who is the girl's cousin, his wife or their five children were unsuccessful. Neighbors said all seven left their home, seven miles from here, last week. Their furniture, however, was left behind. The probation officer, A. B. Shaffer said he would ask the court to declare the couple fugitives.

SHARPSHOOTING IN METRONOME. Hunting licenses will be issued to all lasses at the Leap Year Party in the Metronome Room tomorrow night. This makes it absolutely legal for you to go out and get your man, choosing your own weapons. But a fat lot the esquires are going to care. Because tomorrow night they, and they only, will receive handsome favors, boutonnieres and the preference in request numbers from Eddy Brandt . . . Make your reservations, girls. The trap is baited.

GIRLS PREFERRED. It's an all-girl show in the Shoreham Blue Room this week for "the first time in history" as Barnee puts it. And it's a honey. Marjorie King sopranos beautifully such light classics as "Estrellita," promises to be as popular as Gene Archer. The four McNallie Sisters dance like snowflakes in provocative pink chiffon with black top hats and canes. They sing, too. Talia dances Mexicali in a red, white and green costume that will knock your eye out.

ART WITH A GIGGLE continues to pervade the Lotus with the customers helping Paul Marin with his rapid-fire sketches and the white backs of the Tip Tap Girls serving as canvases. Your column again propounded the letter "X" as a sketch base for Artist Marin. But this time he triumphantly made the "X" into a pair of eye glasses on a weaselly looking old personage . . . Among the ringsiders who tested the Marin skill to the utmost were Norman Walsh, Cecil Southall and Joe Childrey, all of the Richmond, Fredericksburg and Potomac R. R.

MAYFAIRITES PACKING. Maria, Joann and Joy of the Mayfair are having a time for themselves getting ready to leave for Ohio next week. Maria has four trunkfuls of clothes to pack, while Joann and Joy have to cope with three and two trunks respectively. Also, they'll have to cram a couple of packing cases with the kitchen utensils that marked their Washington excursion into housekeeping.

TERRIBLE FRIGHTS! Lounge Riviera's nightingale, Adele Van, was all a-shiver Monday eve over a nightmare she'd had the night before. It seems she dreamed she was kidnaped by a member of Bill McCune's (Shar-Zad) orchestra. She couldn't remember which one it was, but thought it was the bass player. (Tsk! tsk! Fred Studwell). Adele said she sat up the rest of the night for fear she'd dream it all over again. Somehow, that doesn't sound just right . . . And Hi Hat's Angie Rodante is getting cold feet and a high temperature over those songs she's due to sing with Ray Harts and his Diplomats next week. After looking over the lyrics we know how she feels. They're mostly virgins on the verge.

AIR-MINDED NEPTUNERS. Both Bert Granoff and Alice O'Connell of the Neptune Room are on popular broadcasts. You'll hear Bert regularly on the Tuesday "Musical Quiz." Alice sings on the "Washington Calling" hour that NBC sends out to more than 100 stations over the country.

Eddy Mayhoff coaxed a Cafe Caprice amateur quartet in front of the mike lately. This brought out a native Hawaiian dancer lately graduated from Columbia. Then all the talent that had been festering in the corners cast off their inhibitions. The result was something like a folk festival with Roger Smith's Manager Dan Wathey applauding and laughing himself into tears on the balcony . . . Community sings by the customers create loads of fun at the Robin Hood every night . . . The folks sound off on all those prime oldies like "Down by the Old Mill Stream" . . . Fancy dancing by patrons is a nightly riot in the Pall Mall Room. Gene Gowing's square dances are in order on Tuesdays, while the Arthur Murray dancers take over on all other nights. . . Sunday night might be called "Musicians' Night" (also "Sparkling Burgundy Night") at the Madrillon. All the musicians in town seem to foregather there on their night off. BETTY BRODEL, swingtime lark of the Metronome Room

PIGGY PARTY. is on tonight at River Bend. For one little dollar you get all you can eat, all the beer you can drink, can step to George Stein's danceable music as long as your feet hold out.

NOTES TAKEN IN A HURRY. Both the Mayflower Lounge and La Salle Versailles are giving quite a play to that frisky tune, "Back in 1939, A. D." Mayflower's Maxine Tappan gives the lyrics a double portion of that certain something . . . Manager George, of the Anchor Room, is a pinochle enthusiast . . . Dancer Mara, of the Troika, is wearing the cutest ruffled panties (just like grandma's) in her "Katinka" number . . . Arthur Todd, who'll soon be back in the King Cole Room, sends a picture of himself picking sponges at Nassau . . . Dick Ashby, owner of Dick's Grill, seems to know the first name of 90 per cent of his customers . . . Lyda, the honey-haired accordionist at Del Rio, is of Swedish descent . . . There's a handsome new bandstand at the Nightingale, all done in wine tones.

Duke University Gets $300,000 Bequest

William Hayes Ackland, formerly of Washington, left $300,000 of his estate to Duke University, Durham, N. C., for an art gallery. His will was filed in District Court yesterday.

Mr. Ackland, who died February 16 at Ormond, Fla., left the university his collection of art objects. He bequeathed $20,000 to a niece, Pauline Rockett Kaiser, St. Louis, and $20,000 each to a grandniece, Pauline Hautt Kaiser, and a grandnephew, Frank Kaiser, both of St. Louis.

Barristers Plan Dinner March 14

The Barristers will hold their sixteenth annual dinner at the Mayflower March 14. Chairman of the arrangement committee is Attorney Henry A. Schweinhaut.

The Barristers organized in 1924 to obtain cooperative professional action among the younger lawyers of Washington. Membership is restricted to 36 attorneys actually practicing law under 35 years of age. As members become 35 their places are taken by younger members.

The Federal Diary

Oh, You're 35? Are You Sure? Better Check!

Civil Service Finds Thousands in Error, Usually on Years

By Alfred Friendly.

The current experience of at least three Federal agencies reveals that hundreds of thousands—perhaps millions—of Americans don't know their own birthdays.

Some haven't the vaguest notion. Some are only a few days off. The majority know the day and the month but are one or two years wrong on the year. Instances have been found where an individual was 15 years in error.

The Civil Service Commission came across the curious phenomenon in asking applicants for Government jobs to verify their birthdays. Besides those who intentionally falsify their birthdates in order to meet the age limits on examinations, the commission finds "a great many" applicants who discover, on research, that they have spent 20 or 30 years of their life believing they were a year younger or older than they actually were.

Correct Date Important

The correct date is important to the commission in connection with retirement benefits, and age limits for job eligibility.

Most remarkable instance of general age misinformation occurred about 20 years ago in the Navy Department, which instituted a survey of its employes when the retirement act went into effect. The department found that when actual proof of birth date was found, there were discrepancies in more than 50 per cent of the employes' records.

Prior to that time, exact age was of little importance. The department believed that many women employes, put down as a birth date that which made them happiest. But a larger number of others, the department was convinced, either didn't know, or didn't care.

Most Errors in Years

Today, the Social Security Board finds many instances of people applying for old-age benefits who discover, that they were mistaken about their age. The board's experience is similar to that of other Federal departments, in finding most of the errors in years, rather than in days or months.

Some 700 to 1,000 requests for age verification are mailed to the Census Bureau each day. Of these, perhaps 50 to 100 give a probable birth date that is later proved wrong. Cases where the inquirer is 10 years in error are not uncommon.

Yesterday the Census had a verification request from a man who stated his birth was on a date that records of three decennial censuses proved was exactly 12 years wrong.

Uncle Sam's most unusual employes will be represented with pleas for higher wages at the Navy's labor board current hearings. The workers are water buffaloes and bulls.

The water buffalos, or carabaos, work for 22.8 cents an hour at the Navy station at Cavite, Philippine Islands. Bulls, accompanied by carts, get 12 cents an hour at Guam. A laborer at the same spot gets 8 cents.

Owners of the oxen and carabaos, who think their stock should be better paid, will be heard at the hearings. To date, there are no intimations that the animals will be represented by labor union business agents.

It's an old story, but current talk of reorganization makes it fresh again.

Back in the Harding regime, a Florida constitutent wrote Representative Ruth Bryan Owen, now Mrs. Rohde, that he had heard a lot of talk about there being "too many bureaus" in Washington. Inasmuch as he was furnishing a house, he said, could Mrs. Owen pick up a couple of the bureaus and send them to him?

Sorry, replied Mrs. Owen, she couldn't get hold of a bureau, but she understood there was an oil-stained cabinet available.

Census May Create 100 Seats In House, Committee Is Told

Statistician Cites Need for Re-enacting Reapportionment Law to Avert Increase From the Present Membership of 435

By the Associated Press

The House Census Committee heard a prediction yesterday that almost 100 new House seats might be created as a result of the 1940 census unless Congress acts to reestablish the automatic reapportionment law.

Meyer Jacobstein, former Democratic member of Congress from New York and now a researcher for the Brookings Institution, reminded the committee that previous Congresses had increased the House membership to avoid reducing the number of Representatives from States shown by the census to have lost population.

"If you want to do that this time," he said, "you're going to have a House of more than 530 members. The present membership of the House is 435.

Jacobstein declared, however, that some of the Southern States including those which fought enactment of the automatic reapportionment law in 1929, were going to be "agreeably surprised" by the result of the coming census.

"The birth rate in the South has been greater than anywhere else in the Nation," he asserted, "and instead of losing members, they're going to gain."

Collingswood, N. J., Feb. 27 (AP).—Members of the Collingswood Women's Club would rather go to jail than answer "personal" questions about age, divorce and salary in the new Federal census, they said in a protest resolution today.

"Why," exclaimed Vice President Mrs. George Ware, "the census taker might be your next-door neighbor! A secret isn't a secret any more!"

Yes, Tomorrow Is That Extra Day

est of all birthdays, one which comes only every four years.

Fred Orsinger, aquarium director in the Commerce Department, said he is going fishing on his extra day. Cold this year and ice in the river has lowered the supplies of local fish in the aquarium, and Orsinger said he plans to go down the Potomac and collect some more golden skinners, gars and dog fish.

Senator Rush Holt (Democrat), of West Virginia, saw in February 29 a time for some extra thought. "The United States Government is costing $15,000 a minute," said Senator Holt. "It will take an extra day to figure out how much extra that extra day is going to cost the taxpayer. That sounds to me like a good way to spend my extra time."

William L. Austin, Director of the Census, said he could use the extra day, since this is the year for census taking. Herbert E. Gaston, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, said "maybe the thing to do is gripe. I'm paid on an annual basis and it's just an extra day's work for me." Isadore Lubin, chief of the Bureau of Labor Statistics, said the extra day would be a day off for his secretary.

William A. Xanten, District refuse supervisor for whom this leap year has meant an extra portion of snow removal work, said of the extra day: "We're mad about it. It means one more day's refuse."

The leap year plan started in Egypt in 238 B. C., according to the World Calendar Association of New York City. Ptolemy Euergetes decreed a change from a 365-day calendar but Egyptian priests blocked the move.

In 46 B. C. Julius Ceasar found that spring festivals were coming in summer, and he ordered anew the leap year plan. His formula held good for 1,600 years, until it was found that an annual matter of minutes had piled up to ten days.

Pope Gregory XIII directed in 1582 that this error should be fixed by moving up the calendar ten days, and that year the day after October 4 was October 15. To insure against repeating the error, Pope Gregory ordered that but one of every four century years should be leap year—years divisible by 400 are leap years, like 1600 and 2000 A. D., the others, like 1900, 1800, 1700, are common years.

Pope Gregory's plan, the Calendar Association said, will work until the year 4000. By that time, Pope Gregory's calendar will have slipped one day out of line with the sun, because of an annual 26-second error. The association said that if the year 4000, and other years divisible by 4000, are left as common years, the calendar as worked out now will keep running on schedule for 20,000 years.

Roosevelt Note To Chile Outlines Post-War Plan

Santiago, Chile, Feb. 27 (AP).—President Roosevelt has sent a confidential memorandum to Chile, outlining a post-war plan of economic organization and disarmament, it was reported in informed quarters today. They said Chile likely would reply within a week.

Part of Hull Plan

By the Associated Press

Officials said yesterday that the memorandum sent by the United States to Chile was a step in Secretary Hull's program of consulting neutral nations on the best ways to restore economic sanity when peace is restored to the world.

Earlier this month, Hull disclosed that the discussions had been started. Officials asserted that these consultations with the neutrals were distinct from the exploratory mission in which Sumner Welles, Undersecretary of State, is now engaged in Europe.

$9,000 Subscribed In Church Drive

More than $9,000 has been received to date in the Washington Federation of Churches' financial drive, Dr. W. L. Darby, executive secretary of the organization, said yesterday. The goal is $20,000.

Launched February 2 and originally scheduled for two weeks, the campaign is being extended a short while, according to Dr. Darby.

$5,000,000 Home Sought for FDIC

ities the assessment imposed on insured banks to support the agency.

"It would give the FDIC a more dignified status," Steagall declared. "It would increase its independence. That, in fact, is what it is intended to do."

The corporation would be empowered to select a site for the building in Washington, subject to approval, of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, and the design for the building would have to be approved by the Fine Arts Commission.

The building presumably would rival the Federal Reserve Board building on Constitution avenue, erected at a cost of $4,500,000.

Rivalry Among Agencies

In the past there has been considerable rivalry among the Federal banking agencies—the Reserve Board, the FDIC and the office of Comptroller of the Currency—and sometimes they have disagreed on bank supervisory policies.

Various proposals have been advanced for transferring functions of the FDIC to other agencies or for transferring functions of the other agencies to the FDIC.

A separate building for the agency and severance of the tie with the Comptroller's Office by removing the Comptroller from the board would place the insurance corporation on an equality in all outward aspects with the Reserve Board. The FDIC has offices in three downtown buildings, although its main offices are in the National Press Building.

The bill would give new protection to deposits by the Federal Government and State and local governments by permitting each disbursing officer of any governmental entity to obtain insurance up to $10,000 in each insured bank.

Byrnes Plan Ignored

Under existing law the FDIC has been compelled to rule that each insured bank in which public funds are deposited can extend only the present $5,000 maximum insurance to each governmental depositor.

No provision is made in the Steagall meausre for exempting deposits maintained by one insured bank in another from the FDIC assessment. Large banks which carry such balances in substantial amounts have insisted they should be relieved of the obligation to pay the assessment on such deposits. A bill to do this, introduced by Senator Byrnes (Democrat), South Carolina, has passed the Senate and is before the House Banking Committee. No attempt has been made, however, to move it out of committee.

The reduction in the assessment rate called for in the Steagall bill would cut from $44,000,000 to $37,000,000 or $38,000,000 the annual contribution by insured banks to the FDIC.

The bill would make it unlawful for a bank to pass on to depositors the amount of its assessment.

Control by God Is U. S. Issue, Cleric Asserts

New Yorker Addresses 700 at Lenten Service At Epiphany Church

The solution of America's problems depends primarily on the country's acceptance of God, the Rev. Samuel M. Shoemaker, of New York City, told a gathering of 700 persons yesterday at Lenten services at Epiphany Church.

"The greatest issue that confronts America," he said, "is whether this Nation, its people and its leaders shall accept or reject the control of Almighty God—changed lives and His guidance."

The Rev. Mr. Shoemaker, who is speaking daily at 12:05 noon, was presented by Dr. Ze Barney Phillips, Epiphany rector and chaplain of the Senate.

Dr. Oscar F. Blackwelder, pastor of Reformation Lutheran Church, said yesterday that "too many people today live in their fears and not in their faith." We think in terms of our limitations instead of our possibilities, he asserted at Southeast Protestant churches' Lenten rites at the Penn Theater.

The Rev. George H. Bennett, whose Wilson Memorial Methodist congregation is conducting this week's program, introduced the speaker. The Rev. Ralph W. Loew, Dr. Blackwelder's assistant at Reformation Church, will preach at noon today.

The Rev. William A. Keese, pastor of Metropolitan Memorial Methodist Church, at American University, will speak at today's weekly Washington Federation of Churches' Lenten service at Epiphany Church. It will begin at 4:45 p. m. In the fourth of a series of midweek Lenten addresses, Dr. Gerhard E. Lenski will preach at 8 p. m. tonight at Grace Lutheran Church on "Why Should There Have Been a Cross?"

Health Service Offers Gonorrhea Control Program

Any community in the Nation can put gonorrhea under control by taking the proper remedial measures, the Public Health Service said yesterday.

The following six-point program was recommended:

Establishment of a separate division of venereal disease control in each local health department.

Introduction of an efficient, workable system of case reporting.

Provision of free laboratory services for all physicians treating gonorrhea.

Free services and drugs for those unable to pay.

Efficient follow-up of cases.

Dissemination of informational material.

Self-medication, particularly with sulfanilamide, is dangerous, the Public Health Service warned, adding that "the only safe course in treating gonorrhea is to let a competent doctor do the job."

2 Bears Escape, Injure Youth

Wilkes-Barre, Pa., Feb. 27 (AP).—Two 400-pound Russian bears escaped today, injured one man and sent shopping crowds scurrying before being captured.

Jack Phillips, 19, was unloading a truck in an alley. One of the bears knocked him over in a dash for freedom from behind a theater where they were to be exhibited.

They were loose only a few minutes before being cornered.

Youth Symposium Tomorrow at 'Y'

Youth problems will be dealt with by three speakers under auspices of the Central Y. M. C. A. at 8 p. m. tomorrow in the building at 1736 G street northwest.

Mrs. Emily Handschen, of the Young Women's Christian Association, will speak on "Plight of Young Women of Today;" David Scull, of the Cooperative League, on "Youth Without Opportunity," and N. B. Jacobs, jr., of the Y. M. C. A. staff, on "Looking Ahead With Youth."

Taft Likens Middle Ages And New Deal

Planned Economy 'Kept Europe Poor,' He Tells Banquet

Baltimore, Feb. 27 (AP).—Senator Taft tonight characterized theories of "planned economy, collective production, restricted output and price-fixing" as akin to "instruments which kept Europe poor" in the Middle Ages.

Addressing a banquet of the Baltimore Graphic Arts Association marking the 500th anniversary of printing, Taft traced world development from the day of Johann Gutenberg, celebrated printing pioneer, to the depression of 1929.

After 1929, Taft said, the Nation reacted slowly and "because confidence was at a low ebb, the ideology of new despotisms in Europe spread to this country and were embraced, consciously or unconsciously, by many people."

"Some of these rose to influence in the Government," he continued. "I don't think they realized how closely the ideas they promulgated resembled the ideology which characterized society 500 years ago. They thought their face was to the future when, in fact, it was turned back to the Middle Ages."

Dewey Wants New Deal Spanked

Albany, N. Y., Feb. 27 (INS).—Thomas E. Dewey tonight issued what he termed the New Deal's report card, give it the lowest grade in the class and asserted the present Washington Administration should be taken to the woodshed for a spanking by the American electorate next November 5.

Dewey charged President Roosevelt had publicly "confessed failure" to make good on 1933 promises to solve the country's economic problems, and that his Administration sought to justify this failure by claiming conditions for the common man were bettered.

Dewey compared the seven years of Republican Administrations before the New Deal with the seven years of the present regime. He said:

"In those seven Republican years, the national income averaged $70,000,000,000. In the seven New Deal years it has averaged $62,000,000,000. Dividends were $32,000,000,000, compared with $22,000,000,000. Exports were $29,000,000,000, compared with $17,000,000,000.

"Agricultural exports suffered most. In the seven Republican years we exported nearly $11,000,000,000 of agricultural products. In the seven years of the New Deal, this figure has shrunk to $5,000,000,000—less than half.

"And meanwhile our job-making national productive plant has run down at the heel at the rate of more than $1,000,000,000 a year.

"That's the report card of the New Deal. It doesn't show a passing grade. On that report card, I am afraid the New Deal will soon be called to the wood shed."

Common Sense About Constipation

A doctor would tell you that the best thing to do with constipation is get at its cause. That way you don't have to endure it first and try to "cure" it afterward—you can avoid having it.

Chances are you won't have to look far for the cause if you eat the super-refined foods most people do. Most likely you don't get enough "bulk"! And "bulk" doesn't mean a lot of food. It means a kind of food that isn't consumed in the body, but leaves a soft "bulky" mass in the intestines.

If this is what you lack, try crisp crunchy Kellogg's All-Bran for breakfast. It contains just the "bulk" you need.

Eat All-Bran often, drink plenty of water, and "Join the Regulars." Made by Kellogg's in Battle Creek. If your condition is chronic, it is wise to consult a physician.

Black Observes 54th Birthday

Justice Hugo L. Black, the first Supreme Court member appointed by President Roosevelt, was 54 years old yesterday.

Gaining a wide reputation as a dissenter during his first year on the bench, Black has disagreed with only two majority decisions during the present term.

This change has been due in large part to the appointment of new justices whose views were more like Black's than some of the members they succeeded.

3 Ship Owners Ask Right to Sell

The Maritime Commission yesterday announced it had received applications for the sale of three small American ships to foreign interests.

O'Brien Brothers, of New York, asked permission to sell a dredge called "O'Brien Brothers" to Compania Diana de Vapores, of Panama City. The Kellogg Steamship Corporation, Edgewater, N. J., asked permission to sell the Ruth Kellogg, a 20-year-old oil tanker of 5,037 tons, to Gow, Harrison & Co., of Glasgow, and Lykes Brothers Steamship Co., asked permission to sell the Almeria Lykes, a 20-year-old freighter of 2,637 tons, to Italian Associates, Trieste.

Young Mothers! Do What Your Mother Did About COUGHING COLDS
3 Out of 5 Mothers Use This Home-Proved Treatment

You are right to worry when a cold strikes your family. You should take steps, at once, to relieve the misery and suffering. But you want to be sure that what you do is really helpful. You don't want to take needless risks.

Now here is what most mothers do. They use Vicks VapoRub. Since 1895 Vicks and their doctors have studied ways to treat the distressing symptoms of colds. Today three out of five mothers are benefiting by this forty-four-year-study of colds when they use VapoRub and let its amazing poultice-vapor action go to work. PROFIT BY THEIR EXPERIENCE. Do this. If it's a coughing cold, melt a spoonful of VapoRub in a pan of boiling water, and breathe in the soothing, medicated vapors. Then massage Vicks VapoRub on throat, chest, and back and go to bed.

Driving It Home

In truly statesmanlike manner Secretary Hull, testifying before the Senate Finance Committee, emphasized certain long-range and underlying aspects of the trade agreements program which surface thinking on the subject habitually overlooks.

A vital part of the issue, he pointed out, is whether or not the United States should continue "to take a position of leadership in efforts to check the spread of suicidal economic nationalism and to build a firm foundation for the kind of international trade relations which are indispensable to the maintenance of enduring peace."

Developing this idea, the Secretary of State effectively exposed the contradictory thinking of certain self-styled "proponents of free enterprise" who have been advocating extreme protectionism as a desirable alternative to the trade agreements program.

To substitute for this program a system of quotas, exchange controls and other devices for trade strangulation would, as Mr. Hull points out, result in a rapid development of governmental regimentation in domestic trade. There was no exaggeration in his conclusion that such an alternative would greatly promote "governmental control over business activity on a scale never before attempted in this country."

Speedy confirmation of the House action in extending the trade agreements program is to be expected from the Senate. But this prospect has not encouraged Mr. Hull to slacken his educational efforts. His testimony before the House Ways and Means Committee on January 11 had seemed conclusive. But on Monday, before the Senate Finance Committee, he delivered a statement which, though admittedly a follow-up, was equally thought-provoking and impressive.

Worried Neutrals

The meeting at Copenhagen, last Sunday, of the foreign ministers of Norway, Sweden and Denmark resulted in a strong but essentially futile reaffirmation of their solidarity.

The three nations, among the most peaceful and enlightened in the world, find themselves in an extremely precarious situation. They are trying desperately to remain at peace. But the war threatens to spill over into their territory. They are anxious to preserve their neutrality. But neutrality is proving to be full of hazards. For, while the belligerents are only too prone to complain of the nonfulfillment of neutral duties, they do not hesitate to infringe neutral rights.

Norway, Sweden and Denmark thus find themselves between the devil and the deep sea. Yet there is little they can do to escape the terrible plight which threatens them except to pray and hope for the best. And this is about all the three foreign ministers did at their Copenhagen meeting.

The communique issued at the close of this parley spoke of the determination of the Scandinavian governments to act as a unit, supporting each other in all negotiations with belligerents. It declared their readiness strongly to object to violations of international law in the conduct of naval warfare. It demanded that neutral rights be respected and it proffered the good offices of the three kingdoms in any endeavor to "initiate negotiations between the belligerents with a view to a just and permanent peace."

A similar expression of hope that the Russo-Finnish war will be brought to a peaceful solution, preserving the full independence of Finland, was also voted.

The fate of the Scandinavian countries will not be determined by such well-meaning resolutions. It is more likely to be settled on the Mannerheim Line where one member of the Scandinavian group is fighting for her very existence. If Finland holds out the Scandinavian kingdoms may be able to breathe easier. If Finland goes under their position, particularly that of Sweden and Norway, will be more precarious than ever.

Yet with infinitely more powerful nations unwilling and unready to give Finland the aid she so desperately needs, it is difficult to blame the Scandinavian democracies for holding back, however short-sighted this restraint may prove to be.

Census Questions

The House enjoyed a genuine field day of oratory on Monday. Both sides had good arguments in the discussion on the housing census and both sides made the most of them. Together they laid an excellent foundation for a compromise. But when the voting began each side clung tenaciously to its position, and of course the majority party won.

Republican orators took their stand upon the Bill of Rights. They were outraged over the prospect of citizens being sent to jail for refusing to tell politically selected census takers the value of their homes and the amount of their mortgages. It is not difficult for Congressmen to wax eloquent in this type of debate. They visualized "snoopers" invading the sacred precincts of the home. They played upon the pitiable embarrassment of wives and daughters when questioned as to who uses the family bathtub. Congressman Reed brought the debate to a climax by drawing a contrast between President Roosevelt's refusal to answer a question of great public import, while citizens face prison if they decline to reveal intimate domestic details.

The Democratic sponsors of the forthcoming housing census fought any change in the bill. They offered ample evidence that it will not pry into private affairs more than previous special enumerations have done. They pointed out that the Census Bureau has seldom, if ever, invoked penalties against persons refusing to answer its questions. They rightly emphasized the need for information that will be of great value to Congress in shaping legislative policies.

Certainly there is a great need for detailed information as to the character of the homes in which the American people live. The proposed survey is essential to indicate the scope of the housing problem and to give legislators a comprehensive view of the Nation's slums. With the Government already engaged in widespread housing activities, it would be utterly unreasonable to pass by the opportunity the 1940 census offers to obtain this useful data.

The real question is whether this information can be assembled without any serious encroachment upon privacy or individual rights. Americans properly resent being told that they must reveal confidential information under threat of severe punishment. Probably this special census could be taken just as effectively by asking citizens to cooperate with the enumerators and eliminating all question of penalties for noncompliance. Such a compromise would have been the logical outcome of the House debate.

As the Government requires more and more information regarding the lives of its citizens, it should be increasingly scrupulous in the methods employed to collect that data. Use of political appointees to carry out assignments of this sort is particularly unfortunate. And when confidential facts not absolutely essential to conduct of public business are sought, any semblance of an inquisition should be carefully avoided.

Constructive Inquiry

Like most Congressional investigating bodies, the Smith Committee, which has been conducting an inquiry into the operations of the National Labor Relations Board, has indulged in some unwarranted bullying of witnesses. But it has also amassed a great deal of valuable information throwing light on the board's methods of procedure and revealing defects in administration and weaknesses in personnel. The result of the inquiry to date amply warrants the grant of an additional $50,000 to complete the investigation.

The action of the House in approving the request for additional funds without debate, however, contributes to an unfortunate precedent. Many committees are inclined to continue their activities after their usefulness is over. Even without a preliminary report to show what has already been accomplished and to indicate what remains to be done, the House probably knew enough of the Smith Committee's findings to justify its action. But, as a matter of course, more information as to investigating committees' work and plans ought to be demanded.

Fortunately, Chairman Smith has plans for expanding the scope of his inquiry to cover a number of very broad questions which have not yet been touched upon. Heretofore, attention has been concentrated upon the board and its employes, to show how they have functioned and whether they have shown bias in handling jurisdictional disputes.

While this kind of inquiry could continue indefinitely, it seems that about all the information needed for the planning of administrative reforms has now been assembled. There remains for study some very interesting fields, such as the effect of the Wagner Act in increasing or decreasing labor disputes and its effect upon employment and general economic conditions.

General investigations of this sort are harder to organize than probings into administrative methods. And it is exceptionally difficult to direct such inquiries along lines that will prove helpful to the lawmaker. Nevertheless, it is very important that changes in the Labor Relations Act should be designed not only to correct internal weaknesses of the administrative organization but also to make the law a more effective means of improving economic conditions.

Contracts In Writing

A decision of the Supreme Court as to whether the National Labor Relations Board can compel an employer to put into writing an agreement with his employes now seems to be assured. The right of the NLRB to employ this power has been upheld by the United States Circuit Court of Appeals at New York. The same power was denied the board by the Circuit Court at Chicago last month. In such cases of direct conflict a Supreme Court option becomes essential to avoid chaotic interpretation of the law.

If an appeal is taken in the Art Metals case, which was decided in New York on Monday, the logic of Judge Learned Hand's opinion may exert a good deal of influence upon the Supreme Bench. In response to the argument that the NLRB ruling would limit the freedom of employers, Judge Hand candidly states that the Labor Relations Act does impair such freedom. Employers no longer have the right to deny their employes the benefits of collective bargaining.

Of course, the law does not require an employer to reach an agreement with any organized group of workers. Such a rule would be grossly arbitrary. Rather, the Labor Relations Act is designed to insure workers their right to bargain collectively free from interference by employers. The question which arose before Judge Hand was whether the refusal of the Art Metals Construction Co. to enter into a written contract with a group of its employes constituted a refusal to bargain collectively.

In answering that query affirmatively, Judge Hand took the view that a written contract is "practically necessary" to the preservation of an employer-employe agreement. When an understanding on questions of wages and hours has been reached, he concluded, the employer has no right "to compromise the value of the whole proceeding and probably make it nugatory" by refusing to put his signature on the agreement.

That line of reasoning has the support of common sense. It will work no hardship on employers who are willing to bargain in good faith with organized groups of workers. On the other hand, it should effectively check the use of technicalities to evade NLRB orders.

Detained Ships

Since the present European war began a total of 108 American ships have been detained by the belligerents, nearly nine-tenths of them by the British.

It is not surprising that such interference with American commerce should have led to friction between Great Britain and the United States, particularly since, in the early months of the conflict, the average period of detention was unreasonably long.

In October, for instance, 26 vessels were held up (not always, but usually, by the British) an average of 12.2 days each. In November this period of detention was reduced somewhat, although at Gibraltar during that month four American ships were detained for a total of 56 days, an average of 14 days each.

Fortunately for the future of Anglo-American relations, this problem of British interference with American shipping now shows signs of becoming less acute. Whether it is because of the strong American protests or the increased efficiency of the Allied contraband control, or both, the average length of time lost by American ships while their cargoes are being inspected by blockade officials has recently been greatly reduced.

The average for all ports during the first half of the present month was down to three and a half days, although slightly above that figure for Gibraltar. There is no reason why this time should not be further decreased. What now requires days should not require more than hours.

In the meantime the dispute over Bermuda mail seizures has taken a salutary turn with the announcement by Pan American Airways that its transatlantic clippers will eliminate the Bermuda stop and fly directly from the United States to the Azores.

The Obsolete Sheriff

From The Detroit News

If there has been no great eruption of public sentiment over the grand jury's disclosure that a deputy sheriff chauffeurs the sheriff's wife; that would be due to a public attitude toward the whole peculiar sheriff business.

For years people have been asking, though vainly: Why is a sheriff?

Now the question is: Why is a sheriff's wife deputy-sheriff-chauffeur?

The new question is of interest. It even has an alliterative quality that rolls trippingly from the tongue. But it suggests nothing that in the public mind was not already associated with the acknowledged peculiarities in general of the sheriff's office. It is recognized as subsidiary to the main issue.

The only way to be rid of such funny-business is to get rid of the sheriff's office. The office is a relic, as suitable and useful in this modern urban community as an antique sofa in an automobile factory.

Why is a sheriff?

"Our Town in Pictures"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Though only a visitor to Washington and not an educator at that, I am so impressed with the excellent service you have rendered the community in your Sunday supplement "Our Town in Pictures" that I feel that I must congratulate you. But there is another reason for writing to you. I wonder what the effect of this presentation will be on the children themselves?

In years past, I have had some experience in work with boys and young men in play and athletics, and I used to find their interest in having their names and pictures in the local papers was almost as keen as overcoming their rivals.

After all, it is the children themselves who are the product of the educational system and the children's interest, energy and efficiency play a large part in the quality of the finished product in addition to the excellence of the educational system, including the personnel and the parent and public cooperation. I do not know whether it would be feasible for a newspaper to publish regularly the names and pictures of young people who achieve noteworthy accomplishments in education (as some newspapers do in sports), but I believe such publicity would be an aid in the educational process.

Fighting "Isms"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: "Fighting at Home," by C. Gurewitz, was very illuminating, but it leaves my dim mind more confused than ever. This is the more queer because I speak as a one-time, self-confessed, would-be "dirty neck" or radical (labor) agitator, who soap-boxed on the Pacific Coast a season or two.

We're informed that Americans are going to play "The Yanks Are Not Coming" on records this time, not east-bound steamships. They're not being fooled about the Finnish attack ag'in the Russian "workers"; nor have they sympathy for stubborn Finns who refuse to allow themselves to be freed.

When Mr. Gurewitz says all funds for Finn relief are coming from war-minded industrial royalists he emphasizes the need, if he does nothing else, of a campaign patterned after the "Mile of Dimes" for the same purpose, for non-royalists. Its failure, if any, would be warning to the fulminating Finns to cease their heartless persecution of Russia.

There's enough fighting to do here, he says, against unemployment, disease, violations of civil rights, and Wall Street. What, stop the fight there? What about the issue, especially communism?

Use Of Power

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In an article in the current edition of Atlantic Monthly, Col. Lindbergh states his position concerning this war. He believes that Germany and the Allies are fighting for power and for nothing else.

There have been ugly pages in English history, and stupid ones, also; but the ugly ones belong with increasingly rare exceptions to the past, ethical standards everywhere were low. Of course, the nations are fighting for power. We do not need Lindberghs to tell us that. But England when she has power uses it well.

She understands what liberty for the individual means, and for the most part respects it. Germany and Russia are barbaric, ruthless, pitiless, and are attempting to drive this world back to the Dark Ages. Can there be any doubt where our sympathies should and do lie?

Problems In The Country Of "Woo"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: There is a legend about an ancient people who lived in the land of Woo, on the lost continent of Atlantis. Woo was a democratic country where everyone had full political rights (except descendants of slaves, government workers and residents of their capital city). It had been a prosperous land, blest with natural resources and inhabited by a liberty-loving people. There were great workshops, rich mines and highly trained artisans. There was everything to make it a land of plenty.

It had started as a simple agricultural community, where all had equal opportunities. But with the growth of the cities, conditions had changed. The stronger and shrewder men had risen to the top, formed a ruling class called the "Grabbits." These were supported by a middle class known as "Babbits," and these two soon owned all the tools of production.

The Grabbits and Babbits worshiped the god Mammon, but even more than him they loved his Prophet (sometimes spelled Profit). In times of plenty a goodly portion of the production of the country was set aside as a sacrifice to the latter. In fact, the lower classes gave so much to the Prophet that they had nothing left to spend on themselves.

The result was that more goods were manufactured than could be sold. The shops and mines were closed and the peasants could not sell their crops. They had the first depression recorded in history in Woo.

Seashells were used for money at that time. The warlike tribes in nearby Europe and Africa bought great quantities of supplies from Woo, and paid for them with shells until Woo had two-thirds of all the seashells in the world. Billions were buried in a cave in the ground.

But in spite of all this wealth unemployment increased. Soon those without jobs had used all of their savings and the government was forced to put them on relief. But while this staved off starvation it did no other good, for these people were producing nothing.

In the meantime the Prophet (I mean Profit) had vanished and the Grabbits would not reopen the shops and the mines until they found him. Where he was the wisest men could not tell. But the unemployed could not be put to work until the Grabbits saw him. The burden of relief became a drain on the nation and the wealthy started to holler about taxes. The king wanted to kill the sacred cows to feed the people, but the priests of Mammon would not let him.

This made the king angry, so he placed planning boards over all industries and assigned work quotas to each employer and made the Grabbits give the people work.

It turned out all right in the end because they found their Profit—the poor fellow had been locked up in a closed shop!

This story interested me because it showed that, even in the far dim past, they had problems similar to our own. I thought I would call it to your attention because others among your readers might also be interested.

D. C. Income Tax

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Apropos your editorial, "Unjustified Exemptions," based upon a proposal by Representative Cooley to amend the District of Columbia income tax law so as to exempt all Washingtonians who maintain a legal residence elsewhere, it is assumed the phrase "legal residence" is used synonymously with the word "domicile." Such an amendment is entirely unnecessary as the law subjects to its provisions only those who are domiciled in the District of Columbia.

Section 2 (a) of the law provides: "There is hereby levied for each taxable year upon the taxable income of every individual domiciled in the District of Columbia on the last day of the taxable year the following rates:" The meaning of "domicile" has been defined by both State and Federal courts in numberless cases, and it is proper to assume that this word was used in the law in the sense and meaning put upon it by the courts. For otherwise the word would be meaningless and useless, and instead of it the lawmakers would have used the word "residing."

And yet in face of this plain meaning and intent of the law the Corporation Counsel has given an opinion which reads the word "domicile" out of the law and substitutes in its place the word "residing," which are entirely different things. A person may have many residences, but can have only one domicile.

The question of domicile is one of intention to return to a particular locality at some future time. The mere expression of such an intention is not alone sufficient. It must be supported by the acts of the individual, such for example as payment of taxes in the locality, ownership of property there and exercise of the right of suffrage where the domicile is claimed, and such acts coupled with the expressed intention of returning at some future time are conclusive as to one's domicile, and have been so held by the Supreme Court of the United States. The proposed amendment of Mr. Cooley would only make a confused situation worse confounded.

Collective Enterprise

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Since the beginning of the present business depression a great number of us have been sold the idea that collective enterprise is more successful than private enterprise. Why collective enterprises flourish in periods of business depression should be discernible to every thinking American citizen.

The practice of a collectivist economy on a Nation-wide scale would be a make-shift economic panacea. As long as collective competition would be destroying private competition it would be fairly successful. But when collective competition destroys all private competition competing with collective competition our population would divide itself into three classes of citizens: 1. A nonproducing political bureaucracy that would live the abundant life off the sweat of collective enterprise. 2. A class of supervisor-managers appointed by the political bureaucracy to direct the activities of collective enterprise. 3. The great masses of citizens who will wallow perpetually in collective economic vassalage.

It ought to be easily discernible to those of us who for one reason or another have supported collectivist doctrines in the last seven-year period that the practice of collectivism cannot cure the economic ills of this industrial age. This economy is geared to the methods of production which were in practice in Montezuma's collective slave empire, which existed at the time Columbus discovered America.

The Post Impressionist

Mr. Haight's Spelling

Readable—that's the best anyone can say about my handwriting. True, The Post's proofreaders have another word for it, but that's another story. Our penmanship teacher once said, "Anyone can learn to write well," so I gritted my teeth and made my share of those slanting circles and those lines, horizontal, vertical and on the bias. Somehow there wasn't an ounce of Spencerian in my make up. Come to think of it, since the first Haight stopped using an "X" there hasn't been a penman, or penwoman, for that matter, in the family—except by marriage.

My penmanship teacher gave up on me early. Scanning my paper, resembling a cross between a wind-blown bob and last month's stock chart, she shook her head and said, "You will go through life scribbling your way."

She was right. However, through the years, I have found that a check bounces just as high if one pecks, scratches and smears it or swings, shades and blots it. That, also is another story.

After I had scribbled through elementary school, Dr. Gentnor, in whose drugstore I jerked sodas at rush hours, said he would make me permanent. However, my Pop gave me a lecture on the advantages of higher education. The following September found me enrolled at old Business High School for the two-year course.

I was worse at shorthand than at longhand. I could get the hieroglyphics on paper all right, but I couldn't read them. Ingenuity and a keen memory allowed me to stall my way into the third semester. There I anchored, because the shorthand teacher stopped dictating from Homer's Odyssey and began adlibbing.

My Pop couldn't read my longhand or my shorthand, but he didn't even have to put on his glasses to see that teacher's string of "D's" on my report.

Uncle Sam took me under his wing. I was sworn in as a messenger boy in a Government department, determined to work myself up to President. I made myself as useful as possible and in a few months was put in charge of a bicycle. It was my duty to deliver communications between departments.

I labeled this job a stepping stone. I was waiting for a package in the chief clerk's office one day. He wasn't there and his secretary left the room. I made sure that I wasn't observed and seated myself at the big desk. For a few minutes I was an imaginary cog in the United States Government. From that day on, my ambition was to become the chief clerk's private messenger. That job, among the boys at the department, was next to being named third baseman for the Washington Ball Club.

One day I had an armful of packages when I met the chief clerk. I almost dropped through the floor when he said, "Mr. Haight, let one of the other boys take care of those packages. I want you to work for me this afternoon."

I was headed for the bigtime! I slicked my hair, brightened my shoes and ran to the chief clerk's office.

"Ahem," he said, "Mr. Haight, I want you to address these envelopes. Just write from this list.

My heart sank. I could almost feel myself pedaling the bicycle again. One look at my handwriting was all he needed. Then I played what I thought was an ace.

"I can use the typewriter, sir," I said. "I took typing at school."

"No, I prefer that you write in ink," he replied.

And so I spent the afternoon scribbling, scratching and sweating.

Closing time came and I asked, "Shall I report here in the morning?"

"By all means," said the boss.

"Don't sing at the table," scolded Mom at dinner that evening.

I was an hour early the next morning. When the boss came, several other men were with him, including the captain of the watch, who was in charge of messengers.

"Mr. Haight," it was the boss speaking and looking me in the eyes, "why did you write on that wall downstairs?"

"What wall?" I asked in a bewildered tone.

I saw the wall, the writing and learned the whole story.

With chalk, someone had scribbled, "The chief clerk is a —— ——, a —— and a ——."

And what's more, the writing looked like mine!

The boss had compared the hand with signatures of the messengers. Mine was near enough to make me a suspect. Probably he had a secret ambition to be a detective, for he had me address the envelopes, supplying a list that would make me write several times the letters used in the disparaging sentence.

They did everything but turn me upside down and try to shake the words, "I did it" out of me.

I held out for a week. The country had gone to war, so I decided to let somebody else work up to President. I joined the Navy and set Admiral as my objective.

Some years later I visited my old department and met the chief clerk. After asking me if I won the war, he looked me in the eyes and said, "Bygones are bygones, but tell me, did you write on that wall? Now remember, I will not hold it against you. But the thing has been preying on my mind for a long time. Now once and for all, did you?

Many times I have wished I had answered "yes" just to make him happy, but I didn't.

"Are you sure that you were not feeling ill that day and that you might have done it—say in a sort of sunconscious way?" he asked in pleading tones.

"I couldn't have done it," I replied.

"Why?" he asked.

"Because I never could spell the word 'reprobate,'" I replied.

WALTER HAIGHT.

(Editor's note—Mr. Haight still cannot spell reprobate.)

Fair Enough

Unfair Picketing

ON A RECENT evening in Washington, as Mrs. Roosevelt was about to enter a movie theater for the premiere of the Abe Lincoln show, there was a moment of consternation when it was discovered that the house was being picketed as a protest against a local Jim Crow ordinance or custom. It is my understanding that the picket line was lifted long enough to permit Mrs. Roosevelt to enter.

With the merits of this particular case I will not tangle, knowing too little about them, but I make bold enough to say that picketing has been overdone to the point of abuse and that, by many unfair and contemptuous impositions on the public, the picket line has lost sympathy and authority.

A notorious case was settled recently in Chicago. There a picket line which had been maintained for 6 years at the Edgewater Beach Hotel, on the North Side, was suddenly withdrawn without any explanation to the public. The hotel management had nothing to explain. Umbrella Mike Boyle, the business agent of the Electricians' Union, had issued a strike call back in 1934 as a result of some dispute whose merits never were clearly revealed and had maintained the line day and night, in bitter winter and blistering summer.

PICKETING BECAME an occupation with some of the trudging sentinels, and after some time the line became a joke. Nobody paid any attention to it, and, far from helping the cause of labor, the demonstration degraded into a cheap display of personal power by a professional unioneer and politician. It was a discredit to organized labor, and the final act was an insult to both the rank and file and the public.. Apparently there never was a genuine strike.

The public does have an interest in picket lines. A picket line is an appeal to the public to boycott a place of business on the ground that an employer has dealt unfairly with the workers. That was the old presumption, but it has been discredited in the last few years, and the disinterested individual has been given reason to feel his sympathy has been imposed upon.

The Chicago picket line is said to have cost some union—the exact identity of the union being uncertain—more than $200,000 in wages for pickets. But the scrap ended as mysteriously as it began, with no statement to the public of the merits of the dispute or the basis of the settlement. Moreover, although the public was asked to boycott the Edgewater Beach Hotel on the word of one union boss, in the name of organized labor, members of some unions regularly passed through the lines as though they didn't exist.

Unions now put it up to the individual citizen to determine for himself the merits of every controversy represented by a picket line. But people are too busy for that, and in many cases the union agents are too secretive or too skilled in misrepresentation to permit of a fair understanding.

IT IS NO more unfair to Labor, with a capital L, to patronize an unfair employer than it is to boycott a fair employer whose place has been surrounded with a line of men and women in the prosecution of some jurisdictional row or racket. If a fair employer is picketed his employes suffer, but, worse than that, the customers discover that there are good picket lines and bad ones, and that in some cases anyone who wants to be strictly fair is morally obliged to walk through the line and buy at least a package of cigarettes.

In the Washington theater case the picket line was asking more than most people would be willing to grant. The Jim Crow tradition is not new, and the opening of a new show was no occasion for demanding snap judgment on a problem that has received much thought from the United States Supreme Court. And, anyway, the theater management shouldn't have been made the goat.

If unions and societies can throw picket lines around at will, and if the public doesn't exercise its right to discriminate, the picket line will develop into a blackjack, and this is not to say that it hasn't been used as such many a time ere now.

Books And Things

Voyageur

TSCHIFFELY, the Franco-German-Polish Englishman who lived long in the Argentine and finally rode two ponies across two continents from Buenos Aires to Washington, has been riding again. (You can come close to pronouncing his name if you think of it as Irish—Shiffaly, like shillelagh.) But this time he rode a bucking Ford coupe and pointed his compass south to Patagonia. "This Way Southward" (Nortion, $3.50) tells his story.

He stopped on the way to salute Mancho and Gato, the two little descendants of the Spanish-Arab horses, whom you will remember well if you read "Tschiffely's Ride" when it appeared seven years ago. Gato was 28 and Mancho was 30 when he saw them again, but they had not forgotten him; when he called they answered. Now the Ford makes no such hero for a book as did those two stanch horses; indeed, on some of his most stirring expeditions Mr. Tschiffely left the car behind. But his adventures were hardly less thrilling, and once more Tschiffely underwrites, which makes for satisfying reading in a day when most travel books are grievously overdone.

A "fairly good track"—locally known as picada—leads all the way from Buenos Aires to Rio Gallegos, almost on the Strait of Magellan. It is flat pampas country for the most part, little settled. But in the Chubut Valley, Tschiffely found a welcome with an amazing Welsh colony, founded in 1865 by 153 Welsh patriots who rebelled against the Church of England and the English language and sailed to what was then an Indian-inhabited no-man's-land. Alone among the settlers of Patagonia, these Welshmen avoided Indian hostility, and they still speak only Welsh and Spanish and keep to their old Welsh customs, including an annual choir singing competition—a Patagonian Eisteddfod.

AN AIRPLANE took Tschiffely across the strait to Tierra del Fuego; there he investigated the last of those primitive Indians of whom Felix Riesenberg wrote so eloquently in "Cape Horn." A gentle, dying people, Tschiffely found them; he denies that they were ever cannibals. Indeed, he comes close to saying that the white settlers were more cannibalistic than the Indians. It was not in Tierra del Fuego but in western Patagonia, close to the Andes, that a former rancher proudly showed him a complete set of saddle gear and harness made of the skins of Indians this man had shot; another boasted of poisoning an entire tribe. Tschiffely does not waste time sentimentalizing about the degenerate descendants of the "giant" Indians who once claimed Patagonia as their hunting ground, but he found them as likable as many of their successors.

Seven thousand miles the little Ford chugged before it finally brought Tschiffely safely back to Buenos Aires; the airplane flights and pack-saddle trips were in addition. Tschiffely writes sparely, with a respect for man and for beast and for simple fact, and his story has a genuine dignity.

Balloting Continues In The Soviet Union

Copyright by New York Times

Moscow, Feb. 27.—The election of Community Party officials, which has been going on the past two weeks, will continue for two weeks more throughout Russia.

The Communist Party unit is the "Yacheyka," or cell, which varies greatly in numbers. There are more than 110,000 such units which, therefore, would average in membership about 250 each as the party now totals around 2,750,000, including the candidates.

The officials in question form the "Partkon," or party committee, which averages five persons and a secretary, making a total of some 600,000 officials. The "Partkons" have no president, but their most important figure is the secretary. The secretariat, indeed, is a hierarchy running from minor units right up to the Moscow secretary, Mr. Sherbakoff; the Leningrad secretary, Andrey A. Zhdanoff; the Ukraine secretary, Nikita Khruscheff, and Joseph Stalin himself as general secretary.

Thus the current elections have great importance as involving the whole structure of the Communist Party, which is the backbone of the Soviet regime. The elections must be called primarily because they do not affect the upper ranks of the Communist Party secretariat and system, but only the basic units. But these elections are the most democratic phase of Soviet life because officials everywhere are now being called upon to give an account of their stewardship to their fellow members and electors.

As might be expected, the touchstone by which officials are tested is twofold—faith and works, that ancient combination which perplexed so many zealots from Mohammed to John Knox. At present, as Pravda explained recently in a most complicated but interesting editorial, world events make "works" of cardinal importance, Communist Party officials must get results in the production of goods, prevention of waste, stimulation of the harvest and last, but not least, the development of the nation's defense in all its branches.

But there is also insistent stress upon the need for officials to think right and "estimate the situation correctly," which is faith.

Autarky, 1940 Model

By Dorothy Thompson

Implications For The United States

THERE ARE PHASES of the war which receive little attention in the United States and which are, nevertheless, more important to us than most of the front-page news.

This war, like all wars, is a contest between economies. Germany crumbled in 1918 when she was still occupying France, not because her army had been routed, but because the exhaustion of her resources and the collapse of her finances had broken the morale.

BEFORE THIS WAR began, and in preparation for it, Germany had made a totalitarian economy; that is to say, an economy completely planned and rationed by the state, with the object of maximum production, minimum consumption and highest possible war potential. Without gold—that is, without any fixed medium for international exchange—Germany made her necessary purchases abroad by barter, through the medium of a dozen different kinds of rubber currency.

She bought goods in one market and dumped them in another, regardless of the international price structure, from which she had withdrawn, regardless of any orthodox considerations of profit and loss, only with a view to salvaging from the exchange whatever foreign currency she could. This system demoralized the trade of the orthodox economies to a very appreciable extent, even when it was practiced by Germany alone.

Now the war is forcing Britain and France into the same kind of economy, and this process is being accelerated by the policy of the United States. Here we are constantly being told that we must not "intervene" in European affairs. People do not seem to realize that we cannot make any decision in the economic field without intervening in or influencing the policies of all nations with which we have economic relations.

A GENERATION of Americans brought up on the theory that we entered the last war to save Mr. Morgan's investments had determined that we shall not be dragged into this one by loans and has therefore decided to cut off all credits to belligerent purchasers here. France and Great Britain must therefore make the most drastic efforts to conserve their existing gold resources in this country, limiting purchases here only to those things that they cannot possibly get anywhere else and conducting the rest of their economy along lines almost exactly like that of the Germans.

There seems to be an idea in some circles that if the foreign gold holdings are exhausted the Allies will sue and make a negotiated peace. Some enemies of the Allies hope so and some friends fear so.

But the governments of Britain and France know precisely what they are up against in facing the revolutionary regimes of Hitler and Stalin; they know what a peace would mean. It would not resemble any peace of modern times. The "peace" contemplated by Hitler can be observed in Czecho-Slovakia and Poland, and if Stalin takes Finland we shall see what it means there. It means the setting up of revolutionary governments in defeated countries—defeated whether by arms or by politics—and, under these governments, carrying out the systematic extermination of opposition intellectual leaders and the systematic extermination and deportation of populations themselves. Chamberlain's speech last Saturday was the strongest from the English side yet made in this war.

ONE MAY, and I think should, presume that the Allies will not withdraw from the war for the sake of preserving even the remnants of the capitalist system. They will carry on the war as long as necessary and by whatever means are necessary in the economic field.

If it is necessary to Nazify the economy in order to beat the Nazis, they will do so. This does not mean that France and Britain will "go Nazi." What the average Frenchman and Englishman hates and despises in the Nazis is not the Nazi economy but the Nazi arrogance, brutality and complete transvaluation of all human ideals.

So far as I have seen, no attention has been paid in this country to the four speeches that M. Paul Reynaud, French Minister of Finance, made between September and January and which are published in the London Economist of January 20.

With complete candor and clarity he informed the French nation that for the period of the war they would have to accept the "Moloch" State in the place of what he called the "Father Christmas" State of the previous French new deal.

That Moloch State he describes as an "Ogre," a "Monster," but he is under no illusions: The Ogre must help France to win the war, even though accepted with admirably lucid awareness, natural repugnance and the intention that it shall be temporary. The long-continued reign of the "Father Christmas" State, which disordered French finances and "weakly allowed its citizens to believe that wealth came from it and not from them," makes the acceptance of the "Ogre" the more inevitable.

And the contemplation of the drying up of credits pushes the process further. For with all the gold in the world eventually accumulating in the United States, which has decreed that it will only accept gold (cash) as payments, France and Britain, whose currencies are now interchangeable and whose purchases are pooled, will be forced, willy nilly, to go into a totalitarian and barter economy.

NOW, THIS is bound to have very serious repercussions on the economy of the United States. The governments of Europe—of practically all of Europe—will offer us the same sort of ruthless competition in all the markets of the world that Germany has been offering, not only with their own goods but, like the Germans, with other peoples' goods. We look at a very small spot on the map called Europe and even consider "writing it off," not realizing that this little spot controls the continent of Africa, a large part of Asia and the Near East, Australia, and has far greater economic and political influence in South America than we do.

Our economy, with free prices and high labor costs, and sticking in international trade to gold—of which we are the only holders—will have to try to exist in a world of totalitarian economies based on controlled wages, government fixed and adjusted prices, currencies managed internationally as well as nationally, and trade by barter.

When the cycle that has been started is completed this country will be up against it. Just as our tariff and lending policy after the war directly contributed to the economic collapse of Europe and of our own economy, so our gold and cash-payment policy now is hastening the transition to economic totalitarianism, and most American business men today are as blind as they were in 1929

IN THE LIGHT of the facts, the re-affirmation by Congress of Mr. Hull's reciprocal trade treaties is nothing more than the affirmation of a Platonic ideal. It may one day be possible of realization, provided the Allies win the war and provided we are prepared to be generous with our gold in an unparalleled manner. Otherwise, we may as well dig it up and make an all-gold obelisk memorial for Franklin D. Roosevelt.

It will not in the last least help us to adjust our own New Deal "Father Christmas" State to the realities that will confront us within a foreseeable period. Nor will it be possible, even in the event of an Allied victory, to reform their totalitarian economies without our participation and aid.

If the Germans and Russians win the war, Europe will not even want to make the transition. It will want to break us.

It is really fantastic that the most conservative middle class-dominated Nation in the world, namely, the United States, should, as though pushed by some anonymous and invisible historical force, be contributing by all its acts to the crisis of all free economies, and therewith to the crisis of the middle class, abroad and at home.

The technical problems involved, if one desires to overcome the worst effects of what is developing, are too complex for discussion by a columnist who is not an expert. But the essential facts are not at all complex. They are simple. It is extremely important that they should be contemplated and realized, otherwise this country is going to be overtaken one of these days by a situation for which it is neither mentally nor morally prepared.

The constant bleating that we must turn our eyes and ears away from Europe lest we may be involved in war is really beneath the level of American intelligence. Unless we very carefully consider all we do in the light of the world economic realities we are likely to be plunged not into war but into depression and chaos

Our real danger, as far as war is concerned, is that, under those conditions, war may seem to a great many people the lesser of two evils.

The Great Round-Up

By Ernest K. Lindley

Roosevelt The Trustee

THE ATTACKS on the President for rounding up delegates to the 1940 Democratic National Convention are based on two separate suppositions. He is responsible for the round-up; there is no mistaking that. Publicly he is acquiescent. Behind the scenes he is the directing hand.

The two separate suppositions are:

1. That he intends to run for a third term.

2. That he does not want to run for a third term, but seeks one or both of the following objectives:

A. To nominate a ticket satisfactory to him.

B. To conserve his influence in foreign affairs.

Perhaps between these two lies a third supposition: that he doesn't know yet whether he wants to run again and wants to postpone a decision until the convention meets.

WHICHEVER SUPPOSITION is taken there isn't much real ground for criticism from persons acquainted with the machinery of practical politics. Suppose Roosevelt does want a third term—which I do not believe. Probably almost any President can bring about his own renomination by manipulating the party levers. Herbert Hoover brought about his in 1932, although few Republican politicians thought he had much of a chance to win in November. But no President can bring about his own election by such means, not even in these heavy-spending days—especially when, as in Roosevelt's case, he has espoused the cause of economy.

The practical politicians feel confident Roosevelt will not run again unless he is sure he will win. Some who are advocating a third term are by no means certain that he can win again. They think his running would help their local and State tickets by mustering independent and progressive votes, but they don't know how the third-term issue would affect the President himself. They are now for a third term for precisely the same reason that Tom Pendergast's Kansas City organization wrapped itself in the New Deal trappings when it wanted to beat off a clean-government movement a few years ago. As for Roosevelt, they expect him to be able to calculate his own chances of winning a third term, if he wants one.

If rank and file Democrats do not want a third term they have a chance to say so in most of the States where they have any say at all. Garner has offered himself up as the rallying point for the opposition in Illinois, Wisconsin and Oregon, and he may enter the primaries in other States.

THE VOTERS who will not have a chance to express themselves in advance of the convention, either in the great majority of States which have no Presidential primaries or in most of those which have them, are the independent, migratory, progressive voters. For eight years they have been for Roosevelt, almost unanimously. The Democratic Party cannot win in 1940 without them. The mechanism for choosing delegates to the 1940 Democratic National Convention affords them no chance to express their preference, except in a handful of States.

Suppose Roosevelt's objective is to nominate a ticket satisfactory to himself. Suppose that he would like to nominate Robert H. Jackson, Fiorello LaGuardia, or Henry A. Wallace. What chance would any of them stand in a convention controlled by the regular Democratic organizations, with or without the aid of primaries? None. LaGuardia is not even a nominal Democrat.

IN THE PRESIDENT'S own stable are only three regular Democrats with potential vote-getting ability.

First is McNutt. McNutt so far has been unable to convince most of the New Dealers that he is one of their kind. Moreover, his candidacy is under the cloud of a Federal income tax investigation in Indiana. Two weeks ago it was reported that this inquiry was about to be completed with a clean bill of health for all the principals. The reports now are different: that one of McNutt's chief political aides, who handled large amounts of money for the Two Percent Club, is in danger of indictment. If that is so, the McNutt candidacy will be washed up, regardless of his own record. At any rate, McNutt can get nowhere until, or unless, his chief political aides are cleared by the internal revenue investigators who have been turned loose in Indiana.

Second is Farley, handicapped by religion and by his reputation for being a professional politician of conservative slant.

Third is Cordell Hull, whose reputation is bound up with the conduct of foreign affairs. Roosevelt could not reject him if he were the favorite of the convention. Roosevelt might come around to Hull. But if he did so, many of his progressive supporters would feel that he had betrayed them.

Whatever the President's purpose—and I believe it is to conserve his influence abroad and to nominate a satisfactory ticket (minus himself)—the rounding up of delegates for him is difficult to criticize from the viewpoint of the independent, progressive voters. Their only hope—which may be nurtured in vain—is that he will exercise his trusteeship to bring about the nomination of a ticket pledged to a vigorous continuing attack on our problems at home, and not to adventuring on the far side of the Pacific or Atlantic oceans.

THE HYPNOTIST
"Like a certain species of wasp he paralyzes his prey before devouring it." See Barnet Nover's article on the Scandinavian crisis below

When Fear Governs

By Barnet Nover

The Many And The Few

THERE IS a species of wasp, the eumenidae, that paralyzes its intended victims before devouring them.

In this particular, Europe's dictators are successful imitators of Nature, with Adolf Hitler the outstanding example.

Hitler has practiced this art at home and abroad for seven years. When he became chancellor in 1933, the Nazi Party was still a minority. It could have been held in check by those who were destined to become its victims. By the time some of them got around to realizing it, however—witness Hermann Rauschning and Fritz Thyssen—it was altogether too late. The damage had been done.

With the help of the Nationalists, Hitler destroyed the Communists. Soon after, the Socialists and Liberals suffered the same fate. The turn of his quondam allies, the Nationalists, came last, but it came.

By 1936 the Fuehrer transferred this technique to the international sphere and with the same amazing success. Austria, Czecho-Slovakia and Poland met the same fate that had previously been visited on the opposition parties in Germany. Each, in turn, was paralyzed before it was destroyed.

THRE IS no longer the slightest mystery regarding Hitler's technique. One need not burrow into the turgid rhetoric of "Mein Kampf" to find a clue. One need only examine the record of the past seven years. Yet surprisingly enough, Hitler's technique of intimidating into inaction those he has singled out for destruction, has not yet lost its potency. It still operates, with the very fact that the potential victims are so numerous making it all the easier to paralyze them one by one.

The Finnish situation provides the best recent example of this technique in action.

Tomorrow will mark the beginning of the fourth month of the Russo-Finnish War. For three months the Finns, vastly outnumbered though they are, have managed to prevent their small nation from being overrun.

But they are beginning to give way. The surrender of the Koivisto Islands with their great coastal batteries, may be, as the Finnish high command insists it is, only a strategic withdrawal to a more defensible inner line. But unless the Finns can secure additional man power and additional supplies the abandonment of the outer defenses must, sooner or later, be followed by the abandonment of the inner strongholds. That has been clear for some time

WE KNOW what the destruction of Finland's independence would mean to the Finns. The Finns know it, too. That is why they have been willing to chance the apparently hopeless odds against them. But what would the destruction of Finland's independence mean to the other Scandinavian countries, to the Allies, to the rest of the shrinking democratic world?

The answer is that it would constitute a tremendously serious blow to all those nations. Nor do they delude themselves otherwise. The statements made by Allied leaders shows that it is much more than admiration for Finnish heroism which has caused them to ponder the question of rushing aid to that beleaguered country before it is too late. The discussions in Norway and Sweden and the vast amount of voluntary aid they have sent show that they are even more acutely aware of the dangerous consequences likely to follow a Finnish defeat. But thus far the Allies, like the Scandinavian kingdoms, have been paralyzed into relative inaction, of which, however, in view of our own stand, no American is in a position to criticize.

IF FINLAND goes under it is more than a mere probability that Russia and Germany between them will spread their tentacles over the rest of Scandinavia. It is a certainty. And the loss of prestige which it will mean for the Allies, regardless of whatever justifiable excuses they may be able to offer for the inadequacy of their assistance to Finland, will be of very serious moment to them.

But why are Finland's supporters paralyzed or, at least, partially paralyzed? It is not Russia which is feared, not after three months of Finnish resistance. The fear which has inhibited action is the fear of Germany. That fear has prevented the Scandinavian countries from acting as a unit although, as a unit, they possess not inconsiderable force. The same fear has also kept the Allies from rushing in to Finland's assistance. For the Allies have been acting on the assumption that they must husband all their strength to meet a German assault in the spring, an assault which may not occur.

One may ask why Germany has apparently interposed no objection to the dispatch, say, by Sweden of volunteer aid to Finland which, on a per capita basis, is far greater than the assistance that country has received from any other nation.

The answer probably is that it is not Swedish aid to Finland which Hitler fears, but the creation of a Scandinavian alliance which, weak as it would be vis-a-vis the Reich, would be sufficiently strong in view of the certain assurance it would have of Allied backing, to defy him.

He cannot, with the blockade bearing down on Germany, risk such defiance. So he has applied against Denmark and Norway and Sweden the old technique of intimidation. He is demonstrating anew that his greatest ally is the fear which paralyzes action, fear which separates one victim from another so that each can be devoured in its turn.

Jim Farley is in Miami Beach and, if he plays the races, we can't see how he can skip Presidential, High Fidelity, Chip In or Handiboy.

J. Edgar Hoover is there, too. Two stables have named horses after him, but presumably he can't escape a hunch on Sly Heels, Scarer, Bertillon, Dodger, and Yes Or No.

Washington couldn't tell a lie, which seems hard to understand in view of the fact that he lived away back in the days when it was easy.

Belated Opinion

This department has at last got around to seeing "Gone With the Wind," and couldn't sit through to the end. It is colossal, vivid, beautiful, splendidly cast and flawlessly directed. It will make millions and it is setting new box-office records. For the first two hours it was to this writer the most stirring picture he ever saw. But he found the last two hours unnecessarily morbid and depressing.

Death scene upon death scene, tragedy upon tragedy and the much ado about those two all-time champion he and she brats, Rhett and Scarlett, are not, to this column's way of thinking, ideal entertainment. It was like attending six funerals in one day, with intermittent visits with two very unpleasant people in their most unpleasant moods.

Manhattan a Winter Dirge for Night Clubs; Grace Moore to Open Small Music School

FATALITIES have been heavy among our town's night clubs this winter, especially in the Broadway belt. A few places have done mighty well; others have starved noisily, turned up their toes and passed away.

A situation in itself is John D. Rockefeller's magnificent place atop the R. C. A. Building, known to song and story as the Rainbow Room.

It is no secret to anyone that the lovely room is not an enormous money-maker, but no one expects it to be. It does very nicely from the management's point of view, and what more does anyone in that quite insane business expect?

What is more important and to the point is that the Rainbow Room is a great prestige-builder for the entire Rockefeller development, the marvelous town within a town. Anyone who has ever visited the room, whether one of our citizens or a visitor, wants to go back again. Its location is unique in the world, the view from its lounge windows is breathtaking and the entertainment is always pleasant. It was there that we first heard Alec Templeton, the pianist now famous on the radio, and the Rainbow Room gave Sheila Barrett, the mimic, her first fine show-case. All in all, it is hard to picture New York's night life without the Rainbow Room as a top-flight supper club.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—One of our best friends in town is Sam Jaffe, the actor, first famous on the stage here as Kringelein in "Grand Hotel" and later seen in several films. But Sam is not only an excellent actor—he was a mathematical wizard in school and his heart really lies in music. Now I hear he has composed a rondo for the piano which will have its first performance on the radio in March by another of our best friends, Effie Kalisz. Looks like our best friends are really getting together as winter begins to peter out. And high time, too!

With all the talk these days of Benny Goodmans and other swing kings, few of us really remembered that the greatest popularizer of the saxophone was Rudy Wiedoeft, who taught Rudy Vallee years ago and whose name Vallee borrowed. A few years ago he was playing sax in the big orchestra at the Radio City Music Hall and then he turned to teaching. He passed away the other day, another famed pioneer in popular music almost forgotten—save by such men as Vallee.

Furniture 'Soots' Passe, Women Turn Discerning

The trend now toward open stock furniture is making the lady with a house into more of a connoisseur. When she had to buy a "soot" of furniture, she took the assortment she got and liked it. Now she can buy piece by piece and that takes more discernment. She's likely to find herself wanting fewer and better pieces, and she is probably going to want to get away from that too-woody effect of a room crowded with furniture.

The ulholstered bed is finding a place for itself in this sort of ensembling and so is the small love seat and the chaise longue, which add so much comfort to a bedroom. Then in addition, a capacious chest or better still two chests that fit together and make a single wide piece with a large mirror over it is an excellent choice as the main piece of furniture in the small bedroom. A pair of bedside chests or cabinets, because they have more storage space than tables, and a dressing table with mirror—these are additional pieces of importance in the small room.

A room like this, which appealed to us recently, was very fresh looking by virtue of its crisp color scheme. White walls and a green rug made a smart setting for bone white enameled chests, modern, with big gilt drawer pulls. Then an over-all figured chintz in a leafy pattern of green on white was selected for the curtains and for the upholstered headboard. The top of the spread was plain white with a full flounce of the green chintz. A pair of small slipper chairs were covered with the same figured chintz.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Unhappily Married, Her Husband Wanting Divorce, Wife Objects to Separation; Asks Advice

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am 36 years old and have been married for 10 years. My husband is 35 years old. My life with him has not been what I had expected. His quick temper and indulgence in drink have brought me to the point where I cannot any longer care for him as I once did. Recently he asked me for a divorce, saying that he was in love with a girl of 17 who is still in high school.

I was on the verge of saying I would give him his freedom, and then I thought of the children. Surely we owe them something. I feel that a divorce would bring unhappiness to them, now or later; and that it would only ruin the girl's life, too. I can't go on like this and I don't want a separation. I have read your excellent advice to others and I feel that you can help me in some way. BUS DRIVER'S WIFE.

DEAR B. D. W.: It is asking a little too much of me to find a painless solution of your problem. You say you "can't go on like this," and yet you "don't want a separation." But if life with your husband is growing ever more difficult,—as I can imagine it must be, since he drinks, rages and philanders,—then obviously divorce or an arrangement for separate maintenance of yourself and the children is the most effective means of insulating your feelings against continual laceration.

However, in reaching a constructive decision, you must determine which is more important to your peace of mind: (a) escape from the humiliating uncertainty of life with your husband; or (b) the knowledge that your children are being well cared for, up to the limit of their parents' joint ability to provide them what they need.

In staying with your husband, very likely you would be guaranteeing material benefits to the children that they would have to forego in the event of separation or divorce. And I am inclined to think that you want to stay with him, for reasons of personal sentiment, in spite of the pain his conduct inflicts.

Therefore, I believe the question of "What to do?" is one for you alone to decide. The business of adjusting yourself to the circumstances attendant upon a decision either way will not be easy. You are confronted by a choice of two evils, in a sense, and it is for you to say which is the lesser evil M. H.

When Girl Refuses Dates, Should Boy Ask Why?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a boy 17. About 15 months ago I took a girl from my junior high graduating class to the school dance. Since then I've come to know her and her family very well. Her parents have met mine and have indicated that they approve of me. I have become very fond of her and because I am financially able to do so, would like to show her a good time

The first time I asked for a date, she said she could not go out until she was 16. That was to be some months off. During this interval, I stopped at her home many times on my way to play golf, tennis, etc., and she went along with me. We had many enjoyable times and I was invited, in turn, to her family's shore home and other places.

Now that she is 16, I have asked her for a number of dates to dances or shows and she has refused. My question is this—If I have a fault in her eyes, how may I find it out and correct it? Or if I am disliked, how can I learn the truth? When girls refuse dates, is it correct to ask the reason? IRVIN.

Explanation in Order Between Good Friends

DEAR IRVIN: Since the girl liked you well enough in the past to go with you to a school prom, and to share (and, apparently, enjoy) your companionship casually for afternoons of golf, tennis, etc., I think you would be amply justified in asking her pointblank why she won't make dates with you for shows and dancing. Tell her what you have said here, namely: that if you have faults in her eyes, you want to know what they are, that you may correct them; or if you are disliked, you want to know it, so that you can take yourself off and not bother her in future.

There is a possibility that she has a "crush" on some other chap, and hesitates to place herself on record as being your "girl," lest in so doing she reduces her chances of capturing his fancy. Or it may be that she recognizes and shrinks from your pronounced sentimental interest in her. She may consider you a good sort, a nice fellow and fun at sports, but definitely not a boy she would want to hold hands with, for instance. In refusing to encourage your interest, she may be honestly trying to play fair with you.

In very kindness to you, she cannot volunteer unflattering information as to why she declines your invitations. Therefore, it is up to you manfully to solicit a bill of particulars. If you assure her that she would be doing you a real favor in casting light on the mystery, I am confident she will oblige—and thereafter you may continue to be friends, even though she steadfastly declines to be your sweetheart. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

The Gentler Sex

By MALVINA LINDSAY

Editor's Note—A reader of The Gentler Sex has taken exception—in verse—to a recent column which criticized the tendency of human beings to go around in indivisible two's, three's, four's, etc. Here is the protest:

In Defense Of 'Inseparables'

I.

I ask just "Why?" you should go alone,
And let the boredom eat to the bone,
Cocking the ear to the alien guff,
Put out by a piece of New York stuff?

II.

Or, worser yet, four-cornered Spig,
That makes the whole day's social twig,
Grow, bent, to a tree of obscure jokes,
Known only to Greasers and other blokes?

III.

Or, indeed, if that were not enough,
To be led for two hours by the cuff,
To meet and chat with Madame's daughter,
While the luckier guests drink the cordial waters?

IV.

Or being stuck in an isolate chair,
While the Colonel orates of his spavined mare,
And the homely relation from Indiana,
Explains the fate of grandma's piano?

V.

While all along, and all the while,
The anti-social couples smile,
Drink to each other with their eyes,
And also drink their Scotch and ryes.

VI.

And when the party's three-fourths done,
Say "Rilly, rilly, we must run—"
Leaving the Solitaire, tired as tucker,
To drive the dowagers home, the sucker . . .

VII.

Oh, no, oh, no, Malvina dear,
My little helpmeet is my peer,
And if there must be tea to weather
We two will grimly go together.
C. B.

Apology

The editor of this column stands corrected,
The general rule should at times be deflected,
Certainly no one should attend any large teas,
Except in football formation or as a twin Siamese.

Fashion Art Self-Taught

PERHAPS you have already felt the lure of a fashion art career. But, because your first attempts at drawing turned out badly, you've given up your dream.

You can learn to draw fashions beautifully—in a simple home course! You may have been baffled by the apparent elaborateness of fashion figures. Trying to sketch a smartly costumed movie star, for instance, you couldn't think where to begin.

Easily you learn to draw such figures in simple steps. Charts show you how to proceed.

First you construct your figure. You draw vertical and horizontal lines as guide posts, then you ask yourself such questions as "What is the slant of the shoulders and line? What is the slant of the nose in relation to the vertical line?"

Working this way, the right lines almost draw themselves. You are helped too by knowing rules of figure proportion. For instance, the length of the body is usually 7½ times the length of the head.

In the next steps you add details of face and dress. Studying pen technique, wash, you learn the trick of drawing lovely fabrics with a few strokes.

Soon you are making professional looking fashion illustrations. Time then to show your work at department stores, advertising agencies—the many other places that employ fashion artists.

Our 40-page booklet, "Home Course in Fashion Art," shows in simple steps how to draw the fashion figure. Has 138 illustrations—including charts based on the famous Da Vinci rules of figure proportion. Explains principles of light and shade, wash, rendering of furs, fabrics. Shows how to make your work smart, salable.

Send 15 cents in coins for our booklet, "Home Course in Fashion Art, to The Washington Post, Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address, and the name of booklet.

Silver Leather Sofa

Leather in its dressier moods can keep up with even the most ambitious fabrics these days. In a recent exhibition was seen formal sofa upholstered in silver leather finished with leath fringe and tassel drawn through crystal spheres. Another sofa in coral leather was intricately tufted, while a Chippendale chair in emerald green leather had great style.

Royalty Goes In for Good Figures

Queen and Two Duchess Noted For Head Carriage

By Ida Jean Kain

TO HAVE an even chance of qualifying as one of the world's best-dressed, a woman is presupposed to enjoy an annual clothes budget of $100,000. That lets most of us out!

Aside from this, she must have a highly developed style sense. It is an ingrained feminine belief that having the money would take care of that! But there are additional requisites which have no connection with silver spoons and silver foxes—an elegant posture and a good figure!

DUCHESS OF KENT

QUEEN ELIZABETH

It is significant that the women who tied for first place on this year's list of the ten best dressed have lovely figures. They are the Duchesses of Kent and Windsor. It is generally known that the Duchess of Windsor has a horror of fat and is athletically inclined. And the Duchess of Kent receives recognition as a style dictator partly because of her slim attractiveness.

Both the duchesses have regal postures, but not so regal as that of Queen Elizabeth, farther along on the list, who is on parade practically all the time and therefore acutely conscious of the necessity for holding herself beautifully.

As we analyze the postures of these women, their perfection seems to originate with the carriage of the head. At any rate, that is an excellent starting point—most women do not carry their heads elegantly!

Good head carriage is extremely important. When the head is perfectly balanced and held erect on the top of the spine, the lower abdominal wall is reflexly contracted. This pulls the hips in, the chest up.

Test Head Carriage

Sit down before a triple vision mirror and test for yourself the effect of the head carriage. Pile your curls on top of your head so that you can see what you are doing. That line connecting the head and the shoulders in back should be as straight as possible. When this straight line is achieved,

Regal Posture Is Aid in Making Best Dressed List

you will notice that the chest is lifted in a beautiful line, and that the lower abdominal wall is pulled up. Incidentally, when the head is perfectly balanced on the spine, you hold the chin level and there is no sagging of the throat in front—you have a beautifully chiseled throatline!

Try to put this theory into practice: When you go out for a walk, hold the head up, as if a string were attached to the very tip-top of the crown of the head, pulling you upward. This not only gives you a beautiful figure, but a much more buoyant walk.

If you will keep at it, you can train your muscles so that beautiful posture is a reflex action. Then it will be so simple! And even though you do not qualify as one of the ten best-dressed, you will certainly stand out from the crowd!

Glamour for Girls With Glasses

Hollywood, Calif.—Jane Wyman, wearing spectacles for her role in "Brother Rat and a Baby," proves that girls who wear glasses, if they follow a few make-up and fashion rules, can be as attractive as their unspectacled sisters.

Wear the hair completely off the brow and away from the ears. Jane's long bob was brushed up from her face, off the forehead in soft waves and no top curls.

Eyebrows should follow the line of the glasses—bird wing brows will never pass—and lashes should be heavily made up, especially for evening. Don't put mascara on the lower lashes.

Shadows are cast by eyeglasses so use eyeshadow sparingly, match it perfectly to eyes and spread over the lids only.

Never wear hats that hug the forehead. All of Jane's chapeaux are halos or turbans. Chic sailors exposing hair and brow on one side are good, or profile berets.

Refrain from decorating hair with bunches of flowers or plumes. A simple bow is permissible.

Keep a neckline simple. No ruffles, heavy necklaces or earrings. But do highlight hair and eyes with fabric matching beads or sequins.

And now that small lorgnettes with jeweled handles and in colors and novel shapes to intrigue the boy friend are on the market for evening wear there is no reason why girls who wear glasses can't pass everyone by in glamour.

Jeanette MacDonald Charms Guests At Mrs. Willebrandt's Gay Reception

Beautiful Star of Stage and Screen Receives Endless Line at Sulgrave Club; Speaks at Women's Press Club Luncheon

By Hope Ridings Miller

MUCH PRETTIER off the screen than on is Jeanette MacDonald (Mrs. Gene Raymond), singing star of the stage, radio and films, who was feted at a large reception given yesterday afternoon by Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt.

HOPE R. MILLER

For two hours, the guest of honor and her hostess (I'd say they both were glamour girls), received a seemingly endless line of guests that filed up the stairway and into the reception hall of the Sulgrave Club. A number in the throng already knew Miss MacDonald, having met her in California or New York. Others were seeing her face to face for the first time. But all seemed to agree that she should sue the Hollywood cameras for portraying her several degrees less beautiful than she is. And you certainly can't say that about many film celebrities.

Mrs. Willebrandt and her guest were an attractive picture as they received the long line, stopping it ever so often for rather lengthy chats with special friends. The hostess was gowned in a trim black frock, accented with an embroidered white pique collar and pocket edgings to match. On her shoulder were a couple of orchids sent by Gene Raymond, husband of the honor guest. Miss MacDonald was smartly turned out in a two-toned frock, fashioned with a floor-length black skirt, and a powder blue blouse, softly draped and made with long tight sleeves. A matching black hat, postillion effect, with a blue looped bow on the front further enhanced the becoming ensemble.

Rep. Martin Is Center of Attention

Centering the spotlight almost as much as the hostess and the guest of honor was Representative Joseph W. Martin, jr., who could take hardly a step without being stopped by a flock of friends. Incidentally, when he went down the line, Miss MacDonald told him she was sure she had seen him somewhere. "Your face seems so familiar," she added.

"It may be a lot more so, after 1940," somebody whispered on down the line.

Senator Arthur Capper was another who stopped the line a couple of extra minutes in order to chat with Miss MacDonald and the hostess. Others who could plead guilty on the same account were Senator William H. King, former Attorney General Homer S. Cummings, who arrived with Mr. and Mrs. William Stanley, and Representative and Mrs. Frank Buck, of California.

Getting his share of attention was Mrs. Willebrandt's father, David William Walker, who seemed to know just everybody in the crowd. Representative Caroline O'Day, who took her turn at pouring, was another who was completely surrounded by friends.

Assistant Attorney General Thurman Arnold was among those coming in for the latter half of the party. Mrs. Arnold was there earlier to assist at the tea table, and was trimly attired in a gray wool frock with a pale blue snatch of hat, titled at a becoming angle.

Judge Harron Among the Guests

Judge Marion J. Harron, of the Board of Tax Appeals, was seen chatting with Mrs. Carl Lomen, who was joined presently by Mr. Lomen . . . Justice and Mrs. Justin Miller were popular guests, as were Mr. and Mrs. Joshua Evans, jr., the latter of whom recently returned from a trip to Puerto Rico . . . Mr. and Mrs. Wade H. Ellis chatted with friends on all sides . . . Mr. and Mrs. Thad Brown were glimpsed in the throng; as were Mrs. Claude Pepper, Senator and Mrs. Lister Hill, Mr. and Mrs. Emil Hurja, Mrs. Morris Sheppard, Byron and Baroness von Pagenhardt, the latter of whom had on a tricky petal covered hat—cutest thing I've seen this season. Mme. Irimescu, wife of the Rumanian Minister, mingled with the other guests after she had finished assisting at the tea table.

The latter, incidentally, was a symphony in white. A low bouquet of white chrysanthemums, tulips, roses and stock was flanked by clusters of tall white tapers in silver holders. Among guests I saw gathered near the tea table were Mrs. Warren Austin, Mr. and Mrs. Eldon King, talking with Mrs. Cloyd Heck Marvin; Mr. and Mrs. George Maurice Morris, Mrs. Stanley K. Hornbeck, Mr. and Mrs. Emil Hurja, Dr. L. S. Rowe, Mrs. Clarence Lea, Assistant Attorney General Samuel O. Clark, Mrs. Howard Sutherland, and Mrs. Bruce Smith, who has just returned from Florida.

Captivates Crowd At Press Fete

Earlier yesterday, Miss MacDonald came off with flying colors at one of the biggest luncheons of the Women's National Press Club this season. Looking like a fashion picture, she was trimly turned out in a rosewood velour and crepe suit, worn with a maching plumed hat that blended with her reddish hair.

Although she declared that she is "not the speech-making type," she talked easily on a variety of subjects and answered questions ranging all the way from her professional career to her private life.

Her first public appearance was at the age of 3, when she sang the "Glory" song in Sunday School, and then started the applause for herself. The struggle for a career has been difficult, she implied; and has been as much a matter of work as of talent.

This bit of autobiography came to light as she answered a number of questions put to her by the press women and their guests. Asked later if, in her opinion, Hollywood is as infested with Communists as Representative Martin Dies seems to think, Miss MacDonald said there were a few radicals in the film colony—but not many. "As at any focal point, there are some belligerents," she continued, "but they are no more numerous than in any other community."

Weight Control No Problem

Keeping slender is no problem for Miss MacDonald—it's natural. But the fact that she eats only one meal on each day a concert is scheduled may have something to do with her weight. She also goes entirely off the record an entire day before a concert so nobody need try to see her before 8:30 p. m. tonight when she begins her concert at Constitution Hall.

Among guests of club members who attended the luncheon were Mrs. Pat Harrison, Mrs. Sol Bloom, Mrs. Frank Buck, Mrs. William D. Byron, Mrs. Lansdale Sasscer, Miss Bessie Christian, Miss Reba Doughton, Miss Charlotte King, Mrs. Florence Kerr, Mrs. T. Q. Donaldson and Mrs. Robert Whitney Imbrie.

Cabero Honors Col. Medina

The Chilean Ambassador and Senora de Cabero entertained at dinner last evening in honor of the Minister of War and Navy of Venezuela, Col. Isais Medina. Earlier he had been guest at a luncheon of the Mexican Envoy, Dr. Francisco Castillo Najera. The colonel will leave this morning after an extensive round of entertaining.

Guests last evening at the Chilean Embassy were the Venezuelan Ambassador and Senora de Escalante, the Secretary of the Navy, Charles Edison (Mrs. Edison is ill); the Chief of Staff of the Army and Mrs. George Marshall, the Chief of Naval Operations and Mrs. Harold Stark, the Venezuelan Counselor and Senora de Fombona Pachano, the Chilean Naval Attache and Senora de Cortez and the Military Attache and Senora de Alvarez, Maj. Alfredo Jurado, aid to Col. Medina; Senora Alberto de Cabero, jr., and Mrs. Christina Michels.

The Venezuelan Envoy and the Ecuadorean Ambassador, Capt. Colon Eloy Alfaro, were ranking guests at Dr. Castillo Najera's luncheon. The others—there were ten in all—included members of the Mexican and Venezuelan staffs.

Mrs. Baxter Gives Party

Mrs. Lewis B. Baxter was hostess at a tea yesterday for her daughter, Mrs. Alan B. Mills, the former Miss Louise Baxter, who was a bride of last December. The party took place in her apartment at 2311 Connecticut avenue.

Assisting at a tea table decked with tulips and pink snapdragons were several friends of Mrs. Mills, among them the Misses Betty Crane, Betty Burrell, Jessica Johnson and Mrs. E. S. Collins. The hostess wore a black and pink spring print and her daughter had chosen gray crepe with a corsage of gardenias.

Mr. and Mrs. Baxter will leave the end of the week for a stay in Florida.

Mrs. Truxtun Beale Honors the Robertis

Decatur House, gleaming in "party dress," was the scene of a small tea yesterday afternoon when Mrs. Truxtun Beale entertained for the retiring Secretary of the Italian Embassy and Countess Roberti.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss entertained at dinner last night for the couple. They will leave tomorrow for Mexico.

Mrs. Villaret At Home Friday To Paris Friends

Mrs. Eugene Villaret, wife of Lieut. Col. Villaret, will give a small "at home" Friday afternoon at her residence, 2550 Massachusetts avenue northwest, in honor of Mrs. Laurence V. Benet. Mrs. Villaret and her husband spent six years in Paris, where Mrs. Benet lived for a long period, and among guests Friday will be other friends from Paris days.

The hostess will be assisted by Mme. Burja, wife of the Yugoslav Military Attache; Mme. Petrescu, wife of the Rumanian Military Attache; Mme. B. Kleijn Molekamp, wife of the Commercial Counselor of the Netherlands Legation, and Mrs. Lee Murphy.

Party Honors Mrs. Harlow

Mrs. M. B. Berryhill and her nephew, Willis Ballinger, gave a cocktail party yesterday afternoon at the Kennedy-Warren in honor of Mrs. Jean Harlow, mother of the movie star.

Mrs. Harlow expects to extend her visit to Washington for a week or two. She came here last month.

Pastorizas Give Independence Day Party for Staff

In lieu of a large reception, which they were forced to postpone, the Minister of the Dominican Republic and Senora de Pastoriza invited members of the staff in for a few toasts in champagne to celebrate the independence day of their country.

Having just recently changed the legation from Sixteenth street to 2101 Connecticut avenue, the apartment is still in the moving state. So the Minister had to give up plans for a reception. He hopes to give it later.

Judge and Mrs. Letts Hosts to Visitors

Mrs. Madison Letts, of St. Joseph, Mo., and her daughter, Miss Marguerite Letts, who arrived last week for the wedding Saturday of their cousin, Miss Dorothy Letts, to Ollie Roscoe McGuire, are having such a good time in the Capital that they have decided to extend their visit until the end of the week.

After a visit with Mrs. William Guthrie they have moved over to the home of Judge and Mrs. F. Dickinson Letts. Today they will attend a luncheon to be given by Mrs. William Ramseyer.

Miss Letts is one of the outstanding tennis players of the Middle West and expects to play at Forest Hills this summer.

First Lady Due Here for Cabinet Dinner Monday

Mrs. Roosevelt, who is vacationing at Golden Beach, Fla., will return to the Capital in time to attend the annual dinner given by the Cabinet March 4 in honor of the President.

Monday evening she attended a water ballet at the Miami Biltmore Hotel in Coral Gables and had several friends dining with her at the hotel before the event.

Also from Florida comes news that Postmaster General Farley was honor guest at a luncheon given yesterday by Lawrence Wood Robert, jr., at the Bath and Tennis Club.

Mr. Haardt to Wed Alma Louise Beane

Mr. and Mrs. Dorsey R. Beane announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Alma Louise Beane, to Carl J. M. Haardt, of Dubuque, Iowa, and now of this city. Mr. Haardt is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry F. Haardt.

The bride-elect was graduated from Immaculata Seminary several years ago. Mr. Haardt was graduated from Georgetown University. The couple plan to be married in the fall.

Congressional Club Plans Tea

A number of prominent women will receive and assist at a reception at the Congressional Country Club from 4 to 6 p. m. Sunday.

Verne Simmons, chairman of the reception committee, and Mrs. Elmer Collins are in charge of arrangements for the tea, which will draw a distinguished company.

Among those who will receive are Mrs. Simmons, Mrs. Brien McMahon, Mrs. William Kerlin, Mrs. Bon Geaslin, Mrs. Fred Neuland, Mrs. Elmer Collins, Mrs. Clifton Severance, Mrs. James Cunningham, Mrs. Cecil Wilkinson, Mrs. Patrick Murphy, Mrs. Clifford McClain, Mrs. Davis Weir, Mrs. Herbert Helsing, Mrs. Paul Porter and Mrs. Patrick Winkler.

Mrs. Robert H. Jackson heads the list of those who will pour. Others include Mrs. Ernest Lundeen, Mrs. Joseph Himes, Mrs. Frank T. Hines, Mrs. William H. McReynolds, Mrs. Bolitha J. Laws, Mrs. Herbert E. Gaston, Mrs. George Brennan, Mrs. Gloyd Awalt, Mrs. Cooper Lightbown, Mrs. Arthur Huyler, Mrs. Henry I. Quinn and Mrs. Russell Conn.

Group Leaves For Garden Tour To Mexico City

Mrs. Frank Mason Dillard, Miss Margaret Moore and Mrs. William Laird Dunlop, jr., were in the party made up of members of the Garden Clubs of Virginia and the Virginia Colonial Dames, who left yesterday on a tour that will take them to Mexico City.

En route they will stop off to see gardens in Memphis, New Orleans and San Antonio. They will be gone three weeks and during their stay in Mexico City will be at the Reforma Hotel.

Prominently arranged on the Mexico schedule for the party is the trip to the floating gardens of Xochimilco, where dozens of flower-covered islands are viewed from flower-decked boats.

Parkers Return From Honeymoon

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Franklin Parker have returned from their wedding trip to New York and are making their home in King street, Alexandria, Va.

The marriage of the former Miss Florence Partlow, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Carl H. Partlow, of Alexandria, took place February 18 at the Baptist Church in Alexandria. Mr. Parker is the son of Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Parker, of Alexandria.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a blue wool suit, matching accessories and a corsage of orchids. Richard Parker was best man for his brother.

There was a reception at the home of the bride's parents following the ceremony.

Bethesda Dinner Honors Norwegian Envoy and Wife

The Norwegian Minister and Mme. Munthe de Morgenstierne, were honor guests at a dinner party last evening given by Dr. and Mrs. Gilbert H. Grosvenor at their home, Wild Acres, in Bethesda.

Guests included Mr. and Mrs. Harry G. Meem, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Lincoln O'Brien, Dr. and Mrs. James Alexander Lyon, Mr. and Mrs. Max Kauffmann, Mr. and Mrs. William H. Beck and Mr. and Mrs. Cabot Coville.

Notes of Society

Official and Residential

The Federal Security Administrator and Mrs. Paul Vories McNutt have cards out for an "at home" on Sunday, March 10, in their apartment at the Shoreham.

Miss Audrey N. Campbell and Miss Gertrude Webb, of Washington, who have been on a motor tour of the South, are now in New York, at the Ritz Carlton.

Also at the Ritz is Mrs. Woodson P. Houghton, of this city.

Mr. and Mrs. Fulton Brylawski are spending some time at Miami as guests of Mr. and Mrs. Gustave Ring.

Mrs. Walter Franc, of Columbus, Ohio, has arrived for a visit in the Capital and is stopping at the Shoreham.

Kilburns Give Miss Skinner Cocktail Party

Members of Congress Are Among Guests; See Her at Theater

Cornelia Otis Skinner, famous "one woman" theater, was among the guests at a cocktail party given yesterday by Representative and Mrs. Clarence E. Kilburn, of Malone, N. Y., in their apartment at the Hay-Adams.

Others included Representative Joseph Martin, Representative and Mrs. John Taber, Representative and Mrs. Daniel A. Reed, Representative and Mrs. Francis Culkin and Judge and Mrs. Frederick H. Bryant, of Malone.

The hosts gave a dinner for Representative and Mrs. Taber. Representative and Mrs. Reed, Representative and Mrs. Culkin and Judge and Mrs. Bryant. The party then went to see Miss Skinner at the National.

The Andersons Fete Attache

As Chief of the Bureau of Naval Intelligence, Rear Admiral Walter S. Anderson comes in contact with many of the foreign naval attaches stationed in Washington, and they and their wives are frequently guests at the Anderson residence. The admiral and his wife will give a dinner on Saturday, March 9, in honor of the new Naval Attache of the Italian Embassy, Admiral Lais, who was formerly stationed in Washington at a previous tour of duty.

Admiral Lais will be host at a cocktail party today at the Mayflower. He will be joined in March by Signora Lais, and for the time being is making his home at 2101 Connecticut avenue.

Rear Admiral and Mrs. Anderson will give another dinner on Tuesday. Yesterday Mrs. Anderson was hostess at luncheon for a party of ten.

Stoddards Feted By Cunibertis

Mr. and Mrs. Fernando Cuniberti gave a dinner last evening at their R street home in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Lothrop Stoddard. Mr. Stoddard returned recently from abroad.

Guests included Mr. and Mrs. Roscoe Drummond, Mrs. Maude Whitman and the Cunibertis' daughter, Julia.

Mrs. Vanderbilt Arrives

Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, of New York arrived last evening and is stopping at the Carlton.

About the Town

with DUDLEY HARMON

Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, Envoy Bullitt Among Guests at Brilliant Polish Party

THE POLISH EMBASSY was the scene of its first sizable party since the war began when the Ambassador, Count Potocki, entertained last night in honor of his countryman, Arthur Rubinstein. The pianist, who has given many concerts for Polish relief, was soloist last evening with the Philadelphia Orchestra.

Born at Cracow, educated in Berlin, Mr. Rubinstein has played in every country of the world and every State of the United States. He holds decorations from nearly every government. His wife, daughter of a Polish professor at the Curtis Institute in Philadelphia, also was present last night.

The Chopin Concerto played by Mr. Rubenstein was dedicated to Countess Delphine Potocka, doubtless an ancestress of the Ambassador. Delphine was a singer as well as a countess and it was she who in October of 1849 rushed to Paris from Nice when she heard that Chopin was dying and, at his request, sang by his bedside.

AMBASSADOR "Bill" Bullitt, who has recently returned from France, attended the supper party last night and when glimpsed had engaged Princess Hohenlohe in lively conversation. The wife of the Polish Attache was stunning in a backless gown of black sequins. The French Ambassador, Count Rene de St. Quentin sipped champagne and conversed with a group. Prominent music lovers turned up and among them handsome Mrs. Tracy Dows in a full-skirted black taffeta frock with a beige panel.

Looking every inch the grande dame, Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt arrived wearing a salmon-pink lame gown with a matching headband embroidered in diamonds. A silver fox cape completed the ensemble. Mrs. Vanderbilt had dined with the Ambassador before the concert and they occupied a box together at the performance. Senator and Mrs. Arthur Vandenberg were there, she in a pale blue dress and a white fox fur.

Mrs. Robert Low Bacon, whose attractive black chiffon dress had full white chiffon sleeves, was accompanied by her daughter, Miss Virginia Bacon. The Ambassador of Brazil and Senhora Martins were among those attending the supper party, who had been to the concert. The Finnish Minister, Hjalmar Procope, was there as were the Yugoslav Minister and Mme. Fotitch, Representative and Mrs. Sol Bloom with their daughter, Vera.

MR. AND MRS. J. LAURENCE HOUGHTELING answered innumerable questions about their recent experience with the burglar. Mrs. Samuel Warren, who is here from Boston as the house guest of Mrs. Warren Delano Robbins, was there, as were Mrs. Lawrence Townsend, who had occupied her usual box at the concert, and Mme. Wancowicz, wearing a gay dress with a darker shirred bodice.

Mrs. Nicholas Longworth, surrounded by her usual group of admirers, was there, as was Mrs. Truxtun Beale in a smoke gray chiffon, and Mme. Bostrom, wife of the Swedish Minister, in a handsome yellow gown of heavy brocade.

Envoy of France Among Patrons Of Choir Concert

Many distinguished Washingtonians will attend the Lenten concert of the A Capella Choir at Constitution Hall on Monday, March 11. The French Ambassador, Count de Saint Quentin, is among the patrons. Countess Szechenyi will be among the box hostesses, who will help make the event one of the outstanding of the season.

The former Secretary of Commerce and Mrs. Daniel C. Roper will entertain in their box Mr. and Mrs. Dean Shure and Dr. and Mrs. John W. Rustin. Other prominent persons who will entertain box parties include Mrs. Arthur H. Vandenberg, Mrs. Duncan Phillips, Mrs. E. C. Alvord, Mrs. Douglas Birnie, Mrs. Frederick Benton, Mrs. Whitman Cross, Dr. Rush W. Conklin, Mrs. Harold E. Doyle, William Hugh Dunn, Mrs. Richard W. Deaver, Otis Williams, jr., and John J. Stahl.

Pen Women Reveal Plans For Meeting

Election Slates Are Announced; Delegates Convene Here on April 20

By Jessie Ash Arndt.
The Post Club Editor.

The official bulletin of the National League of American Pen Women announces the tentative program for the biennial convention, to be held at the Willard Hotel, April 20 to 26. It also lists the candidates for national office, among others Mrs. Knight Gasch, indorsed by the District branch for president.

Audrey Wurdemann, Auslander, of this city, who has served as head of the national league for the past two years, will return from a Florida lecturing tour Monday to preside at the monthly meeting of the national board, at which final convention arrangements will be made.

One of the matters of business scheduled for the April sessions is the proposal from a group of Western branches that the biennial conventions hereafter he held elsewhere than in Washington. The conferences on alternate years are held in different cities, but under the present by-laws the convention at which election of officers takes place is always held here. Headquarters are maintained at the Willard Hotel. The Pen Women living at a distance contend that this makes it impossible for them to be represented by full delegations, and this deprives them of their legal right to a voice in the government and policies of the organization.

The proposed amendment provides that the convention shall be financed by the national league in the customary way, rather than putting this responsibility on the hostess branch.

The amendment is expected to result in lively discussion both because its adoption would break a long-established precedent and because of the advantages many members feel Washington offers as the biennial convention city.

Several of the candidates announced in the bulletin, in addition to Mrs. Gasch, are Washingtonians. Mrs. Josephine Craven Horner, poet and lecturer, will be on the ticket for first vice president. Also a candidate for that office is the bulletin editor, Mrs. Florence Hamilton, of New York, who is expected to attend the board meeting here Monday.

May West Owen, of the Denver branch, who is opposing Mrs. Gasch for president, is now in Washington and has spent most of the winter here.

District residents unopposed for other national offices include Mrs. Tomas Cajigas, for corresponding secretary, and Miss Marguerite Merigold, now State president of the District, recording secretary.

Saturday, April 20, there will be the annual authors' breakfast at noon, and in the evening a reception to the retiring president, Mrs. Auslander.

Sunday, April 21, Mrs. Eugene Meyer will open her home for the national president's reception to delegates and visiting members from 4 to 6, and the art supper will be held at the Willard at 8 o'clock.

Monday, there will be the regular convention sessions and from 4 to 5, officers and delegates will be received at the White House for tea. A banquet, radio and drama hour are scheduled in the evening. A Puerto Rican night banquet is set for Tuesday; a poets' luncheon, an embassy tea and composers' banquet, Wednesday; election Thursday, followed in the afternoon by a tea honoring Senora Mario Julia, of San Juan, and the installation banquet, with a musical at the Women's City Club afterward.

Party to Mark Leap Year At Arts Club

Variety will mark the celebration of leap year at the Arts Club tomorrow night. The theme will be "February Twenty-ninth" and the program will comprise original works done under the auspices of the recently revived workshop, Mrs. William J. Peters, director.

The program will include two short stories, "Leap Year Lunch," by William S. Hepner, and "Sarah Bell and the Angels," by Lewis Lofton Moneyway. In between a shadow play by Anne Bradbury Peebles and a one-act play called "Another Day," by Mrs. Edwin H. Etz, poems by Alice Du Breuil, will be read. They include a triolet, a rondel, a rondeau, and a villanelle, all celebrating the day and year. The hostess is Mrs. Walter E. Hilton and the host is Harold Allen Long.

Mt. de Chautae Alumnae In Capital Organize

Mrs. A. S. Warder, of Tilden Gardens, president of the Mt. de Chautae Alumnae in Washington, has requested alumnae of the school to notify either her or the secretary, Mrs. Daniel E. Howard.

Mrs. Howard entertained the local group at luncheon last Saturday at her home, 434 Emerson street, and regular meetings are to be held hereafter.

Madame Chairman

—by Suzanne

TWO BIRTHDAYS were celebrated with a single cake yesterday when Doralyn Cartwright, daughter of Representative and Mrs. Cartwright, and Jedolyn Jean Johnson, daughter of Representative and Mrs. Jed Johnson, had their annual joint anniversary party.

It was a family dinner at which Representative and Mrs. Cartwright entertained the Johnsons. All are from Oklahoma and have been close friends ever since Representative Johnson and Representative Cartwright came to Congress. Doralyn was born here February 27, 1927 and on her birthday, a year later, Jedolyn Jean was born, also in Washington. Ever since, their mothers have arranged a joint birthday celebration for them as their anniversary always comes when Congress is in session and the families are in the Capital.

The girls are not in the same year in school, but both are students at Rose Robinson Cohen's Studio of Drama. Last spring both had the same role in a play—that of Fire in "Bluebird"—one appearing in the first performance and the other in the second.

Mrs. Cartwright and Mrs. Johnson are members of the Congressional Club and the girls have taken part in the children's broadcasts arranged at the club's children's party each spring.

D. A. R SCHOOLS. Dr. Stewart McClelland, president of the Lincoln Memorial University, Harogate, Tenn., last night addressed a meeting of the approved schools committee of the D. A. R., held at the Willard Hotel.

He described the university, which is one of the D. A. R. approved institutions. It serves the Cumberland Gap region, offering higher education to boys and girls who could not afford to go elsewhere. The campus is large, the buildings well equipped and many of its students have distinguished themselves in scholarship.

Mrs. Orie Eads Gibson presided as chairman of the committee and announced that a large sum had been contributed toward scholarships for students in the mountain schools.

AMERICAN MUSIC—A broader program for the advancement of collected by the chapters. This work is continuing. The D. A. R. this year. Under the title "Across the U. S. A. With Our Composers," all chapters of the national society are joining in programs centering attention upon American music and American composers.

Last year, information concerning 3,000 American composers was collected by the chapters. hTis work is continuing. The D. A. R. is not sponsoring any composers, nor is it evaluating compositions, Mrs. Edward G. Mead, of Oxford, Ohio, national chairman of advancement of American music committee, emphasized.

Mrs. Lois Marshall Hicks, chairman of the District committee, and her assistants have done considerable research in connection with the listing of District composers and their works, as well as arranging programs of American music for local chapters, providing talent for the programs and speaking before various organizations about American composers and compositions.

At present, Mrs. Hicks is completing arrangements for the musicale which her committee is sponsoring at the Chapter House, 1732 Massachusetts avenue northwest, tomorrow night at 8:30. All members of the D. A. R. in the District are invited to be present. Miss Maxwell Galloway, vice chairman of the committee, will be heard in a group of songs by American composers, among the other musical numbers planned.

D. A. R. members in many sections of the country are making a study of folk music. Collections of Indian music, mountain ballads, canal songs, chanteys, spirituals, cowboy songs, etc. are being made.

TONIGHT Mrs. Dorothy Clem Warren, of Baltimore, will address the Venture Club at 8 p. m., at the Lewis Hotel Training School. Mrs. Warren has been in charge of the World Citizenship League of Young People for nearly 10 years. She will tell of the work of her movement, which is made up of young boys and girls. Mrs. Warren is a member of the Baltimore Soroptimists Club.

The Venture Club is a group of "baby Soroptimists" and each member must be sponsored by a member of the Soroptimist Club.

Box Social To Be Given For Refugees

Spanish Relief Campaign Function Set for March 12

An old-fashioned box social will be held by the Spanish Refugee Campaign of Washington March 12, at the National Press Club Auditorium. The affair will be a departure from the usual dinner parties in the Capital and has been announced to take the place of the dinner-forum, which was to have been held at the Mayflower Hotel March 5.

Mrs. Gifford Pinchot is chairman of the event to which guests are invited to bring "a considerable supper" packed in a shoe box and pay a small admission charge. Those who prefer to have their suppers ready made and pre-boxed may obtain them at the door for twice the amount. They will definitely be packed in shoe boxes, Mrs. Pinchot has announced.

It was the old-fashioned custom to decorate the box with fancy ribbon bows, hearts and flowers and auction each one off to the highest bidder, whose privilege it was to claim as his supper partner the lady who had brought it. But this plan will not be followed at the coming party. Tables will be arranged by the Press Club, at which the hosts and hostess may sit with their own guests.

Discussion Arranged For After Supper

Following the supper, there will be a discussion of "The Spanish Refugees" Contributions to the New World." Mme. Isabel de Palencia, former Minister from the Spanish Republic to Sweden, will lead the discussion at which Leon Henderson, chairman of the Washington Chapter of the Spanish Refugee Relief Campaign, will preside.

Teresa K. Liss, who was the chapter's delegate to the conference on Spanish relief, recently held in Mexico City, has returned. There were representatives from Argentina, Uruguay, Mexico, Chile, Cuba, the Dominican Republic, Puerto Rico, France and this country.

Mexico to Acrept More Refugees

The Mexican government which already has taken in 8,000 refugees will accept a limitless number, according to Miss Liss. The 8,000 already are well integrated and considered an advantage to the country, she said. Chile has 3,000 and will take 3,000 more; Uruguay, 500 and will take 500 more, and Argentina will accept more also. During the last year 20,000 have been sent to Latin-American countries from France.

Mrs. Roosevelt heads the list of sponsors for the supper, which includes Mr. and Mrs. Thurman Arnold, Mrs. Hugo Black, Mrs. Frances Biddle, Mrs. William O. Douglas, Mrs. Emily Newell Blair, Mrs. Louis D. Brandeis, Oscar Chapman, Mrs. Raymond Clapper, Delbert Clark, Senator D. Worth Clark, Mrs. Eugene Meyer, Kenneth Crawford, Dr. Lauchlin Currie, Clifford Durr, Dr. and Mrs. Mordecai Ezekiel, Mrs. Henry F. Grady, Senator Theodore F. Green, Mrs. Frederick A. Keep, Representative Kent Keller, Mr. and Mrs. James LeCron, Mrs. John L. Lewis, Lady Willmott Lewis, Ernest K. Lindley, Dr. Isadore Lubin, Lowell Mellett.

Women Shoppers To Study Labor

The Washington League of Women Shoppers announces a new study group on "Migratory Labor in Agriculture." The group, beginning tomorrow, will have four meetings and will hear lectures and be led in discussion by Dr. Edward J. Rowell, social science analyst with the Farm Security Administration.

Dr. Rowell served with the National Longshoreman Board in California in 1934. From there he went to the Federal Emergency Relief Administration, where he was supervisor of the rural research program. He also managed the migratory camp program in California, so vividly depicted in John Steinbeck's "The Grapes of Wrath."

The subjects for the meetings, to be held at the home of Mrs. Leon Henderson, are: February 29, "Farm Labor in a Changing Rural Economy." Two films put out by the Department of Agriculture will be shown, "Rain on the Plains" and "Muddy Waters:" March 5, "the General Problem of the Migratory Agricultural Worker;" March 12, "the Status of Farm Labor Under the Existing Legislation;" March 19, "A Program of Agricultural Labor." The meetings will be at 2 p. m. and there will be a charge for the series for incidental expenses.

Notre Dame Alumnae

James F. Hartnett, chairman for the convention of the International Federation of Notre Dame Alumnae, to be held in this city in August, will hold a meeting at the Mayflower Hotel tonight at 8:15, to discuss plans.

Marietta Park Women to Hold Guest Night

The Marietta Park Woman's Club will have its annual guest night at the Women's City Club, with Mrs. Saidie Orr Dunbar, president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, heading the guests of honor.

Other honor guests will be Mrs. Ernest Humphrey Daniel, president of the District Federation, and presidents of neighboring clubs.

The program will be on Scotland, with Mrs. Gladys Ball Middlemiss showing pictures of the Burns country, and Miss Maxwell Galloway singing Scotch songs, accompanied by Mrs. Mary Izant Couch at the piano.

Gunston Hall Students Make Articles for Bazaar March 9

Mother Goose rhymes, stories and quaint figures decorated the gay little stuffed elephants made yesterday afternoon at the annual "sewing tea" at Gunston Hall School. The students worked in the library, many of them sitting on the floor, their materials around them.

Mrs. John Donnelly, president of the Gunston Hall alumnae, and several members of the alumnae group were present to assist the girls of the school in their preparations for the annual bazaar. This will be held Saturday, March 9, when the floppy-eared elephants and other articles will be sold, luncheon will be served in the gymnasium and vaudeville stunts presented. The program will include French skits, in costume, by members of Mlle. Foegere's classes; Spanish songs and dances, in costume, by the classes under Senorita Lola Boyd, daughter of the Minister of Panama, and English numbers by the choral group under Mrs. Ruby Smith Stahl, director of the A Cappella Choir.

Mrs. Carl A. Zoller Gives Luncheon

Mrs. Carl A. Zoller gave a luncheon yesterday for members of the women's board of the Homeopathic Hospital. Before luncheon there was a brief business meeting at which plans were made for a benefit early in April.

Miss Terrett Urges Better Foster Care

District's Agencies For Unwed Mothers And Their Children Called Inadequate

If a law is passed to prevent commercial placement of babies in the District, social agencies must offer more adequate services to unmarried mothers and their babies, Miss Mildred Terrett said at yesterday's meeting of the child welfare division, Council of Social Agencies.

"We would feel pretty silly," she said, if such services were lacking after a law was passed.

Miss Terrett, who is executive secretary of the Children's Protective Association, said that foster family care should be available, if needed, for the unmarried mother and baby at the time they leave the hospital.

Aid Called "Microscopic"

She said that "microscopic" is the only word for the foster family service offered to unmarried mothers and their babies. A quick canvass revealed that a total of only six unmarried mothers at present are being given this care through the three agencies, which provide this type of care.

Capt. Rhoda Milliken, director of the Woman's Bureau of the Police Department, pointed out the range of children which are taken into the Receiving Home because of lack of foster home facilities.

She told of a 15-year-old girl who had run away from home because she was tired of the family fights. She needed a quiet place to think things through and "it took her four days to decide she was fond of her family" and wanted to go back. Capt. Milliken asked whether that type of girl should be put in an institution along with a girl who had been twice arrested and with a boy "who had thought out 13 housebreakings."

Hearing to Be Asked

"If anybody would offer the Police Department some other place" for children such as the runaway girl, "we would be more than happy to use it," Capt. Milliken said.

The legislative committee of the council's child welfare division will ask the House District Committee for a hearing on a bill which was reported Monday. The bill would amend the child labor law of the District to permit a juvenile, regardless of age, to appear on the stage, provided the Board of Education issues a permit. In the discussion at the child welfare meeting yesterday, Mrs. Louis Ottenberg, chairman of the legislative committee, said that such a bill "crops up each year." After the meeting she expressed fears that the bill might let down the bars to numerous children.

Sidney R. Katz, secretary-treasurer of the Maryland and District of Columbia Industrial Union Council, said "an attack is being made on child welfare" through a proposed amendment to the District unemployment compensation law. He said the amendment hit at families, by allowing no extra benefits for children and wife of a man receiving unemployment compensation. Consideration of this legislation was referred to Mrs. Ottenberg's committee.

3 Bills Being Drafted

Mrs. Ottenberg reported that progress is being made in the drafting of the three pieces of child welfare legislation. One of them is a bill to prevent commercial placement of babies by "brokers." Efforts are being made to get the legislation before Congress at this session.

Miss Marita Redington, child welfare department of Catholic Charities, declared that an adequate program of foster family care for unmarried mothers was lacking in the District.

Miss Mary Poole, of the social service department of Children's Hospital, speaking on convalescent care for children in foster family homes, emphasized that the community should see that the home which the child goes back to "is worth going back to."

Miss Labaree, field consultant in the child welfare division of the United States Children's Bureau, who introduced the speakers on the panel, stressed the fact that along with the wider distribution of public welfare, "private agencies have a large part to play."

The luncheon meeting, held at the Y. W. C. A., was presided over by Dr. John W. Rustin, pastor of Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church and chairman of the council's child welfare division.

Thom McAn Aides Close Convention With Banquet

Officials and branch managers of the Thom McAn shoe stores closed their two-day convention last night with a banquet in the Mayflower.

Central topic of their conference was proposed antichain store legislation, and Ward Melville, president of the company, said that frequently attacks on chain store selling results in increased public support for them. "We are convinced," he said, "that the chain store plan of distribution is better than any other method that has been devised."

Melville, citing the convention's slogan "Forward in '40," said that the firm is expecting a 6 per cent increase in business this year above 1939.

Mark M. Jones, New York economist who spoke at the dinner, said that the chain store gives the consumer the opportunity to pool his resources with others to get the benefits of group purchasing.

Others who attended the dinner were Senator Walsh (Democrat), of Massachusetts; Roscoe Wright, of the Census Bureau; William J Cobb, vice president of the stores; Lester R. Fallon, sales manager; Harold R. Young, Washington representative of the National Retail Dry Goods Association; David R. Craig, president of the American Retail Federation; and other McAn officials.

118 Strayer Graduates Hear Randolph at Exercises

Board to Vote On Zone Change Rehearing

Engineer Commissioner McCoach last night said he would call a meeting tomorrow of the zoning commission to vote on a rehearing demanded by residents of Friendship Heights on a recent zoning change at Wisconsin avenue and Albemarle street northwest.

The zoning change, which was ordered two weeks ago, was protested by residents of the community, who petitioned the aid of Chairman Randolph of the House District Committee, in their fight.

Col. McCoach, chairman of the zoning body, said he expected an opinion on a petition for the rehearing from Corporation Counsel Seal. This opinion will be forthcoming either today or tomorrow.

Under the zoning order, Sears Roebuck & Co. planned a retail store.

Paul Stauffer, Postal Employe, Dies Here at 46

Paul W. Stauffer, 46, assistant foreman in the mail equipment shop of the Postoffice Department, died yesterday at his home, 1602 F street northeast.

He was born in Walkersville, Md., and had lived in Washington for 28 years. During the World War he served with the Army. He was a member of the Woodmen of the World. Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Emma S. Stauffer, and a son, Paul E. Stauffer, jr., both of Washington.

Funeral services will be at 2 p. m. Friday at Chambers funeral home, 517 Eleventh street southeast, with burial in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

King, Randolph, Overton, Caldwell To Talk on Safety

Members of the House and Senate will speak tonight at a joint meeting of the American Automobile Association Women's Safety Committee and the advisory board of the District Motor Club at the Sulgrave Club at 8 p. m. on increased coordination between Congress and District groups in efforts to solve local problems.

Chief speakers will be Senator William H. King, of Utah; Senator John H. Overton, of Louisiana; Representative Jennings Randolph, of West Virginia, and Representative F. Caldwell, of Florida. Cochairmen at the affair will be Mrs. George C. Thorpe, chairman of the women's safety committee, and John L. Vandegrift, chairman of the advisory board.

Mexico City Flight To Be Inaugurated From Here Tonight

Daily Washington-to-Mexico City plane service will be inaugurated by Eastern Air Lines at 9:10 o'clock tonight at the Washington Airport.

Senorita Erma Castillo Najero, daughter of the Mexican Ambassador, will crack a bottle of champagne over the nose of a big "Silver Sleeper" before it takes off for Brownsville, Tex. There a plane will be available to carry the passengers to Mexico City.

Brief radio talks will be given by Ambassador Najero, Thomas Burke, chief of international communications of the State Department, and Paul H. Brattain, first vice president and general traffic manager of Eastern Air Lines.

ABC Probe To Check Bribe Story

Licensee Who Denied Police Corruption Faces Cross-Examination

The House subcommittee investigating liquor licensing in Washington today will cross-examine Thomas J. Connors, Georgetown licensee, with regard to charges that two policemen attempted to extort a bribe from him.

Connors denied that he had made the charge after Claude S. Martin, executive secretary of the District Bartenders Commission, testified last Friday that Connors had been approached by the policemen and subsequently had suffered a seven-day license suspension.

The subcommittee also will hear Wilbur LaRoe, chairman of the civic affairs committee of the Washington Federation of Churches, today. The hearing is expected to continue throughout the day.

Lodge Called Dictator

The Eberharter subcommittee yesterday heard Thomas E. Lodge, chairman of the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board, criticized for "dictatorial" tactics by two attorneys who practice before the board.

Ethelbert B. Frey, one of the witnesses, said that Lodge "rules the board with an iron hand" and that Mrs. Agnes K. Mason, vice chairman, "does what he says."

Charles E. Morganston, another attorney, backed up Frey's complaint, adding:

"The board is arbitrary in its rulings and in the way it conducts its hearings."

Another lawyer, Ford E. Young, jr., complained of the board procedure also but registered his opposition to the substitution of a Government dispensary system of liquor sales. He contended that the 400 licensees of package stores have a vested right in their licenses.

Ohio Prices Lower

Representative Hunter (Democrat), of Ohio, interrupted the cross-examination of Young to say that a comparison of the prices of 128 brands of liquor sold in Washington and Ohio, which has a dispensary system, shows that the prices of 101 are higher in the District.

Young also made other recommendations for changes in regulations of the ABC board and its procedure in conducting hearings.

Costs Cut

Wage Earners' Funds Go a Bit Further

The cost of living for families of wage earners and lower-salaried workers in Washington dropped 1.6 per cent between September 15 and December 15, 1939, Secretary of Labor Perkins announced yesterday.

This was the sharpest drop reported in the 32 large cities surveyed by the Bureau of Labor Statistics. The average decline in living costs for all these cities was six-tenths of 1 per cent.

Food costs in Washington dropped 5.4 per cent, a record for the country. Rents went down one-tenth of 1 per cent and miscellaneous items two-tenths of 1 per cent.

There were increases in three categories. House furnishing goods rose 3.2 per cent, fuel and light 1.7 per cent, and clothing 0.8 per cent. However, the decreases in food and other items offset these, leaving the net decrease 1.6 per cent.

A slight decrease in living costs was fairly general in the United States between September 15 and December 15, the survey showed. Next to Washington, Kansas City showed the sharpest drop—1.5 per cent.

Two cities showed an increase in the cost of living, Chicago and Minneapolis.

Capital News In Brief

Thomas Circle Parking

Parking regulations covering the new Thomas Circle area were announced yesterday by the Commissioners.

No parking will be permitted along all curbs on Massachusetts avenue, between Thirteenth and Fifteenth streets northwest.

Parking will also be prohibited along all curbs, islands, spaces and plots within a radius of 225 feet of the center of the circle with the exception of Highland Terrace.

The new underpass along Massachusetts avenue, under the circle is nearing completion and will be opened to traffic sometime next month.

Lectures on Americas

The first two in a series of Pan-American lectures sponsored by the inter-American center of George Washington University will be given tonight in the Hall of Government, starting at 7:15 o'clock.

D. C. Guardsmen Parade for Presentation Of Awards, Announcement of Promotions

Col. Leroy W. Herron pins a silver leaf on the shoulder of Lieut. Col. Virgil O. Bernard, designating his promotion from major. Lieut. Col. Edwin S. Bettelheim also was promoted from the rank of major. Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox (right) reviewed the District National Guardsmen as awards were presented and promotions announced last night

Majors Bettelheim, Barnard Both Made Lieutenant Colonels

Twelve Hundred District National Guardsmen assembled in the Armory on Pennsylvania avenue last night for a special review by Brig. Gen. Gen. Albert L. Cox, their commander.

The occasion was a ceremonial presentation of awards and announcements of promotion of officers of the Reserve Corps, Edwin S. Bettelheim and Virgil O. Barnard, both of whom were raised from the rank of major to lieutenant colonel.

Their oaths were administered to Bettleheim and Barnard by Lieut. Col. John G. Burr. Insignia of rank were presented by Gen. Cox and Col. Leroy W. Herron, commander of the 313th Field Artillery.

The ceremony opened with presentation of the Amateur Athletic Union championship trophy to the Guard boxing team by W. A. Mulligan, chairman of the A. A. U. boxing committee.

Members of the team are Donald Stetson, John Rogers, William Nolan, William Kekeris, Roy Dunn, James Perrow, Richard Corradi, Humphrey De Cola and Philip Gevison.

Col. John W. Oehmann presented to the guard small-bore rifle team the trophy of its victory in recent District team championships. Col. Walter W. Burns presented medals to team members, while Maj. Flecther F. Bernsdorff gave awards to Lieut. H. M. Boudinot and Staff Sergt. H. S. Parsons as winners of first and fifth places, respectively, in the individual championships.

Other members of the rifle team are W. C. Jensen, J. C. Jensen and John Oehmann.

A command and general staff school extension course certificate was presented by Gen. Cox to Capt. Hugh Everett, jr.

Guests at the ceremony and a reception that followed it included Col. F. M. Woodrow, commander of the 315th Field Artillery; Capt. A. H. Thompson and J. Fred Johnson, Federal Communications Commission attorney.

D'Alesandro Will Inspect Penal Houses

Bondy to Accompany House Prober on Tour Of D. C. Institutions

Chairman D'Alesandro, of the House subcommittee investigating local welfare institutions, and Robert E. Bondy, public welfare director, tomorrow will begin inspecting District penal institutions.

The tour will include trips to the District Reformatory and workhouse at Lorton and Occuquan, to the jail and to juvenile correctional institutions, including the Industrial Home School and the National Training School for Girls.

D'Alesandro yesterday suggested that self-government by District residents might solve the welfare problem. The suggestion came during cross-examination of Bondy and Mrs. Spencer Gordon, member of the board of public welfare.

Congress Is Blamed

Blame for "justly criticized conditions" at local welfare institutions was put on Congress by Mrs. Gordon, who recalled that an appropriation of $30,000 was all that the welfare department got out of a request for a deficiency appropriation of $280,000 last year.

She explained that the Commissioners had cut the estimate to $110,000 and that the Budget Bureau had slashed it to $56,000 before Congress made the last cut.

"Congress has been responsible all along the line," she said.

"Would you say that the conditions of all welfare institutions here would be improved if Congress would allow the District to manage its own municipal affairs," D'Alesandro asked.

Improvement Possible

"I just don't know," responded Mrs. Gordon.

Bondy, in replying to the same question, said that welfare institutions could be improved if adequate funds were provided.

Both witnesses said that since the establishment of the Children's Receiving Home in 1928, the board has been dissatisfied with the quarters and shortage of personnel.

Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, was asked by D'Alesandro to explain why between 48 and 72 hours often elapsed between the time a child is sent to the receiving home and parents are notified as had been testified previously.

Maj. Brown said that such notification usually requires only an hour but that often children give the wrong address or no address or that parents aren't home or refuse to take the child baek.

Maj. Barnard Funeral Services To Be Tomorrow

Funeral services for Maj. Clarence Barnard, 63, Ordnance Department, U. S. Army, will be held tomorrow at 2 p. m. in the Fort Myer chapel, with military burial in Arlington Cemetery. Maj. Barnard died Monday in Denver.

A native of Washington, Maj. Barnard was graduated from Georgetown University in 1899 and was commissioned as first lieutenant in the ordnance section of the Officers Reserve Corps September 11, 1917. The following month he was called to duty in the World War.

John A. Huston Will Be Buried In Cedar Hill

Services for John A. Huston, 76, former foreman of the Congressional Record proofroom at the Government Printing Office, will be at 2:30 p. m. tomorrow at the Hines funeral home, 2901 Fourteenth street northwest, with burial in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

Mr. Huston died Monday in St. Petersburg, Fla., of a paralysis stroke suffered February 16.

Mr. Huston was a native of Ohio and joined the Typographical Union in 1882, later working as a journeyman printer in Southern and Eastern cities. In 1892, he came to Washington to work for the Government Printing Office, remaining here until his retirement in 1932.

While a resident of Washington at 616 Upshur street northwest, Mr. Huston was active in the Indiana State Society, the National Lodge of the Masons, and Almas Temple of the Shrine. Since his retirement, Mr. Huston had been spending his winters in Florida.

Surviving are a son, Robert C. Huston. His wife died in 1937.

Patrick Urges Youth to Fight Own Battles

Columbia Heights Business Men Hear Speaker at Dinner

American youths today need to "fight their own battles," Representative Luther Patrick (Democrat), of Alabama, declared last night.

Speaking before the Columbia Heights Business Men's Association at their fifteenth annual dinner dance at the Shoreham Hotel, he said the recent Youth Congress here showed "the wrong spirit" because the delegates were "complaining that they didn't have jobs."

"There never was a time when young people could just grow up and have a job," he said. "The country doesn't owe you a job; you've got to shake the lion's mane, show you can do it, and if you can't find a job, make a job."

Louis L. Bowdler, president of the Federation of Business Men's Associations, stressed the value of cooperation between associations, and said that "if we pull together we can get what we want for this city."

Dr. W. Lawrence Smallwood presided, and Wayne C. Stone introduced Representative Patrick. W. L. Gary, president of the association, welcomed the 50 members and guests at the dinner, and introduced past and present officers.

Among these were Past Presidents William Dismer, L. Gottlieb and George Ford; First Vice President Henry D. Gordon, Second Vice President B. W. Seaton and Third Vice President Mrs. Velma B. Merriam. Miss Ethel Lynch played the piano.

Health Law Urged

Certificates showing freedom of both parties from "the effects of venereal disease" should be filed with all marriage license applications in the District, the Hampshire Heights Citizens Association resolved last night.

The association directed that the resolution be sent to Dr. George Ruhland, District health officer, both Senate and House District committees, and the Federation of Citizens Associations.

Dr. James G. Cumming, director of the bureau of preventable diseases, who addressed the association meeting in the Barnard School, approved the action.

In another resolution, the association urged a return to the old system of auto revaluation with motorists who have been taxed under the new system to be given refunds or credits on future taxes.

Fund Sought For Teaching D. C. Shut-ins

21 Social Groups Join to Ask $22,400 Appropriation To Launch Program

A representative group campaigning for adequate educational opportunities for physically handicapped, shut-in children adopted a resolution yesterday requesting Congress to appropriate $22,400 to launch the program in the District.

Action was taken at a meeting of the newly formed coordinating committee which is attempting to remedy conditions under which hundreds of Washington children, mentally alert, but too sick or crippled to attend school, group up in illiteracy.

Thirty persons who are members of 21 organizations attended the meeting, held at the council of Social Agencies headquarters, according to Mrs. Elizabeth Goodman, who presided. She is supervisor of the white division, District WPA handicapped children's teaching project.

The following groups had members at the meeting: Washington Society for the Hard of Hearing, Instructive Visiting Nurse Society, Council of Social Agencies, District Health Department, Anthony Bowen Patrons Club, Association for Education of Handicapped Children, Social Hygiene Society, D. C. Congress of Parent and Teachers, Christ Child Society, American Legion Auxiliary, Kiwanis Club.

Also District Federation of Women's Clubs, Vocational Rehabilitation Bureau, District WPA, faculties of Langdon and Anthony Bowen schools, social service departments of Chrildren's, Emergency, Providence and Gallinger Hospitals, National Youth Administration and the C. I. O. Auxiliary.

Mrs. Goodman said $22,400 was requested to initiate a permanent shut-in teaching project under the Board of Education because that is the figure approved last year by the Senate, only to be stricken from the District supply bill before its enactment.

At present, she said, nearly 200 white and colored children are receiving instruction in their homes from WPA visiting teachers. This project, however, will end in June and is not to be resumed next fall.

This Vacationist Must Go South Practically Nude

It was the first vacation in 20 years for George Smith, 63, retired Brooklyn, N. Y., real estate dealer, and you can bet your life it was going to be taken in style.

For Florida and Louisiana vacation spots, here's what Smith packed in six suitcases: Eleven suits, seven pairs of shoes, five hats, 18 silk polo shirts, six dozen ordinary shirts and a camera. The bill for the outfit came to $1,000.

Smith was all set for a big time—until last night when everything was stolen from his car, parked in the 900 block of Fourteenth street northwest.

B'nai B'rith Meets Tonight to Discuss Human Relations

An interfaith meeting to discuss "The Present Crisis in Human Relations" will be held today at 8 p. m. in the Jewish Community Center by Argo Lodge of B'Nai B'rith in cooperation with the National Conference of Christians and Jews.

Senator Walsh (Democrat), Massachusetts; Mrs. Georgette Howard, the Rev. Wilfrid Parsons, dean of Georgetown University graduate school, and Rabbi Solomon H. Metz, of Adas Israel Synagogue, will be the speakers.

Judge Joseph Fromberg, past president of the District Grand Lodge of B'Nai B'rith, will preside, and Mrs. Herman Hertzber, president of B'nai B'rith Auxiliary, will sing "America, the Beautiful."

Dopey the Dwarf Is Symbol of Mankind, Dr. J. L. Fendrich Tells Pugh Bible Class

Dr. J. Lowrey Fendrich of Metropolitan Presbyterian Church last night advised 200 Bible classmen, wives and friends against "taking themselves too seriously." He addressed the thirty-fourth annual banquet of the A. B. Pugh Men's Bible class at Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church.

"White hairs," he said, "come from taking ourselves too seriously, particularly in the realm of politics." He added that, while he was deeply concerned about religion, he was "not interested in denominations."

He urged the diners to "live expectantly and enthusiastically," then warned that "we're afraid of each other, afraid to live enthusiastically, and afraid to be sentimental."

Dr. Fendrich confided he has a "secret passion" for Dopey, famed seventh dwarf of Walt Disney's film because he "is the symbol of all mankind." Dr. John W. Rustin, Mount Vernon Place pastor, was toastmaster.

Justice Bolitha J. Laws, of the District Court, assured the classmen that he had profited tremendously from eight years as their teacher, characterizing it as "a rich and wonderful experience."

Page McK. Etchison, president of the District of Columbia Organized Bible Class Association, of which the class is a member, praised the work of the Pugh unit, and said that Bible classes' work must embrace the entire program of the church.

Class President Frank Amick presided over the dinner; Judge Eugene Black, of the Board of Tax Appeals, gave the benediction; Dr. Clifton Clark, superintendent of the Mount Vernon Sunday school, the invocation, and Deane Shure, choir leader, conducted group singing. Special music was provided by Harry McMains and Mrs. Roy North.

Other guests were former Class President and Mrs. Daniel A. Dollarhide, Mrs. Frank Amick, Mrs. John W. Rustin, Mrs. Page Etchison, Mrs. Deane Shure, Roy North, E. H. Reed, vice president of the class, and others. Youngest guest present was 9-year-old Elizabeth Ann Freeman, accompanied by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Freeman.

Good to Look at Is Jeanette MacDonald

Film Star Chats Before Tonight's Concert; Fred Astaire and Eleanor Powell Together In a Dancing Film by Cole Porter

By Richard C. Coe.
Substituting for Nelson B. Bell.

LOOKING FOR ALL the world as if she had stepped right out of the Technicolored "Sweethearts," by which she did so well, Jeanette MacDonald answered questions, asked some, yesterday afternoon at the Shoreham. The focal point of a semicircle of scribes, the film star was, above all, an eyeful.

First, cinematically celebrated as the starring partner of Maurice Chevalier, and now particularly famed for her costarring musicals with Nelson Eddy, Miss MacDonald is in the Capital as a concert soprano whose solo recital tonight in Constitution Hall is already all but sold out. With one-time Metropolitan Opera Conductor Guiseppe Bamboschek as her accompanist, Miss MacDonald will sing songs and arias from Mozart, Wolf, Gounod, Debussy, Hagemann and devote her encores to numbers which she has brought to the screen.

Her hair is auburn as the color process revealed it to be in the Victor Herbert film and her feet are so tiny that they seem mere vanishing points for a slim, svelt figure. The color of her suit was something we wouldn't like to lay our money on, but the never-at-a-loss-for-a-word film star allowed that it might be that of an Irish setter. The complete effect, whatever the detail, was strikingly adapted to those red-gold tresses.

After a round of visits yesterday, Miss MacDonald will spend today resting, studying and preparing for this evening's concert, a serious effort which she is taking seriously. A slight walk in snow shoes around Rock Creek Park is the only jaunt allowed.

Husband Gene Raymond, leading man in numberless films, is a composer and pianist at heart and on Miss McDonald's program tonight will be one of his songs, "Let Me Always Sing." Speaking as a musician Miss MacDonald defends her husband's song. To our question on the possibility of the husband-wife musical duo touring the concert halls, the prima donna answered as Mrs. Raymond: "It wouldn't work. We've both very strong natures and I'm afraid that we might pull in opposite directions. I might follow him, too, and the accompanist, you know, has the difficult job of remaining carefully in the background." As to the rumor that the MacDonald-Eddy combination might be applied to next season's concert tours, there is no truth in it. Why should two artists, who are able to fill a hall apiece, join forces? They are doing very nicely on their own, thank you.

After this tour, two films are in preparation on the M-G-M lot for the star, who makes but two films a year. One of these is "I Married an Angel," the musical comedy in which dancing Zorina made such a hit. Originally this was a Viennese satire but, because of the Zorina toes, it became a dancer's vehicle on the stage. Not so naturally this will revert to its original form for Miss MacDonald's screen appearance.

We say "not so naturally" because the singing star's earliest public successes were as a dancer in musical comedy. We remember "Sunny Days," with Frank MacIntyre, in which the reviewers couldn't say enough about the "graceful" Miss MacDonald. Her voice was secondary then. Her first private success, by the way, was at the age of 3 when she sang out loud and then applauded herself. Dancing doesn't blend so well with singing, so nowadays when she is to dance, La MacDonald spends a couple of months getting in shape.

But she has spent some years getting in shape for this concert tour and it is when that is discussed that the MacDonald eyes burn brightest.

That combination of Fred Astaire and Eleanor Powell for "Broadway Melody of 1940" has resulted, quite as it should, in dancing episodes that are as nimble as any the screen has captured. Yesterday afternoon's screening revealed that to boot (!) this unbeatable pair has a partner in the cast who turns in a performance on a par with the tapsters. We expected a lot from Astaire and Powell, and got it, but we hadn't looked for such equally elegant song and dance from George Murphy. Early in the film he and Fred have a number "Please Don't Monkey With Broadway" that is a pip. The music and lyrics are by that resourceful versifier, Cole Porter, who includes his "Begin the Beguine" for the two stars. This picture opens Friday at the Capitol and will justly have the song and dance enthusiasts forming to the right.

Personal aside to N. B. B. As you can see, there is much going on here these days and as soon as screenings and the snow let up, I'm going out to ring your doorbell. Hope it's not too loud a doorbell, for then if you're sleeping it won't wake you.

FAST FLASHES: Ted Lewis and his orchestra come into the Earle for the week beginning Friday, March 8. Sam Jack Kaufman returns to the Capitol Friday morning with a medley of "Gershwiniana." Borah Minevitch and his Harmonica Rascals open a four-day engagement at the northeast Atlas on Saturday. Film critics of the Nation's daily press have voted "Good-by Mr. Chips" the outstanding motion picture for 1939, Robert Donat the best actor and Bette Davis the best actress.

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Feb. 27.

Twentieth Century outfoxed RKO and actually bought "Tobacco Road" for John Ford. So you won't see Charles Laughton in it . . . The same studio's trying to sign Marlene Dietrich for "Dance Hall." Paramount's after Charles Boyer for "Victory" and Claudette Colbert's next picture at Paramount will be "Arise, My Love," directed by Mitch Leisen . . . This also may introduce her divorce to the world, which I'm told has gone way beyond the rumor stage. Too bad, because everybody thought they were one of Hollywood's happiest couples.

Irene Dunne is in the midst of her greatest indecision. Columbia wants her for "The First Woman Doctor;" Charles Rogers of Columbia and the women of America want her to play "Jane Adams of Hull House." She really is the women's choice. You see, Jane Adams, having been one of our greatest philanthropists and devoted her life to service, must be played by a woman without any taint or suspicion of scandal . . . And Katherine Emery of the New York stage will be teamed with Miriam Hopkins in "January Heights" at Warners.

Connie Bennett returns to Hollywood in a couple of weeks, accompanied by her new romantic leading man, which may complicate life a little on the west coast. And her former boyfriend, Gilbert Roland, is still carrying the torch, but high . . . And Joan Bennett will return to her former state of blonde beauty. Even she's a little fed up with that dark hair—hurrah, hurrah! . . . And you're in for a treat when you see Lorraine Day in Eddie Small's picture, "My Son, My Son." She's sensational; gosh, I didn't know the girl could act like that. She completely puts the two stars, Madeleine Carroll and Brian Aherne, in the shade.

Did you know that Sidney Franklin, Metro producer and writer, wrote "Bambi" for Walt Disney? There are few men in the business who have the vision and sensitive insight into stories that Sidney has . . . Before he uses a period, he's worn out the commas, question marks, exclamation points, semicolons, dashes and double xx. And seldom uses the letter "I." Sometimes you can tell the character of a man by just looking at his typewriter . . . And speaking of Walt Disney, did you know his fertile brain never stops working—even when he's on vacation? At the B-Bar-H Ranch in Palm Springs, where he often goes for relaxation, he's been known to sit and watch the antics of a squirrel, a beetle, or similar wee beast, for hours at a time, getting new ideas. Well, it's okay with us—we can always use a few more.

When Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt visited United Artists not so long ago, she mentioned her visit the following day in her column, "My Day." And she intimated that there was need for more culture in pictures, presuming, no doubt, that Jimmy could and would— supply it. Wonder what she thinks of Jimmy's "The Bat" as a contribution to culture?

And Now a Very Serious Carole

CAROLE LOMBARD AND BRIAN AHERNE
In "Vigil in the Night," opening tomorrow at RKO-Keith's, Miss Lombard puts aside clowning for a characterization of a nurse struggling to uphold the ideals of her profession. Brian Aherne is a physician hewing to the same objective DEFEAT: Jed Prouty portrays the role of "Pa" Jones, in M.-G.-M.'s series called "The Jones Family." When his option came up for renewal recently, Prouty demanded an increase—because he felt that he had become an integral part of the series and couldn't be replaced . . . The producers took him into a projection room, and showed him an emergency scene—a hospital shot, wherein a nurse emerges from a room, shakes her head sadly, and sighs: "It looks awfully bad for Pa. He may not have long to live." . . . "Pa" Jones Prouty thereby was induced to forego his increase.

LAW: Elizabeth Hawes saw Justice Felix Frankfurter at his office, and asked him whether the law required that, before a man may be named to the Supreme Court bench, he must be an attorney . . . "I never thought of that," said Frankfurter . . . He retired to the law library in the courthouse, and examined the law covering these facts. Then he returned, and confessed: "Frankly, I don't know."

ENTERPRISE: Herman Mankiewicz has recovered from his auto accident and now is writing the Orson Welles radio program . . . Mankiewic, admires Welles for having obtained a 4-way movie contract—producer-director-writer-actor . . . "How about you, Herman?" he was asked "What about your movie career?" . . . "I've got a 2-way contract at Republic Pictures," he informed. "Producer-janitor."

AMITY: Tallulah Bankhead returned to her hotel apartment at dawn, and asked the clerk: "Any messages for me?" . . . "No, Miss Bankhead," he assured her. "No message . . . Oh, well—why should there be?" Tallulah shrugged. "I've been out with everybody I know."

CHANCE: Last Sunday Norman Krasna, the scenarist, tendered a party, and among the guests were David and Myron Selznick, who started a high-stake poker game after dinner . . . During one deal, David Selznick kept raising and reraising, until the pot was a fabulous one. When the show-down came, he lost—and revealed that he had been holding only a pair of sevens . . . Myron stared at David, and told him: "And you're the guy to whom we gave four million dollars—to make 'Gone With the Wind.'"

ACCORD: The strike at the Brooklyn Union Gas Co., which began in 1936 and which has been the subject of a protracted legal battle before the labor board and the appellate courts, will be settled within the next few days . . . The settlement will include an agreement to rehire some of the discharged employes—about 15—and the payment of about $40,000 in back salaries.

CHATTER: George Jessel will fly to Hollywood this week, to try and sign Mae West for his movie productions in the East . . . Corey Ford, the writer, is a patient at the Harkness Pavillion . . . A new trade treaty, between the Dominican Republic, Puerto Rico and this country will be announced shortly . . . The beneficiaries of all Florida benefit shows have been notified that henceforth they'll have to be content with one show, staged at the Orange Bowl. No others will be licensed . . . The Rajah of Sarawak may come to America soon, to see his wife at the Gotham Hospital . . . John Harriman, son of Banker Oliver Harriman, has written "Winter Term," an anti-Mr. Chips novel about the swanky St. Marks School which he attended.

INTEREST: After the premiere of "Life with Father" in Chicago last week, Russel Crouse and H. L. Mencken went to visit Lillian Gish at her hotel. In the elevator, they discussed the show and the performances . . . Another passenger in the elevator heard them and said: "I'm interested in show business, too. What show were you discussing?" . . . Mencken told him, and identified Crouse as the co-author . . . "And what's your connection with show business?" the stranger was asked. He identified himself—Mr. George Schaeffer, head of RKO.

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, Feb. 27 (INS).—"East Lynne," the perennial tear-jerker and the sure-fire hit of road companies since mother was a girl, is about to be remade in the movies. Cross my heart! Bryan Foy, who has an eye on the box-office, will tell Lady Isabel's sad story once again, with Barbara Stanwyck as the misunderstood heroine and John Boles as her stern and unrelenting husband. I don't know how many times "East Lynne" has been made as a silent picture. Now in public domain, many a company grabbed it in the early days.

LOUELLA PARSONS

Ann Harding and Clive Brook made the first talkie version, which was the most pretentious "East Lynn" ever seen on stage or screen. Bryan Foy is sidestepping all kidding by calling his movie "The Story of East Lynne." Nevertheless, it's "East Lynne" for Warners next month.

Persistent rumors from England concern Robert Montgomery who, it is said, may live there permanently. I don't know whether that means that he intends to give up his citizenship—I wouldn't like to say such a thing. But he makes no secret of the fact that he'd much rather live in England than in Hollywood and that he is crazy about London. There is talk that Bob has bought the screen rights to "Rogue Mail," a novel by Geoffrey Houshold, and if that is the case, he is probably looking forward to producing independently in England when his contract with M-G-M is ended.

One of John Barrymore's wives knows all his foibles, his charm and his good qualities—and how well she tells the story of the fabulous Barrymore. I speak of Michael Strange, gifted socialite poet who John married at the height of his career and later divorced—the mother of his daughter, Diane. Mrs. Barrymore has put the story of John into her memoirs and it is so interesting I couldn't put the galley proofs down until I had finished. Her Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Cary Grant and Constance Worth a rather surprising Hollywood Brown Derby twosome. They were joined by another man, but I hear authoritatively that Connie, who was formerly Mrs. George Brent, was with Cary; Ann Sheridan and Bruce Cabot also a Derby twosome; Edmund Goulding, whose life hung in the balance for days, was able to leave the hospital Saturday; the rumors Ruth and Dick Foran have reconciled are denied by the lady herself. She is living at the Beverly Wilshire and came here only to see her children; the Eddie Hillmans (Lady June Inverclyde), will reconcile any day now; Alex D'Arcy, once Arleen Whelan's big moment, with Marguerite Chapman at Ciro's. Arleen was with Ken Murray and Ken really acts serious this time. So many stars were at Ciro's Saturday night it looked like New Year's Eve; the rumor was hot over the week-end that Jackie Coogan and Sugar Geise had eloped but there was no truth in the gossip, for Jackie's divorce won't be final for six months.

Jimmie Stewart and Olivia de Havilland, who have been cooling, surprised everyone by walking into the Metro Studio Club dance together; Spencer Tracy nursed a sore throat in the hospital over the week-end. He was able to return to work yesterday;

That's all for today. See you tomorrow.

Groome, commander; Emma Howard, nurse at the hospital, and Edward V. Ditto, chairman of the dance committee. The dance will be given Saturday night at the New Colonial Hotel

Vincent B. Costello Post Auxiliary Will Sponsor Benefit Tomorrow; Proceeds Will Aid Children's Fund

Plans for five week-end card parties whose ticket proceeds will go into The Post-WJSV blood and serum bank fund for Children's Hospital were announced yesterday.

Tomorrow night the women's auxiliary of Vincent B. Costello Post, American Legion, will sponsor a party to be held at 217 Seaton place northeast.

On the following night the James E. Walker Post and auxiliary will "play bridge for blood" at the Twelfth Street Y. M. C. A.

Three parties are scheduled Saturday: The United Daughters of the Confederacy in the afternoon at Confederate Memorial Hall, 1322 Vermont avenue northwest, and the program sponsored jointly by the 40 and 8 and the 8 and 40 to be held in Pythian Temple that night. Another Saturday night benefit is that of the Twenty-ninth Division Association, Post 29, at the Colonial Hotel.

Proceeds collected to date in the campaign neared the $3,000 mark yesterday. Latest receipts included $35.47 raised at a card party and dance February 14 of the National Cathedral Post, American Legion, and $10 from the women's auxiliary of the legion's Lincoln Post.

Among major benefits yet to be held are the Connecticut Avenue Association fashion show March 11 and the Variety Club party March 30.

D. C. Court Rights Bill Given House

The House Judiciary Committee yesterday reported a bill designed to give District residents the same rights in United States District Courts as have citizens of the States.

The bill amends the judicial code to allow the District Courts to hear suits between citizens of the District and the States. It was explained that a District resident now must file civil suits against a citizen of a State in the latter's courts. The proposed legislation would enable him to take the case to the District Court in Washington.

THE INTIMATE SECRETS OF A PRIVATE NURSE

The first authentic, "inside" revelation of the cloistered, code-bound world of woman's most intimate profession—probing deeply and dramatically the souls of those bitter women who know men too well, yet must somehow find love in the midst of terror, toil and disillusionment.

BY THE FAMOUS DOCTOR-AUTHOR OF "THE CITADEL"

Dr. Cronin surpasses his most memorable screen success in this triumphant drama of one girl's heroic sacrifice and another's amazing redemption—unforgettably gripping in its conflict of love and honor—its powerful drama made trebly vivid and exciting by three brilliant stars.

WASHINGTON: WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 28, 1940 X*

Eastern Five Wins Overtime Thriller, 32 to 30

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Orlando, Fla., Feb. 27.

In a special sort of way the big-time lady golfers are something to see, of course. They pound the daylights out of the ball, they score well, and they can give a bite to a niblick shot that would stir the envy of any masculine bruiser.

POVICH

But you may have them. We mean the top-flight performers of the feminine golf brigade. We saw them in the Central Florida Women's tournament, most all of the big shots in the women's golf, and they don't play the game; they battle it.

They're amateur golfers, of course, but you never saw a grimmer-faced lot. Femininity goes out the window when the gals step up to the first tee. If there were a smile or a chuckle in the entire tournament we didn't see it. The game is travail to the girls. A 6-foot putt isn't merely a 6-foot putt. It's firstly a seurveying job. Then comes the business of gritting teeth. Next, determined strides toward the spot of the ball and a few testing grips on the club. Then the job of mustering a glint in the eye and, eventually, bated breath and the stroking of the putt.

The whole business is ill-becoming the girls, who ought to be playing golf for the fun of it or downtown shopping for pretties. It's a game for the war-horses, this important tournament play. The frail young things are at a distinct disadvantage. They don't have the bulk to keep up with their golfing sisters, and when they do have the bulk they lack style, of course.

Doting fathers and mothers are probably responsible as anyone else for the senseless seriousness with which the girls attack the game. We saw one portrayal of this parental desire to bask in the reflected glory of a tournament winner when one comely little lass stepped to the tee to drive.

She was pretty enough. Off the golf course she was probably downright attractive. But on the tee was wearing the hard look of something hunted. And small wonder. Because mother had just whispered:

"Don't forget, down the middle, darling."

And daddy was chiming in with, "keep your eye on the ball darling."

Darling knew that she had dern sight better keep her eye on the ball and hit it down the middle or she was going to make mother and dad awfully mad about the whole thing. How could they face the folks back in Chicago if their pet were eliminated in the first round, particularly since they had always blushingly agreed that darling was a coming champion. The blushing, of course, was phoney.

For no reason at all, women's golf has become high-pressure stuff. Gaiety and laughter are distinctly out. The gals play for the headlines, as one of them frankly confessed in the tournament here when a well wisher casually remarked:

"They're treating you rotten in the local papers, Gracie. You've been winning your matches but that tall girl from California and that ash-blonde from Chicago has been getting all the write-ups."

Gracie wasn't very much distressed. "I know it," she said. "But the New Jersey papers are playing me up real well. My picture was in three times this week."

And another thing. The skirts have apparently vanished from women's golf. Pants are the vogue, even for the buxom babes who look like the rear view of something putting to sea. We wouldn't know what was modish if it jumped up and bit us, but we know that omen golfers in pants, particularly those flapping sailcloth affairs, are about as graceful as a baby hippo off balance.

For a goodly share of the golfing gals it's plain to see why they are tournament devotees. Their golf is their only source of appeal, their only attention-calling asset. But why the others enter the big tournament wars (and we mean wars) is an eternal mystery. They can't be playing for the fun of it, because there is no evidence that they have any fun, and certainly the headlines they command isn't worth the worry they show.

When this department's daughter is born, and when she becomes of golfing age, we'll have a short, parental speech ready. We're gonna tell her: "All right, if you want to play golf. Go ahead and play it the best you can. It's a swell game. But be sure it's nothing more than a game. If we watch you in a tournament and find you've forgotten how to smile, we're taking your sticks away and throwing them into the lake. S'help us."

'No Man's Land' Proposed By Yale Basketball Coach

Leoffler Wants Neutral Zone 14 Feet In Diameter Under Each Basket

By the Associated Press

New Haven, Conn., Feb. 27.—A "No Man's Land" around each basket is proposed by Ken Loeffler, Yale's coach, to lessen the scoring advantage their height now gives tall players.

He would mark off a semicircle with a 14-foot diameter—7 feet on each side—under each basket and would not permit a player to enter this "no man's land" until the ball either had touched the hoop or backboard. He would be permitted to remain only about three seconds.

Loeffler's plan, the result of several years of private research, differs considerably from that of Dr. F. C. Allen, University of Kansas cage mentor and head of the national basketball research committee.

Allen has suggested drawing a 16-foot circle with the basket as a center. He would permit players to dribble in or out of the circle but they could not drive in and shoot if another player were in the ring. A team could, however, place a stationary guard in the circle to block scoring shots within the so-called safety ring.

Loeffler, who starred at Penn State and coached at Geneva before coming here in 1936, said his experiments showed a high majority of rebounds landed just outside of "no man's land."

"There seems to be a great deal of agitation against the big fellows who have been parking under the basket to 'dunk' in shots or take the ball off the backboard," said Loefller.

"If it is the intention of the rules committee to devise a means to lessen the advantages of the tall player, I believe the establishment of this 'no man's land' would be the solution."

Daughter's Birth Causes Smith's Coaching Dilemma

Philadelphia, Feb. 27 (AP).—She's a wee little girl. She didn't know a thing about it and she doesn't care.

Her name is Sandra Smith, and she unwittingly caused the controversy between Loyola University of Los Angeles and Villanova over whose football team her daddy—Maurice (Clipper) Smith—should coach.

Clipper announced two weeks ago he had tendered his resignation as Villanova coach to go to Loyola. Then Sandra was born.

"I guess there's no doubt about it," the Clipper mused. "If it hadn't been for the little one I would have left for California."

Villanova officials refused to accept his resignation.

However, all's well that ends well. Charles A. Bissonette, chairman of the Loyola athletic board, announced in Los Angeles last night that the Clipper had been released from any obligations to serve as Loyola coach.

Vince, Dominic, Joe To Take Over Florida

San Francisco, Feb. 27 (AP).—The DiMaggio invasion of Florida's spring baseball training camps will be completed within a week or so. With brother Vince, of the Cincinnati Reds, already on the ground, Dominic, of the Boston Red Sox, said he would leave tonight, followed in a few days by brother Joe, of the New York Yankees.

Dominic will travel by train with Joe Orengo, Sacramento shortstop destined for the St. Louis Cardinals camp.

Michigan Boxers Hurt in Auto Crash

Dubois, Pa., Feb. 27 (AP).—Members of the Michigan State boxing team were shaken up today in a collision of their bus and an automobile on a slippery highway near this western Pennsylvania community.

Curtis Marhall, of Pleasant Valley, an occupant of the automobile, was slightly hurt. The boxers, returning from Bucknell University, were delayed here while the bus was being repaired.

On the Line Takes Vacation

Bob Considine is on vacation. His column "On the Line," will be resumed on Sunday, March 10.

Three Outfielders Signed by Browns

St. Louis, Feb. 27 (AP).—Just before a small delegation of pitchers left today for training camp at San Antonio, Tex., the St. Louis Browns announced that three outfielders had signed their contracts or had come to salary terms.

They were Rip Radcliff, obtained from the White Sox during the winter, and Chet Laabs and Myril Hoag.

Suspension, Fine Faced By Leonard

Griffith Gives Pitcher Until Friday; Also Irked by Holdout Tactics of Pofahl

By Shirley Povich.

A Staff Correspondent

Orlando, Fla., Feb. 27.—Clark Griffith is holding the threat of fine and suspension over Dutch Leonard, unsigned star of the Nats' 1939 pitching staff, he admitted today with more than a trace of anger.

"Unless Leonard reports here by Friday and accepts the final offer I sent him last week, he'll be subject to both a suspension and a fine," said Griffith. "I've been very liberal with him and have made my last offer."

The Nats' holdout situation has boiled down to two stubborn cases—Leonard and Rookie Shortstop Jimmy Pofahl, Griffith revealed. He announced today that Cecil Travis had written him he would be in camp on Friday to discuss terms.

Can Be Harsh

"I will have no trouble in signing Travis," said Griffith, "but Leonard and Pofahl are exhausting my patience. I can be harsh if necessary."

Particularly is the Nats' owner piqued by the refusal of young Pofahl to sign a Washington contract. "He should be grateful for the chance to break into the big leagues," said Griffith. "I have treated him well, too, as far as salary offers go. I've offered him more than I ever gave any other first-year man . . . well, almost more."

Pofahl, it seems, has been maintaining a strict silence at his Fairbault, Minn., home, since returning unsigned the first contract Griffith sent him early in January. That contract was succeeded by another in which Griffith raised the salary terms, but without effect.

Pofahl in Doghouse

"I haven't heard from him for a month," said Griffith. "He is making a very bad impression on me. A young fellow in his position should not be too demanding. He has to make good first."

Both Leonard and Pofahl are operating from the vantage point of the knowledge that they are key men in the 1940 plans of the Nats. Big Leonard, who won 20 games with the sixth-place Washington team last season, is the only consistent winner on the staff. Three positions, shortstop, third base and rightfield revolve about Pofahl's talents.

Leonard has never before exhibited any stubbornness over salary terms, perhaps because he was never before in a position to demand a high stipend. He was given a generous bonus at the end of last season, according to Griffith, but reports are that he is demanding a $15,000 salary for 1940.

Patty Berg Wins S. A. Golf Medal

Ormond Beach, Fla., Feb. 27 (AP).—Patty Berg began her defense of her South Atlantic golf title today by shooting a 74, 3 under women's par, to win qualifying honors in the annual tournament.

The 22-year-old Minneapolis redhead put together a 35 and a 39 to finish three strokes in front of Betty Jameson, of San Antonio, Tex., the national champion, and Elizabeth Hicks, of Long Beach, Calif. Miss Jameson shot 38-38, and Miss Hicks 40-37.

Among low scorers were Mrs. T. E. Nolan, New Castle, Pa., 82; Dorothy Gardner, Steubenville, Ohio, 83; Norma Copic, Toledo, Ohio, 84; Mrs. Myron Davy, Washington, D. C., 86.

La Salle in Running For Tourney Invitation

Cumberland, Md., Feb. 27.—La Salle High School, winner of 14 out of 18 basketball games so far this season, is being considered for an invitation to the third annual Eastern States Catholic Interscholastic Basketball Tournament at Newport, R. I., March 28, 29 and 30. La Salle competed at the annual National Catholic tournament at Chicago in 1937 and 1938.

He Scored the Most Important Points in Eastern's Triumph

One look at the face of Neil Craig (center), and anyone would think he had just cashed a sweepstake ticket. All the little Eastern High substitute did, however, was score the points that beat Wilson in an overtime yesterday, putting Eastern in the Interhigh championship tournament. Gonzaga High Five Swamps Devitt, 36-20

Mulvihill, Counselman Set Winning Pace For 11th Victory

Preparing for its third meeting of the year with St. Johns next week, Gonzaga High swamped Devitt Prep yesterday on the I street court, 36-20, for its eleventh victory in 18 games.

The winners were never headed as they raced into a 10-6 lead after the first eight minutes, increased it to 16-8 at the half and won as they pleased. Devitt made numerous attempts to rally in the late stages but was outclassed.

Bob Mulvihill and Franny Counselman sparked the winning effort with 8 points each. Archie Panaga, former Central star, stood out for the losers with a like number.

Jockey's Wife Gets $200 Alimony

Los Angeles, Feb. 27 (AP).—Mrs. Lillian Hale Bierman, 19-year-old invalid wife of Jockey Carrol Bierman, was awarded $200 a month temporary alimony in Superior Court today.

Dr. Frank Newcomb testified Mrs. Bierman is suffering from a heart ailment which might prove fatal at any time. She is suing for separate maintenance.

Bierman, jockey for the Louis B. Mayer Stables, testified he has been earning $500 a month and received an additional $935 for winning the $10,000 San Carlos Handicap with Specify at Santa Anita February 17.

Bethesda Routs Blair, 51-30, as Fists Fly

A good old-fashioned brawl marked the windup of the basketball rivalry between Bethesda-Chevy Chase and Montgomery Blair last night at Ritchie Coliseum, College Park, the Bethesdans winning their second game from their rivals, 51-30, to take the mythical Montgomery County championship.

With a near-capacity crowd of 2,500 partisan fans in the stands until almost the end of the game, Bethesda ran into a ragged period in first half but came ahead in the second to win very much as it pleased.

With one minute and 15 seconds left, however, a tiny war broke out on the sidelines and extended all over the gym. At least 30 couples and trios were swinging with all their might as State police arrived on the scene. One pugilistic fan was tossed out of the gym, and the game, at Blair's Coach Cres Bride's request, called off at that point.

Jim Kinsman, of Bethesda, who was about to take a foul shot when the rioting began, got his toss all right, but in the semidark as half the lights in the gym were turned off.

Precipitating hostilities was the ejection of Blair's Johnny Norris with 2 minutes of the game left. Before he went out, however, a personal on Johnny Shumate and two technicals were called on him for talking back to officials. Shumate made all three throws good.

It was the torrid streak of Bob Cremins, playing one of his first full games with the Bethesdans, as well as Shumate's consistent point-making that pulled Bethesda out of a 17-15 lead at the half and gave it a 31-24 edge after three quarters. No one, least of all Blair, could stop the hot pair in the final period. Cremins accounted for 16 points and Shumate, 15.

A preliminary went to Bethesda jayvees, 21-12, as they took their twelfth straight victory.

BENNY McCOY

By the Associated Press

Anaheim, Calif., Feb. 27.—Benny McCoy, the Athletics' highly touted and highly priced second baseman, is suffering from a lame arm.

The condition, McCoy said, is minor but exasperating, and always overtakes him at about this stage of spring training. He added that from past experience it would wear off in a few days.

Although McCoy is careful in fielding, there has been no slackening off in his batting. Also doing right well at the plate is Outfielder Wally Moses, who believes he has finally healed a shoulder injured in a diamond crash two springs ago.

Don McNeill, Bowden Gain Semifinals

Pair Moves Round Ahead of Field in Indoor Net Tourney

By the Associated Press

New York, Feb. 27.—The men's singles division of the national indoor tennis championships today produced what can best be termed a foregone conclusion.

Don McNeill, who ranks No. 3 in the country and No. 2 in the seedings, defeated towering Al Jarvis, of Tenafly, N. J., 6—3, 6—2, 6—0. Frank Bowden, a member of the Seventh Regiment Club where the tournament is being held, boomed and blasted his way past Ladislaus Hecht, the trim little baseliner who once was a Czecho-Slovak Davis Cup star, 6—2, 6—1, 6—2.

This brought McNeill against Bowden for Thursday's semifinal match and also brought about the foregone conclusion that McNeill will beat Bowden on that occasion. The Oklahoma City youngster did so in the final round two years ago to win the title. Since then he has grown older and more experienced. Bowden merely has grown older.

The weapons which carried them into the next-to-last round are not dissimilar. Both put the ball in play with powerful service. Both have strong forehand drives, and a disposition to take the net more frequently than the average player.

But McNeill's strokes have more polish. Against Jarvis, who wields a mean serve himself and gets a lot of power out of his 6 feet 3, he took all the Jerseyite had to offer and turned it back with even more speed. His volleys and overheads were particularly admirable.

Bowden, against a man who stayed on the baseline to the bitter end, could play the game more simply. Usually his high-kicking service and low-flying drives were too much for Hecht to handle. Occasionally he mixed in a drop shot, just to add to Hecht's bewilderment in his first tournament on the boards.

While Bowden and McNeill were moving around ahead of the other four men's survivors, who include top-ranked Bobby Riggs, the list of women's quarter-finalists was completed. The four leading seeded players were among those to move ahead. The least difficulty was experienced by Mrs. Sarah Palfrey Fabyan, who didn't lose a game to Shirlie Norton, of New York. Katharine Winthrop, of Boston, Sharah's doubles partner, had the most trouble. It took her 25 games to beat Patricia Cumming, of Westfield, N. J., 9—7, 6—3.

Riggs and his Wimbledon championship doubles partner, Elwood Cooke, of Portland, Oreg., joined McNeill and J. Gilbert Hall, the No. 2 team, in the quarter-finals by defeating S. Ellsworth Davenport, jr., and R. J. Kelleher, of New York, 7—9, 6—2, 6—3.

Craig's Shot Puts Wilson Out of Race

Tide Joins Central, Western in Play-Off; Earhardt, Custer Costars With Sub

By Bill Burnett

Out of a swarm of players under the basket lurched Neil Craig, Eastern High substitute, to score the points that gave his team a 32-30 overtime victory over Woodrow Wilson yesterday, as well as a chance to defend the interhigh cage crown it has won for three years straight.

Coming after 2½ minutes of the extra period, Craig's pair of points accounted for Wilson's second setback at the hands of Eastern in a week. The first was by a 41-21 count. Craig's points also put Eastern in the title tournament starting Friday, its first foe being Central. Roosevelt and Western, the other two teams to qualify, will also clash in the first double-header.

Craig Is Amazed

Craig was almost as dumbfounded by his successful throw as was the meager crowd at Tech gym at the valiant stand put up by Wilson. The little sub, a first-year man, shook his head in disbelief as his shot settled in the cords.

Warren Earhardt and Bob Custer took as much credit for the victory as did Craig. The former, with 45 seconds of the regulation game left, spun dizzily in the air and rammed in a basket to knot the score at 30-30.

Custer's portion was 11 points scored at crucial intervals throughout the game. He took scoring honors for the game over Wilson's Roy Cowdrey and Moke MacDonald, who had nine each.

Custer's point-making provided Eastern's only score in the final period with the exception of Earhard't closing tallies. The lanky forward turned in six straight points to dig the Tide out of a 23-21 deficit at the end of the third quarter.

Wilson Begins Strongly

As in its previous beating by Eastern, Wilson started off like a whirlwind. It held its foe scoreless in the first period while it grabbed a 5-0 lead. Craig, Custer and Moe Shulman went into action in the second stanza, however, and the Tide's deficit was only one point at the half.

The lead changed hands six times in the third quarter, before the "break" that nearly spelled Eastern's doom. On the last play of the period, Shulman, Eastern's floor general, was called on a double foul with Roy Cowdrey. Neither made good, but it was the last personal Shulman had coming to him. He left the game as the Tide stands sighed in despair.

That Wilson came as close as it did, only to lose a heart breaker, was mainly due to the work of MacDonald. He was easily the best man on the floor in the losers' behalf. Cowdrey and little Jimmy Jackson played brilliant ball off both back boards.

Eagles, Orioles Deadlock, 5-5, in Rowdy, Overtime Game

Halt Streak At 10 Games Before 3,400

D. C. Club Takes Late Lead, Ripley Ties It; Knipfel Knocked Out, Courteau Also Hurt

By Jack Munhall.

Fighting an uphill battle through most of a brilliantly played overtime match, the Washington Eagles last night interrupted the Baltimore Orioles' ten-match winning streak by holding the Eastern League leaders to a 5-5 tie at Riverside Stadium.

The largest crowd of the season, about 3,400 fans, saw the Eagles overcome deficits of 1-0, 2-1 and 4-3 to finally take a 5-4 lead late in the third period and appear headed for a great victory. But the Orioles had courage, too, and less than 4 minutes before the end of regulation time they deadlocked the count for the third time when Carl Ripley fired one past Goalie Colvin.

Washington had gone ahead on one of the most spectacular goals of the season, a shot fired at 9:53 by little Kenney Partis even as he fell headlong to the ice and slid several yards on his face. Partis had received a pass from Len Burrage when skating directly toward the net. Just as he started his swing he was tripped but simultaneously he lunged with his stick and sent the puck whizzing past the startled Baltimore goal tender, Omer Kelly.

Go Into Overtime

The overtime period, consisting of ten minutes, was furiously contested, but afforded few scoring chances. Baltimore, apparently satisfied to accept a tie, waged a purely defensive battle while the Eagles tried in vain to score. Twice Washington came within inches of what would have been the deciding goal, once on a shot by Roy Covert which almost slithered between Kelly's outstretched legs, and again on a flip by Ramsay which landed just outside the net.

Burrage and Alan Foster were the heroes of Washington's game comeback. Burrage was credited with five assists, an almost unheard-of feat for a defenseman, while Foster, continuing his recent hot scoring pace, slapped in a pair of goals. His first point tied the score at 4-4 and his second put the Eagles in the van, 5-4.

Although Washington had the puck in enemy territory for most of the 20 minutes, the Orioles picked up a 1-to-0 lead in a very fast and rough first period.

No penalties were called although tripping and high-sticking was rampant. Two Washington players were slightly injured. Ross Knipfel, big defense man, was knocked unconscious midway of the session when his head struck the boards after a terrific collision with George Boll, burly Baltimore defense. Later Bunny McKillop, Eagles' wing, received a bloody nose when hit in the face with a stick.

The Orioles made their goal at 10:25 when Carl Ripley poked in the rebound off a shot by Art Erickson from close by.

Cairns Scores

The Orioles maintained their one goal advantage in the second period as each team scored twice to punctuate lightning-like action.

After Baltimore had boosted its lead to 2-0 when Guy Roach poked in a rebound on a shot that was screened from Eagles' Goalie Les Colvin, Washington received a break in the nature of the first penalty of the match.

Late in the period Jack Tuten, Orioles' defense, was given a two-minute penalty for tripping and the Orioles, who had been dominating the period, were set back on their heels. Washington took advantage of Tuten's absence almost immediately to score its first point, Bill Cairns netting one on assists from Len Burrage and Alan Foster.

Orioles Strike Again

The Orioles, however, fought back to go ahead, 3 to 1, as Bill Moe counted a beauty from about 15 feet out on a splendid pass from Center George Grigor. This goal followed the Eagles' first point by only 18 seconds.

Washington pulled up to 3 to 2 at 18:08 just before Tuten returned to the ice, when Hal Dewey slipped in the best shot of the match while skating full speed into a corner. He was helped on his fine play by the passing of Burrage.

Alan Kuntz made his first home appearance in six weeks for the Eagles when he entered the game in the second period. Kuntz, who has been out with a broken wrist, wasn't to have played, but Coach Mackenzie decided to take a chance after Paul Courteau broke a blood vessel in his left arm and had to retire for the evening.

Bladensburg Five Beats Own Coach's Team

Playing against his own team, Coach Ray Larrabee rang up 29 points for the Bladensburg High School faculty quintet yesterday, but two goals scored by Larson in the last 15 seconds of play gave the varsity the game, 47-45.

Larson, with 16, and Reinoehl, with 14, led the varsity's scoring spree. Larrabee, former Trenton Teachers College star, has scored 28 and 20 in previous games for the faculty.

A. U., Western Maryland Play Here Tonight; Md. U. Off for Raleigh

American University will hold the local basketball spotlight as Maryland bundles is players off for the Southern Conference tournament, opening tomorrow in Raleigh, N. C.

The Eagles will present a revised line-up against Western Maryland at 8:30 tonight at the A. U. gym in an effort to avenge an early season defeat at the hands of the Green Terrors.

Barty Reese and H. G. Morrison will be newcomers to the American line-up, replacing forwards Keene Roadman and Archie Norford. Otherwise the starting team will present the familiar faces of Capt. George Brown and Hugo Schulze, at guards, and Carl Byham at center.

The Eagles, who have won four of ten games this season, have two more games this week, hitting the road to meet Drexel Friday and Swarthmore Saturday. Swarthmore has one of the strongest little teams in the East, having won 12 straight games.

Ten Maryland players will make the trip to Raleigh. They include the starting five of George DeWitt, Mearle Duvall, Bill Rea, Milton Mulitz and Pershing Mondorff, and reserves Adam Bengoechea, Charley Weidinger, Gene Ochsenrieter, Leon Vannais and Arthur Woodward.

Maryland, winner of 7 of 12 Conference games, is unseeded in the tournament. The Terps will meet Washington and Lee, its two-time conqueror this season, in the opening round.

Bobby Ivy In Semifinal Fight Monday

Bobby (Poison) Ivy, promising featherweight fighter from Hartford, Conn., has been signed for the eight-round preliminary semifinal on the Buddy Scott-Nick Fiorentino heavyweight fight card Monday night in Turner's arena.

Ivy, claimant of the New England 127-pound crown, will get an opportunity to dust off a bit of local talent known as Marcus Pitts in an eight-round prelude to the ten-rounder that marks Joe Turner's return to the promotional field.

A protoge of Bat Battalino, former world's champion, Ivy has an impressive record, enhanced by victories over Tony Dupre, former titleholder, and Armanda Sicilia—both by knockouts.

Scott, who will be making his first appearance in Washington in more than a year, will come in Friday to complete his training, while Fiorentino is expected to complete his conditioning in Philadelphia.

Washington A. A. Lists Field Day For April 13

A break for the District's long suffering adults appeared in store last night as the Washington Athletic Association became official and the first field day was set for April 13.

Feature of the event will be a lacrosse game between the Washington A. A. and the Baltimore A. C. Exhibitions in track and field events, horseshoe pitching, weight lifting and badminton also will be included. The association meets again Tuesday at Force School. Interested parties call Dick Tennyson, Michigan 1155.

Hoyas Seek Upset of N.Y.U. Five Tonight

Defeat of Powerful Violets Would Mean Successful Season

Georgetown University's basketball team bids for one of the outstanding upsets of the Eastern intercollegiate season tonight when it invades Madison Square Garden for a game with New York University's powerful Violets.

The Hoyas, who have experienced a somewhat disappointing season thus far, will count their campaign an unqualified success if they surprise the Violets.

Georgetown scored an upset of Penn State's formidable Nittany Lions their last time out and are confident of giving a creditable account of themselves tonight.

Back in 1935 when the Violets were going through undefeated Coach Elmer Ripley's Yale tossers upset New York U. in an extra-period game.

In 1936 an in-and-out Georgetown team jolted the Violets after they had won 20 consecutive games, 36 to 24.

Coach Ripley tonight will start the same Georgetown lineup that scored over Penn State, namely, Jim Kiernan and Buddy O'Grady, forwards; Jim Giebel, center, and Irving Rizzi and Capt. John Schmitt, guards.

Capon Bridge Wins

Martinsburg, W. Va., Feb. 27.—Capon Bridge High's sextet defeated Hedgesville High yesterday at Hedgesville, 24-17. Pacing the winners was Lockhart, with 9 points, while L. Keedy was high for the losers with 8.

Blozis to Lead G. U. Group to New York For Added Laurels

Fifteen Georgetown University athletes will be enrolled in seven events Saturday afternoon and night when the Hoyas seek more laurels in the nineteenth track and field meet sponsored by the Intercollegiate Association of Amateur Athletes of America at Madison Square Garden in New York.

Outstanding among Georgetown's entries, of course, will be Al Blozis, football-playing weight man, who has set new world indoor records in his last two appearances at the Garden.

Blozis, probably the most colorful athlete in Georgetown's history, refuses to predict more marks, but remains in hard training while looking ahead to the remainder of the indoor and the approach of the open air season.

In another featured event Saturday, Georgetown's fine mile relay team goes to the post, a squad comprised of Capt. Vincent Braun, John Motzenbecker, George Tucknott, Morty Alnwick, George Bogan, Charles Neumeyer, Ken Lyden and Charles Williams.

Otherwise, Georgetown's 2-mile relay team will be represented by Braun, Lyden, Williams, Alnwick, Vincent and Carnevale; Braun and Williams will compete in the 1,000-yard run; Bogan and Alnwick in the 60-yard dash, and Carnevale in the 1-mile run.

Georgetown's candidates in the Freshman Medley Relay will be Jim Fish, Peter McAtee, Jack Doolan, Phil Graves and Jim Hickey.

Delhuds, J. C. C. Fives Play Tonight

Delaware & Hudson's tossers will make a determined effort to remain in the running for the second half Heurich Amateur Basketball League's championship tonight when they meet the Jewish Community Center's Big Five at Heurich Gymnasium at 9 o'clock.

Q. & S. Laundry engages United Clay Products in a supporting game at 8 o'clock.

D. & H., first-half Heurich League champion, recently was upset by the league-leading United Typewriters and must win tonight to remain in the second-half title race.

The Jewish Community Center's Big Five, a principal in the first-half playoff, currently is tied with Delaware & Hudson for runner-up in the league.

'Rassle' Program Set for Thursday

The supporting card for Thursday night's dramatic offering in Promoter Joe Turner's wrestling emporium was completed yesterday. Lou Plummer and Joe Cox will battle in the main affair.

Abie Coleman will waltz with Jim Coffield, Ralph Garibaldi will take on Jim Parker, Tommy O'Toole meets Tommy Rae and Cliff Olson tackles Jim Austeri.

25 Events Scheduled In C. U. Meet Saturday

Maki Mile, Abbey 50, Rector's 1,000 Are Features; Two Scholastic Races Will Be Held in Afternoon at Brookland

Dorsey Griffith, director of Catholic University's indoor track meet Saturday night for the benefit of the Finnish Relief Fund, announced there would be 25 events in all on the program.

Because of the many entries, the 45-yard high hurdles and the 50-yard dash for high and prep schools will be run off in the afternoon. The first event on the night program, starting at 7:30 p. m., will be the intercollegiate 45-yard high hurdle race.

This year, with the addition of the Maki Mile, there will be three features of the games. Interest in the Maki Mile is at white heat because of the excellent field which includes Glenn Cunningham, Gene Venzke, Archie San Romani, Joey McCluskey, Luigi Beccali and Mason Chronister.

Chronister, the University of Maryland star, is rated a fine chance in the fast company because of his excellent effort in the mile at the Southern Conference games in Chapel Hill last week. The Terp star was beaten by inches in the S. I. C. mile as Davis, of North Carolina, won to set a new record of 4:12.5, slicing almost eight seconds from the old standard.

Griffith announced the Maki Mile would go on at 9:10, to be followed by the A. A. U. Invitation Mile and the other two features of the meet, the Abbey Club 50 and the Rector's 1,000.

Maryland, with 20 men, is second only to Navy in the matter of entrants. The Terrapins again will be favored to keep their team title because of the caliber of their line-up Maryland finished second to North Carolina in the S. I. C. games but had a couple of bad breaks. The Terps will have a strong contender in virtually every event and will parade an impressive list of record holders. Jim Kehoe, who won the Conference 880 in the record-breaking time of 1:55.1 last week, will defend his Rector's 1,000 title against Vincent Healey, Navy captain, who won the nonconference title.

Brewers Play Celtics Tonight In Troy, N. Y.

Face Elimination or Tie For 2d Place in Pro American League Race

Confronted with the alternative of either deadlocking the Philadelphia Sphas for the American Basketball League's lead or of being eliminated from the American Basketball League's championship race, the Washington Heurich Brewers are to depart for Troy, N. Y., today.

The Brewers meet the powerful Troy-Celtics in a crucial game tonight while tomorrow night they engage the Philadelphia Sphas in an exhibition at Norristown, Pa.

Although the Troy-Celtics have won two of their last three games from the Brewers, they were routed by the Heurichmen in Troy recently, 23 to 8, and will be out for revenge tonight.

The Brewers will be strengthened tonight by the return to action of Thomas (Whitey) Wilson, veteran forward, who has been inactive recently due to a lame knee.

The Brewers are to close their American League season in Philadelphia's Convention Hall Saturday night at 9 o'clock when they meet the Baltimore Clippers in a tripleheader. The New York Jewels and Philadelphia Sphas will meet on the same card.

R.-M. A. to Play Wilson Gridders

Special Dispatch to The Post

Front Royal, Feb. 27.—Randolph-Macon Academy will close its 1940 football season here November 15 with Woodrow Wilson High School of Washington, D. C.

Athletic Director G. W. Riddick, announcing an eight-game schedule for the Yellow Jackets, said the opening game will be played here October 9 against Fishburne Military School, of Waynesboro. Other teams on the cadet schedule are Miller School, Augusta Military Academy, Woodberry Forest, Episcopal High School, Randolph-Macon College Frosh and Virginia Episcopal School.

Mrs. Ripper Collins Wins Divorce in N. Y.

Rochester, N. Y., Feb. 27 (AP).—Mrs. Helen F. Collins, wife of James (Ripper) Collins, first baseman on the Los Angeles Club, of the Pacific Coast League, today won an interlocutory degree of divorce in State Supreme Court here before Justice William F. Love. Under terms of a property settlement, according to attorneys, she will have custody of their three children.

FINER HIGHBALLS

This is the 4-to-1 Way

The recommended mixture for an ideal highball is 1 part Seagram's "V.O." to 4 parts soda and ice (or use plain water and ice, if you prefer, in the same proportions).

TO SATISFY the growing demand for finer highballs, Seagram's "V.O.", the finest of Canadian whiskies, is now specially blended for use with soda. More delicate than ever, it has a unique compatibility with sparkling water.

If the occasion calls for a cocktail, Seagram's "V.O." is delicious in a Manhattan, Old Fashioned or Whisky Sour.

Shot Put Wins Ponce De Leon Purse, Feature at Hialeah

Mrs. Evans' Entry Closes With Rush

Early Settler Beaten A Neck; Chance Run, At $61.50, Takes First in Photo

By the Associated Press

Hialeah Park, Fla., Feb. 27.—The Ponce de Leon Purse, a mile and a furlong test for high class platers, served as the feature of a program that produced plenty of chances for long-shot players to stock up in greenbacks here today. By the time the headliner came up, most of the form followers had thrown away their figures and substituted the hatpin system.

Shot Put, after a long string of reverses, captured the Ponce de Leon in one of the numerous tight finishes of the afternoon. The Mrs. M. Evans colorbearer squeezed home by a neck to return $9 for $2. W. C. Winfrey's Early Settler garnered the place, two lengths better than P. L. Kelley's Cardinalis, favorite in the field of $6,000-$5,000 claiming campaigners. The time was 1:50 3-5.

Packer Up On Winner

Merrill Packer, an up-and-coming apprentice lad who is running second to Jack Flinchum in the race for the gold watch awaiting the leading "bug boy" here, was astride Shot Put. Earlier in the day the same boy had scored on Balmy Spring, which paid $70.30.

Shot Put was running next to last until the head of the stretch. Cardinalis, whose racing has been mostly in sprints, set the pace as expected, only to stop in the last furlong. Shot Put closed with a rush and outfinished Early Settler.

The sixth close finish in seven starts took place when Transmitter just got up to nose out the favored Mucho Gusto at the end of the mile and a furlong next-to-closing contest. Off Guard trailed the pair by four lengths. Mucho Gusto encouraged his many backers by holding the lead with daylight to spare while disposing of Off Guard and Broad Vision. The old fellow held on tenaciously when challenged by Transmitter through the final furlong, but was nipped right on the wire. Transmitter was a 3-to-1 shot.

Thrilling Finish

One of the most exciting blanket finishes of the season developed with the running of the initial event, a 3-furlong dash for 2-year-old maiden colts and geldings. The camera's verdict went to Chance Run, a $61.50 for $2 shot making his first public appearance. Hi Pov received the place, with General Jack third.

2 Fives to Defend Post Tourney Crowns

United Typewriters, Merrick Boys to Return; Rockville Girls Abandon Title in A. A. U.

Although concentrating this year on only three classes, action in the District A. A. U. championship basketball tournament, again sponsored by The Post, promises to be as hot, if not hotter than ever. Two of the three 1939 champions will see action in the battles due to start next Monday night at Heurich's gymnasium. The United Typewriters, winners of the unlimited division, will be back to try to stave off formidable opposition.

In the 145-pound class, the Merrick Boys Club returns to meet another strong array of clubs just under the unlimited division in weight but not ability. The Rockville Girls will not be in the tournament as a team. Marriages have forced Rockville out of the picture this season although several of the players, including Margaret Lanier, of the famed Suburban Club will carry the banner of Treasury.

Due to the recreation leagues and other fast competition hereabouts, the unlimited division should prove a sizzler. Among the many teams that expect to give United Typewriter trouble are Bolling Field, J. C. C., Atchison-Keller Washington Flour, Petworth, Delaware & Hudson and F. B. I.

Merrick had the fight of its life to win last year and the 145-pound class will be a wide open affair despite the reappearance of the champions. Chief among the contenders will be J. C. C.

The absence of Rockville also makes the girls' division an "anybody's" race. Rockville has reigned supreme for a long time in this section although it was given a tussle in two games last year. The outstanding girls' teams slated to compete in the tournament are Treasury, Agriculture and F. B. I.

It is expected that Mount Rainier and Hyattsville will be represented again this year. These teams were a bit too young to cope successfully with Rockville last season, but they have gained momentum and either could prove the dark horse of the division.

The deadline for entering teams in the three classes is set for midnight Friday at the Boys' Club of Washington, 230 C street, northwest. Entry blanks can be obtained both at the club and at The Post Sports Department.

Complete rules are printed on the entry blanks.

The winners of each class will receive a Washington Post Trophy as well as gold medals for individual players. Members of the runners-up in each division will receive silver medals.

Bill Bennings

At The Post

Selections at Hialeah Park.

Dear Al:

Young Jack Flinchum appears to have a lock and key on the riding championship for this meeting. He has turned in 44 winners, 31 seconds and 18 thirds. However, he has had more mounts than any of the boys at Hialeah. Jack has been to the post 241 times. His percentage isn't as good as that of Eddie Arcaro, who has ridden 46 winners in 180 tries. Irving Anderson, M. Packer and Durando follow in the order named. Flinchum has one angle on his rivals. He is a freelance rider and doesn't have to give up a favorite to ride for a contract employer. But I'm not trying to take anything away from him. He has come a long way in the comparatively short time he has been plying his trade. Just whether he can bridge the gap that comes when he loses his apprentice allowance remains to be seen. Alan Clarke announces the first foal of the new year at Huntington Farm. The little filly is by Mowlee, which stands at Huntington, and is a full sister of Hazel W., which runs in the colors of Watt Elliott. The dam of General Mowlee is expecting a bundle of heaven any day now. Just to show that Confucius doesn't have the copyright on all the long shots, Mrs. Bennings' lovely boy came through with Modern Age. Take a glance at that price, too. Win, $86.90; place, $43.30, and show, $19.50. Sorry they didn't save that one for Bowie, where it would have done us a lot more good. Only four more days to get even at Hialeah. Then it will be on to Tropical Park, with Bowie only four weeks away. For today, Confucius say: Gold Band will swing it. BILL.

First race—Sugarage appears the best suited of the fillies and mares which open the program instead of the usual juveniles. This one gets steadying weight and McCombs will handle the riding. Miss Monoa turned in a fair race last out and Flinchum should help her. Donna Lopez is a possible surprise.

Second race—Florence M. has been shopping around for a spot and this could be the right one. She is reported to be fit and ready. Travel Agent belongs with this kind and should be in the thick of contention. Fumble could be the third one.

Third race—The Loom has been threatening and may use this race as a means of escaping from the maiden ranks. Georgie Seabo is slated to ride. Satiation has had many chances and is a threat. Ten-o-Hearts for the minor award.

Fourth race—John Allen is tossed in this with 106 pounds and could be the right one. I'm going to string along with Jockey Durando in this. Bright and Early can carry weight and promises to be a keen factor despite the 120 pounds. Gold Band could take it all.

Fifth Race—Blue Lily gets the favorable outside post position for this test and, with Earl Steffen aboard, may dart out for the wire and get there first. Omission has class but has 122 pounds to carry. Painted Veil to take care of the others.

Sixth race — Confiado appears capable of handling the assignment here and Wayne Wright will do the booting. I'm going to string along. Bootless and Dnieper are in light and should fill out the money bracket.

Seventh race—Diabroom appears best in this distance affair. Not a lock but he has a fighting chance and I'm going to take my chances. Lady Sara and Turf Sting for the place and show.

Eighth race—Uvalde, Blackmail and Charles F. is the way I prefer them in the day's finale.

Bets bet—Florence M.

Bowie Offers $103,000 to Race Stables

Joseph A. Farrell, general manager of Bowie, which will open the Maryland racing season on April 1 and run for 12 days, announced yesterday that 1,040 applications have been made for stalls by horsemen from all over the country. So far as is known, this constitutes a record in applications before March 1.

JOSEPH A. FARRELL

Manager Farrell said that horsemen from Santa Anita, Oaklawn Park, New Orleans, Miami and Havana, winter racing center, and nonwinter race stables have made the applications. He predicted that all turfmen could not be accommodated, but that all stabling room would be occupied when the first bugle blows.

Bowie will offer $103,000 in stakes and purses this year, the total distribution being $7,200 more than a year ago, and the daily average in the neighborhood of $6,000. Four stakes will be run and other features are booked for the remaining eight days.

Stakes will close on March 15 and already some blanks have been received. The stakes include:

April 3—$5,000 Rowe Memorial Handicap; 3-year-olds and upward; 6 furlongs.

April 6—$5,000 Bowie Handicap; 3-year-olds and upward; one mile and 70 yards.

April 10—$2,500 Bowie Kindergarten; 2-year-olds; 4 furlongs.

April 13—$5,000 Southern Maryland Handicap; 3-year-olds and upward; one and one-sixteenth miles.

General Manager Farrell stated no change had been made in the official family for the opening of the Maryland turf season.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—THAT'S ME, $7.00, $4.10, $3.00; INSCOLASSIE, $8.60, $5.50; GOOSEBERRY, $3.30.

THAT'S ME went around the leaders leaving the backstretch, gained steadily and got up in the final stride. He bore in at the furlong pole and through the stretch for which a claim of foul was made, but not allowed. INSCOLASSIE, prominent and saving ground, came to the outside and closed gamely through the stretch. GOOSEBERRY, away slowly, made up a lot of ground. SIR GIBSON suffered most by the interference.

Daily Double, CHANCE RUN and THAT'S ME, Paid $276.30

THIRD RACE—Seven furlongs. Purse, $1,100; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:10½. Off 3:11½. Winner, Mrs. N. Ray's br. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—MODERN AGE, $86.90, $43.30, $19.50; SUNPHANTOM, $8.30, $5.90; REMINISCENT, $3.70.

MODERN AGE worked his way forwardly on the outside and wore the leaders down in the final drive. SUNPHANTOM displayed the most speed, but was unable to withstand the winner's challenge. REMINISCENT moved up menacingly at the furlong pole, but hung. DINNER JACKET saved much ground, but could not engage the leaders.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,300. For 4-year-olds and upward in Grade C. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:43½. Off 3:44½. Winner, H. & H. Stock Farm's br. c. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BALMY SPRING, $70.30, $28.30, $14.70; WINNING CHANCE, $21.00, $11.70; DOUBT NOT, $9.50.

BALMY SPRING forced a rapid pace, took command through the stretch, then outstayed WINNING CHANCE. The latter finished gamely under his impost, but could not get up. DOUBT NOT closed with good courage and outlasted WISE BARRISTER. The latter, slow to get going, closed a big gap. RIFTED CLOUDS stopped badly.

FIFTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles ~~(on the turf)~~. Purse, $1,100; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:12. Off 4:14½. Winner, J. Two-dollar mutuels paid—WHITE HOT, $10.40, $5.10, $3.40; UPHOLD, $4.10, $2.90; SCARER, $3.80.

WHITE HOT moved up with determination on the inside in the final furlong and shook off UPHOLD. The latter, rushed to the front, bore out turning into the stretch and then faltered. SCARER moved into contention in the opening half mile, took a brief lead entering the stretch, but flattened out when placed to pressure. YOUR BUDDY was pinched back on the stretch turn.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $2,500; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:43. Off 4:44. Winner, Mrs. M. Evans' br. g. Two dollar mutuels paid—SHOT PUT, $9.00, $4.70, $3.30; EARLY SETTLER, $5.10, $3.60; CARDINALIS, $3.20.

SHOT PUT, stoutly restrained on the outside the first 7 furlongs, gained steadily under pressure through the stretch to outlast EARLY SETTLER. The latter, prominent contender, made a bold effort when placed to a drive, but could not stave off the winner's bid. CARDINALIS held the field safe for speed while saving ground, but faltered in the last eighth. PRETTY PET saved much ground, but could not get up.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,200; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:14. Off 5:14. Winner, Knollwood Stable's b. g. Two dollar mutuels paid—TRANSMITTER, $8.00, $3.80, $2.90; MUCHO GUSTO, $4.30, $3.30; OFF GUARD, $4.00.

TRANSMITTER, well ridden, moved up gamely on the outside when placed to a drive and wore MUCHO GUSTO down in the last stride. MUCHO GUSTO displayed the most speed, but faltered in the final 20 yards. OFF GUARD weakened through the stretch, yet held the others safe. SHORT DISTANCE went into the air at the start.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,100; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:43. Off 5:43½. Winner, Calumet Farm's ch. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—WHITE GINGER, $5.70, $3.70, $2.70; CONRAD MANN, $4.30, $3.20; BACHELOR'S BOWER, $3.70.

WHITE GINGER moved up gradually when straightened into the stretch and, responding with determination, outlasted CONRAD MANN. The latter bettered his position thereafter on the extreme outside and appeared the winner a furlong out, but then hung. BACHELOR'S BOWER, sandwiched between the field at the furlong pole, closed gamely when clear. OFFICIATE retired in the last quarter mile.

Savings, Loan Associations Set New Peak

U. S. League Reports Nine-Year High Of $986,383,000

By Thomas M. Cahill.

Savings, building and loan associations of the country have again touched another peak in business, members of the District of Columbia Building and Loan League have been informed by national headquarters of the industry. Increasing their volume of loans 24 per cent over 1938, associations in 1939 reached a nine-year high with the disbursement of $986,383,000. The United States Savings and Loan League reports that this is nearly $100,000,000 more than was loaned in 1931, the next highest year of the past nine, and that it is 126.7 per cent larger than the lowest depression year.

According to Morton Bodfish, executive vice president of the national league, 1939 ranked ninth in loan activity of the 109 years which these institutions have been in operation in America, and brought the total loans for the decade 1930-39 up to $7,800,000,000.

A steady increase in the portion of savings, building and loan association advances allocated to loans for new construction has characterized the past four years, so that last year's funds went 30.5 per cent for this purpose, as compared with 23.6 per cent in 1936. December saw the largest proportion of loans going to new construction of any month of 1939. The associations loaned $301,039,000 to make new homes possible for American families last year. At the same time they lent $59,463,000 for the repairing and remodeling of homes.

Employment Factor

"These two purposes, accounting for 36.5 per cent of all the savings and loan advances, represent the specific contribution of these associations to reemployment," says Mr. Bodfish. "We estimate that on basis of an average wage of $30.50 per week the money poured by the thrift and home financing institutions into building and repair work supplied work equivalent to year-round employment for 106,000 men."

Loans in December were $83,112,000, a slight recession from November but nearly a third larger than in December, 1938, thus completing a full year in which each month's loans were higher than the corresponding month of the previous year. The expanding activity of the thrift and home financing institutions as the year went along is shown by the fact that the advances the last half of the year were 19.5 per cent greater than for the first six months.

Mr. Bodfish explains that total volume of home financing provided from this source during the decade 1930-39 was $1,500,000,000 greater than the combined participation of Government agencies in the housing field since the Home Owners' Loan Corporation started in 1933. Counting the $2,988,000,000 of credit for small home mortgages, large-scale rental housing, and modernization which the Federal Housing Administration is insuring and on which the Government has a contingent liability; the $121,000,000 so far loaned by the United States Housing Authority for rental dwellings; the $2,742,500,000 refunding operations of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation, and the $71,500,000 for repairs which the corporation advanced, the $193,000,000 of other mortgage agencies, the Government has $6,116,041,000 in the housing program, as compared with the savings, building and loan associations' $7,800,000,000 lent in the past ten years.

Garfinckel's Reports Rise In Business

Dunn and Sheffield Reelected Directors; Dividends Are Voted

An increase in business was reported yesterday at a meeting of the stockholders of Julius Garfinckel & Co., Inc., held in the corporate office in Fairfax, Va.

Richard P. Dunn, of Auchincloss, Parker & Redpath, and Clarence G. Sheffield, first vice president of the Garfinckel Co., were reelected as directors for three years.

Other members of the board are William E. Schmid, president of the company; Miss Elizabeth Fairall, vice president; Sidney Taliaferro, vice president and trust officer of the Riggs National Bank, and Murray McConnel, vice president of the J. G. White & Co., New York.

Operations Reviewed

In his report to the stockholders, President Schmid included a summary of the operations of the company for the six-month period ending January 31, 1940, and of the predecessor business for the comparable period of last year, and for the previous 12 months.

The summary follows:

	Six months to 1, 31, '40.	*Six months to 1, 31, '39.	*Twelve months to 7, 31, '39.
Sales	$2,017,394.90	$1,951,053.11	$3,401,501.29
Net before income taxes:	†$223,156.51	$192,802.36	$235,402.32

†If opening and closing inventory had been taken on a strictly comparable basis, gross margin would have been greater by $16,669.18.

In discussing the figures, Schmid said:

"Because of the seasonal characteristics of our type of business, profits for less than a full year of operation may be misleading. It should be clearly understood that the six-month period now reported usually accounts for the larger part of the total income for the entire year."

Officers Reelected

The board of directors declared the regular quarterly dividend of 37½ cents a share on the company's preferred stock payable March 31, 1940, to stockholders of record March 15, 1940, and the regular quarterly dividend of 17½ cents a share on the company's common stock payable March 15, 1940, to stockholders of record March 5, 1940.

Schmid announced the board of directors had authorized filing of an application to list the company's stock on the Washington Stock Exchange.

Armco Net $4,011,908; Loss in 1938

New York, Feb. 27 (AP).—The American Rolling Mill Co., Middletown, Ohio, reported today for 1939 net income of $4,011,908, equal to 69 cents a share on the common stock, contrasted with net loss of $1,307,880 in 1938. Charles R. Hook, president, said "we expect an increase in volume at fair prices" after a leveling off in steel inventories during the first quarter of 1940.

B. F. Goodrich Co.

The B. F. Goodrich Co., a leading rubber manufacturer, reported today 1939 net income of $6,628,746, equal to $3.50 a share on the commonstock. In 1938 net was $2,240,119, equal to 14 cents a common share.

Sales for the year jumped 24 per cent to $135,735,562, exclusive of operations of certain European subsidiaries, David M. Goodrich, chairman, said the company for 1939 had tax charges of $10,258,000, equal to $7.87 a share on the common stock.

Crown Zellerback

Crown Zellerbach Corporation and subsidiaries reported today for nine months ended January 21 net profit of $5,797,632, equal to $1.68 a common share, compared with $3,484,383, or 66 cents a common share, compared with $3,484,383, as 66 cents a common share in the comparable period last year. The company manufactures newsprint and other types of paper on the Pacific Coast.

Distilling Registration Suspended by SEC

The Securities and Exchange Commission has issued a stop order suspending the effectiveness of the registration statement of Winnebago Distilling Co. on charges that it contained "untrue statements of material facts, and omits to state material facts required" under the Securities Act of 1933.

The commission issued an order on April 7, 1939, to determine whether it should suspend the company's registration statement. Following the public hearing, the trial examiner filed with the S. E. C. an advisory report stating the company's statement "to be materially deficient in most of the respects charged."

Wheat Prices Decline for Third Session

Net Gains of a Cent Are Followed by Hedging Sales

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Feb. 27.—Wheat prices fluctuated nervously today, scored net gains of about a cent at times, but finally weakened and finished lower for the third consecutive session.

Selling which again suggested hedging against purchases of loan wheat was encountered, the market running into some stop loss and liquidating sales in late trade that dropped May contracts to 1.01¼ and July 99⅛, both down 1¼ from their previous close. Earlier, stimulated partly by an upturned at other markets, May contracts advanced to 1.03¾, up a cent, and July to 1.01⅝, up 1⅛ cents.

Wheat closed ¼-⅝ lower; May, 1.02@1.02⅛; July, 99¾@99⅞. Corn unchanged to ¼ down; May, 56¼; July, 56¾. Oats ⅛ off. Soy beans 1⅛-1⅞ higher. Rye ¾-1 cent lower. Lard 10 to 13 cents a hundredweight down.

Cotton Futures Drop 5 to 40 Cents Per Bale

New York, Feb. 27 (AP).—Cotton futures couldn't take it today when traders continued to liquidate their holdings in the March delivery. Final prices were off 1 to 8 points after hovering around 2½ year highs for the past several days.

Brokers explained pressure against the spot month usually increases as the expiration date draws near, most traders preferring to sell rather than take actual delivery of the cotton.

The market made a stab at higher prices at the start. Bombay interests were especially vigorous buyers and Liverpool also lent a hand. Trade accounts were smaller buyers. This support soon let up and prices gave way to constant liquidation in the spot position, plus selling by New Orleans, locals and the South.

Cottonseed Oil

Cottonseed oil futures continued to decline today.

Losses of 7 to 9 points were scored as traders eyed setbacks in lard and grains. A larger volume of hog receipts was an additional setback.

Sales totaled 168 lots; March, 6.85 bid; May, 6.99; July, 7.07; September, 7.14.

Crude oil was quoted nominally at 6 cents a pound in the Southeast and Valley following sales earlier at that level in the Valley. Texas was 5¾@5⅞ bid.

Freight Trains Set New Speed Records

Railroads of the United States in 1939 attained a new high record in the average speed of freight trains, J. J. Pelley, president of the Association of American Railroads, announced yesterday. The average speed, according to reports for the year, which have just become available, was 62 per cent higher than in 1920.

The average distance traveled per freight train per day in 1939, was 401 miles compared with 398 miles in 1938, and 386 miles in 1937. In 1920, the average was only 247 miles. This represents the average time required for the movement of all freight trains between terminals, including all delays en route.

Selective Buying of a Few Specialties Holds Prices Steady; War Issues Not in Demand; Loft Is Active

New York, Feb. 27.—Selective buying again prevented a dull stock market from sagging today. The main body of traders still were awaiting some positive news of the several missions of Undersecretary Welles and Myron C. Taylor to the European arena; or sought something more definite than trumpeting of columnists about the third-term factor.

While the press told of new and more alarming activities along the Western Front and new predictions appeared of "total war" there was scarcely a flicker of interest in the war babies. Commodities and nonferrous metals, usually sensitive to was talk, were a little lower on the whole.

The composite for the 100 leading big board stocks was off 0.06 point on the day with transfers just above the half-million share mark. Guilders and Belgian francs firmed a little in foreign exchange dealings.

Last Hour Activity

Active stocks were, in the main higher with most activity and best prices in the last hour. There was quite an interest in Goodrich following publication of its 1939 earnings showing net of $3.50 a share against only 14 cents for 1938. It opened on a 1,000-share block at 19⅞, ahead a full point and later reached 20. The close at 19⅝ was ¾ ahead. Loft, again at the top of the list, continued to recover from last week's realizing and added 2 points to finish at 30. Pan-American Airways was traded to the extent of more than 30,000 shares at a gain of 1⅛. Martin-Parry was another aeronautical issue to go ahead on brisk sales.

Canadian Pacific which has been in the doldrums for quite a long time was placed among the active leaders with a fractional price betterment, reflecting demand for the stock north of the international border, where it is estimated the company will profit from the big volume of war orders which Canada is accumulating.

Business Rise Expected

Brokers letters continued to insist that the business decline has about run its course, but at the same time they counseled clients not to expect stocks to snap out of the rut they have been in since late 1939 in any startling fashion. Two of the leading Wall Street houses made a very similar analysis of the situation. They pointed out that more active and higher markets may come quietly, sparked by "informed" trader purchases in advance of positive news of business improvement, and accelerated as usual by public participation.

Pivotals were again pretty much out of the limelight today and since late last year the majority of them have lost about half the gains recorded in the surge of early September. Steel common lost a fraction and such issues as General Motors, Chrysler, Anaconda, Kennecott and International Nickel also lost a little ground.

Improved prices for Government bonds, distinct weakness in some sections of the foreign list, and a better tone in the average for listed industrials marked bond trading here today. Volume in Treasurys and domestic corporate issues was higher while foreigns were less active.

Final prices of Treasurys showed gains up to 7-32 and in the over-counter dealings prices were unchanged to 4-32 point higher. This section exhibited a moderately stronger demand, particularly from institutional buyers.

Foreign Issues at Decline

Features among foreign obligations were new lows set in certain Australian and Canadian issues. Declines of 2 to 5 points appeared in the Australians while the Canadians were down ⅛ to 3¼ points. Norwegian loans also set some new lows with declines of 1½ to 2⅝ points in fairly active dealings.

Life Insurance Trust Council Formed Here

Purpose Is to Establish Cooperative Estate And Trust Service

Announcement was made yesterday of the organization of the Washington Life Insurance Trust Council, composed of local trust officials and life insurance underwriters. The formation of this council represents an important step forward in the joint effort of trust and insurance representatives to provide their respective customers with a complete, well-rounded estate and trust service and marks a new era of cooperation between the two groups.

A joint committee composed of trust officers and insurance underwriters has been working on plans for nearly a year and at the recent organization meeting the following became charter members of the council:

Bernard L. Amiss	Sidney H. Karr
Joseph A. Barbeau	Harold A. Kertz
Anthony J. Byrne	Lester A. Lawrence
J. Wesley Clampitt	J. Alan Maphis
Victor B. Deyber	Leonard Marbury
Aubrey O. Dooley	Joseph A. Marr
Raymond A. DuFour	John L. McElfresh
H. Corcoran Fisher	Paul H. Primm
Leopiod V. Freudber	J. Frank Rice
Richard W. Griswold	Russell Shelk
Paul F. Grove, jr.	William V. Simmons
A. H. Jackman	Sidney F. Taliaferro
Earl O. Jonacher	Ralph G. Wilson

The objectives of the council are to help equip the members to render the highest type of services to the public; to acquaint those in need of insurance and trust service of the protection and advantages afforded through life insurance contracts and fiduciary arrangements.

Have You Enough Estate ~~LIFE~~ INSURANCE?

You have life insurance to offset the shrinkage in your family's income that your death will cause—but is it enough? And, have you insurance to protect your estate from shrinkage due to payment of settlement costs and taxes?

"Settlement shrinkage" usually consumes from 15% to 30% of an estate, if the estate has cash to pay costs and taxes. If the estate lacks cash, and assets must be sold at a sacrifice, shrinkage is larger. If your life insurance is not sufficient to provide:

(1) Cash for estate settlement expenses
(2) Future income for your family

confer with your life insurance counselor. He can tell you why every dollar you invest in "estate insurance" may save two dollars or more of estate-principal for your family. Why not phone him now?

Foreign Markets

By the Associated Press

London, Feb. 27.—Oil shares responded with brisk gains in the securities market today to rumors gasoline rations might be increased before Easter. Profit taking kept other sections of the list fluctuating uneasily. British government bonds tended lower, but Brazilian loans attracted a substantial following. Kaffirs and diamonds were trimmed slightly while tin stocks held steady following the quota decision. Recently active industrials quieted in a narrow range.

Paris—Bourse quotations slid down after a steady start today. A sharp decline in Suez Canal and weakness in Scandinavian issues touched off the liquidation. Rentes closed 35 centimes lower to 60 higher, with the dollar guaranteed issue in demand.

Amsterdam—Prices advanced as turnover increased in the bourse. Gains in domestic stocks ranged to 3 points with Royal Dutch a notable favorite. American shares followed the advance of steels and Anaconda.

Liverpool—Cotton futures closed 7 points lower to 2 higher today. Near months gave way to liquidating and hedging sales.

Money Markets

Foreign Exchange

New York, Feb. 27 (AP).—The currencies of Belgium and the Netherlands were given top ranking in the foreign money market today. The guilder ran up .04 of a cent and the belga .02 of a cent. Banking quarters said recent demand appeared based on a brisk trade expansion in the neutral countries as a result of growth of the war. Sterling advanced ⅛ cent in terms of the dollar. Money dealers were interested in the statement by Chancellor of the Exchequer Sir John Simon denying currency depreciation had been deliberately resorted to in an attempt to stimulate British export trade, but it created little more than a ripple in trading currents. The French franc dipped .00⅛ of a cent while the Swiss franc was unchanged.

Canada, official Canadian control board buying rate for U. S. dollars, 110.00, selling rate, 111.00. Open market rates, Montreal in New York, 86.31¼, New York in Montreal, 115.81¼.

Carey Anxious To Get Back In Baseball

Jockeys Cuss Pruett Starting Gate; More Sports Potpourri

By the Associated Press

Miami, Fla., Feb. 27.—Coconut juice along Sports Street:

Max Carey, the old line grower, is itching to get back in baseball again . . . and a lotta clubs could do worse than to sign up the old base-stealer who didn't get all of a square shake running the Brooklyn Dodgers back a way . . . Incidentally, the cold snap down here—and it wasn't California propaganda, that one—set Max's lime and avocado corps back just about a full year.

The last straw that finally convinced John Ray he'd have to call the whole thing off was when Henry Taylor, just a fair Philly flailer, tagged Billy Conn right on the old whiskeroo in his last workout Saturday—and all but set pretty Billy on the seat of his panties . . . Johnny couldn't get to a phone fast enough to notify Uncle Mike Jacobs there'd be no waltz with Gus Lesnevich.

A woman walked up to a mutuel window at Hialeah just before the Flamingo went to the post Saturday.

"I want a ticket on Bow Wow, please," she asked, sliding her two bucks across.

"Lady, there ain't no Bow Wow in the race," the seller replied. "Will Woof Woof do?"

"Oh, yes, that's what I mean."

Hank Greenberg slipped into town for a couple of days—and right out again after trying to solve those Hialeah favorites . . . old Hankus Pankus no likee the switch that sends him from the Tigers' first base to outfield patrol—but he's going to string along "because it may help the club."

Laugh of the week was supplied by Mickey McAvoy, the "cute" boxer who has been sparmate to the best of them . . . He was on a barnstorming tour with Joe Louis some time back . . . they got to one stop in Maine and Mickey made the mistake of leaving his chin open . . . Joe tagged him and down he went . . . he took "nine" as the referee—noneother than your old pal Mushky Jackson—counted over him.

"I started to get up and Joe came in fast to flatten me," he related. "Mushky got scared and started to run without even wiping my gloves. What could I do? I ran after Mushky—so Louis just started to run after us both. We laid 'em in the aisles that night."

Dis-a and Dat-a . . . Don Meade isn't the only jockey suffering from the Puett starting gate . . . a lot of the other jocks, noted for getting a hoss away fast, are cussing the contraption, but everybody else thinks it's the biggest racing advance in years . . . Bill Tilden, with the flu, and Vinnie Richards, with bursitis, teamed up for the pro doubles here—and were good enough for the finals even in that shape . . . Tim Mara clicked with six winners and a place hoss in the eight race Hialeah card t'other day . . . Don't be surprised if Mike Jacobs puts exhibition dog racing into Madison Square Garden.

Wilson Teachers Bow to Oxon Hill

A desperate last-half rally pulled to within 2 points of Oxon Hill's flying Clippers but stopped there last night on the Oxon Hill High School court, leaving Wilson Teachers College on the small end of a 50-48 score.

The Washingtonians were on the heels of the Maryland team throughout the game but never could take command of the lead. Laudan Rhyne with 15 points, and Anthony Gramsky, with 16, led the Oxon Hill five. Furash and Garneau, with 13 points each, led the losers.

On Fishing

ACKERMAN

About 12 months back we were profuse in our praise of a new synthetic line. A line which seemed to have everything—stretch, nonabsorbent—and so fine in the lay it was a honey to get out.

We fished it throughout last season and were still enthusiastic about it. Now, we aren't so sure, for with large fish on it there is an indescribable feeling of not having contact with it. During the 8 or 10 minutes it takes to bring in a large bonito or cero, you imagine at least the same number of times that the fish is gone, only to have it fetch up hard against the apparent slack.

In the strike, and the setting of the hook, there is also the feeling of the fish not being on, even though it is, and you have reared back on the rod several times before the stretch, which once seemed so desirable, is out to its full extent.

More important, however, is the terrific expansion of the line which has been rewound on the reel spool with every last bit of the 16% of stretch out to the utmost. Something must give—and something does give—the side plates of the spool.

A little nosing around and we found others who had like experiences, and we felt amply justified of having hot-headedly let it run off the reel, instead of giving it to someone who would probably have had the same happen to them.

Probably local anglers have had trouble with synthetic line. If so we would like to hear from them, and their thoughts on the subject, for while we are for improvements in tackle and new gadgets and like to note them here, we are just as ready and willing to take them apart when they have weak points beyond good qualities.

The stillborn porpoise baby was a tough hurdle for Curator McBryde to get over, for when we were at Marineland just three days before, he was looking forward to the happening with the eagerness of a child with a new toy.

Even though much of scientific interest was learned, so much more would have been available had the baby lived. Almost nothing was known of these streamlined mammals of the open seas until they were placed in the big tanks on the north Florida coast two years ago. Since, their life has been unfolding day by day, and in a way, with reproduction of their kind, that would almost have made their story complete.

Surprising indeed, is the entirely different idea that one gets of almost every one of our fishes, in observing them from below, instead of at the surface, or at the best, in 20 or more feet of clear tropical waters. Big bluefish, lordly tarpon, and even tiny tang and angelfish bring new conception of mobility and wonder at their place in the scheme of marine life.

During the past year one fishing book after another has rolled from the presses. Many deserve mention only as another book; several are really good and two are outstanding.

About the middle of March will come another—"Fishing For Fun in Briny Waters," by Erl Roman, published by David McKay Co., of Philadelphia. We are looking forward to it with real eagerness, for we know through long association just how rich is his mind with fishes and fishing lore. Almost everyone along the Atlantic Coast interested in fishing knows him through his "Anglers' Notes" in the Miami Herald, and for that reason will look forward to reading it also.

Schneider Put On Amateur Fight Card

Charles Schneider, of Colmar Manor, and Johnny Brosigan, of Pete's A. C., will fight in one of the three-rounders on Frankie Mann's amateur boxing show featuring Willie Tapp and Gilbert Mayo Saturday at Gonzaga Hall, 47 I street northwest.

Schneider, who defeated Bernie Cady and won the 126-pound Golden Gloves championship and the title as the outstanding novice fighter as well, is regarded as a promising young boxer by the veteran manager and promoter, Mann.

Mayo and Tapp are fighting for the honor of representing the Capital in the Eastern Gloves championships in New York March 4-6 in the 126-pound class. The Alexandria boy is defending senior champion, while Tapp, last year's bantamweight king, is moving up into the heavier class for the first time.

Chester Morris and George Kuntz, amateur heavyweights; Ray Landis and Lew Dundee, lightweights; Danny Petro and Jim Bowen, flyweights, and Jackie Wadsworth and Bill Desin, bantamweights, will round out the show.

Mann, promoting the show for the St. Aloysius Church Boosters Club, has installed a larger ring in the Gonzaga gym. The new one will be 24 feet, eight feet larger than the old one.

Little Generals Win Over Mount Rainier

Washington-Lee High cagers were extended to the limit yesterday to turn back Mount Rainier, 32-30, as the Mounts staged their best rally of the season in their home gym.

Out in front by 18-11 at the half, Washington-Lee slowed up enough to hold only a 26-24 edge at the third period. A foul goal by Shorty Alexander with one minute of the game left, put the finishing touches on the Little Generals' fifteenth triumph in 28 games.

Highlight of the game, other than the clean and fast action throughout, was the 21 points scored by Jack Hughes, a youngster playing with the Mounts for the first year. Hughes beat out W.-L.'s Jim Mahoney for scoring honors, the latter with 14 points.

In a preliminary, junior varsities of the two schools played to a 17-17 stalemate.

Cage Tourney On Tomorrow At Hyattsville

First Gold Cup Game Pits G. W. High Against Oxon Hill; 3-Day Affair

Another scholastic basketball tournament will rear its head on the scene in this vicinity tomorrow night when the initial round of the first Gold Cup Tourney is staged at Hyattsville Gym.

A three-day affair, the event will include competition in both girls' and boys' basketball. In the first round, girls' teams of Oxon Hill and G. W. High will meet at 8 p. m. and boys' fives of Oxon Hill and Hyattsville will come together an hour later.

Friday's competition will be between Bladensburg and Hyattsville girls, and between Greenbelt and Bladensburg boys. Winners each night will meet Saturday in the finals.

Gold cups will be awarded victorious girls' and boys' teams. Individual gold basketballs go to members of winning squads.

Strafaci Upsets Whitehead, Allan

Coral Gables, Fla., Feb. 27 (AP).—Frank Strafaci, former national public links champion, and Jerry Cauza, of South Orange, N. J., supplied an upset in the quarter-finals of the amateur four-ball tournament today by ousting State Champions Charley Whitehead, of New Jersey, and Frank Allan, of Pennsylvania. The nip-and-tuck battle went the entire 36-hole route for a 3-up victory.

Bobby Dunkelberger, Southern amateur champion, and Dick Ciuci, of Flushing, Long Island, gained an easy 6-and-5 victory over W. J. Harper, of Miami, and Robert Lowry, of Shamokin, Pa. Walter Burkemo, Detroit, and Dick Chapman, Greenwich, Conn., spotlighted the scoring honors with a 7-and-6 win over George L. Coleman, jr., and R. P. Ludwig, of Miami. Earl Christiansen and Harvey Draughn, Miamians, eliminated W. H. Mondley, jr., New England amateur champion, and Ray Lanahan, Providence, R. I., 2 and 1.

N. P. S. Wins, 28-27, Over U. S. Housing

National Parks Service emerged from the first game of a playoff for the Interior Department basketball championship last night with a 28-to-27 victory over U. S. Housing Administration after a thrilling up-and-down battle.

The crucial 2-pointer was credited to Jimmy Barrett, N. P. S. guard, who hurled from the floor with 45 seconds of action left. The basket wound up a second half that saw the lead change hands 11 times. High-point scorer of the game was U. S. H. A.'s Don Frye, who tallied 11 points.

NATS' ROOKIE PARADE

At Orlando Camp

(This is another of a series of sketches on the rookies seeking jobs with the Nats at their Orlando training camp.)

BILL KENNEDY, PITCHER.

That handsome young usher in the uniform of a Balkan field marshal you may have seen at the Capitol Theater in Washington, in 1938, could very well have been Bill Kennedy.

He's now one of the young men that Bucky Harris is tabbing for future reference. He's here in the Nats' camp labeled as a likely lefthander who is on his way up in the Washington Club's farm system.

When he wasn't ushering folks to their seats in the Capitol a couple of years ago, he was pitching considerable baseball for the Hume Springs, Va., team, in the Old Dominion Semi-Pro League and that's where scouts found him.

He's an Alexandria boy, but he was in school for a year at Gonzaga in Washington and another year at St. John's Prep. But because those schools didn't have baseball teams he was forced to find an outlet for his pitching ambitions on the sandlots. F. M. Coffey, former owner of the Orlando Club, signed him to his first contract, and the first game he pitched in organized ball was for Crisfield in the Eastern Shore League.

That day he was pitching against Vic Keen, once a star hurler for the Chicago Cubs, and he lost a 3-1 decision. He was with Orlando in 1938, and when the Nats' took over Washington franchise he was part and parcel of it. Down here last season he won 10 games, although losing 19, but the Nats' agents liked the way he controlled his lefthanded pitches. His fast ball is good enough, they think, and they're teaching him a curve. But because he is one of those rare rookies—a lefthander with control, they're moving him up in the farm system. He's slated to go to Charlotte come April.

G. U. Frosh Win, 82-41, Over 'Y'

The Y. M. C. A. basketball team hit a hot pace and rang up 41 points in its game last night with Georgetown University freshmen five, but it wasn't hot enough. The Little Hoyas scored that many and added another 41 to win, 82-41.

It was the second time in two weeks the freshmen courtmen have run up 82 points in a game. They defeated G. A. O., 82-29, in their last outburst of scoring. The game was a warm-up for the freshmen encounter with the George Washington yearlings next Wednesday as the varsity preliminary.

Bill Bornheimer, with 22 points, led his teammates, while McGirk, with 10, and Rhodes, with 9, led the Y team.

Network notes—A Hollywood urchin asked Conrad Nagel, "Silver Theater" director, to autograph his name three times. "Isn't once enough?" Conrad asked. "Nope," said boy. "I wanna swap three of yours for a Carole Lombard" . . . Andre Baruch, C. B. S. announcer for the "Kate Smith Hour," and "Your Hit Parade," hasn't had a cold in seven years. Formula, he says, is daily gym work and morning and night exercise . . . Sunda Love, C. B. S. "Stepmother" leading lady, celebrated Washington's birthday with her first successful baking job—a cherry pie . . . Helen Claire, star of the recent Broadway success, "Kiss the Boys Goodbye," is now appearing on Columbia's "Grand Central Station" . . . As a young man of 26, Ray Noble, maestro for C. B. S.'s George Burns and Gracie Allen, was general director of British phonograph company . . . New pianist on Lanny Ross' matinee song festival is Jack Schaindlin . . . Arthur Lake, "Dagwood" of the C. B. C. "Blondie" series, born into a family of circus acrobats, was cradled in dressing-room trunk and performed professionally as soon as he could stand up . . . Ona Munson, "Lorelei" in C. B. S.'s "Big Town," is a skilled pianist and vocalist and was in several Broadway musical comedies before going to Hollywood

Our good chums, the Earle Theater, are going to take part in the festivities marking WJSV's power rise to 50,000 watts. They turned their stage over to the Columbia network's artists bureau and the C. B. S. 10 per centers have mixed up a right nice pot-pourri which will be on display for a week beginning Friday.

Jane Froman, one of the network's better singers, is headlining the bill with Professor Quiz. The Professor is doing alright for himself these days, but his show was once a struggling sustainer right here at WJSV.

Jerry Cooper, a personable and capable singer, is another C. B. S. contribution, and, of course, my own favorite bit will be in the persons of the Hartmans, who satirize the dance as it should be. Harry Anger's talented girls will be on hand, too.

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

One of our contributors, M. C. B., recently tagged an attractive couple playing duplicate. He stayed to see a charming Southern girl subdue two psychic slickers with a bit of Dixie subtlety. M. C. B. will take up the story from here:

"On one round in particular their opponents were a team that invariably sat East-West in a weekly game in which the strong teams were supposed to be seated North-South. The result was that they took down the East-West top score four weeks out of five and naturally had grown just a wee bit cocky themselves.

"They announced at each table that they were playing the 'club-diamond.' I know that the club-diamond is an integral part of several systems, but I never heard of a 'club-diamond' system as such.

♡64
◊10542
♣AKQ1072

"The opponent on her right opened with one club. In spite of the excitement and annoyance she must have felt, she overcalled very calmly and matter-of-factly with one heart.

"I presume that she was going to continue her barrage of camouflage bids with one spade, when the heart was doubled; then one no trump, and finally, somewhere along the line, bail out in clubs. Whatever her plans, the one heart bid was passed out and she played it there. Here was her dummy:

♠K8532
♡875
◊A86
♣85

"She was South and West, opened the club nine which was covered by the jack on her right. After taking with the ace, she laid down her singleton spade. Small from West, and the king in dummy was taken with the ace by East. A spade was returned, she ruffed, crossed to the diamond ace and ruffed another spade, the eight of clubs held, of course, and she threw the hand in—down two.

"Only then did the glamour boys, East and West, wake up and discover that they had been rooked, sir! Five hearts their way was a wrap-up against any defense!"

Today's Radio Highlights

The Hialeah Juvenile Championship, with $2,500 added for 2-year-olds, semifinal race of the Florida track season, is described by Bryan Field—WOL, 4:15 p. m.

Gracie Allen, her hat irrevocably in the ring, begins her campaign for the Presidency by taking a lease on the White House. George Burns, Ray Noble and his band, Gracie's brother, Joe Doakes, and Frankie Parker add to the general confusion—WJSV, 7:30 p. m.

Dr. Christian cures another romantic headache, this time with a Leap Year's twist in it. Jean Hersholt, Rosemary De Camp, and supporting cast—WJSV, 8:30 p. m.

Britt Reid, young publisher, foils a plot to swindle thousands of motorists through a cut-price gasoline scheme. The Green Hornet—WMAL, 9 p. m.

Burns Mantle, renowned critic, introduces John Garfield in the leading role of "Small Miracle," on the dramatic half of the Star Theater hour. The lighter side of this double-duty program brings Ken Murray, Kennie Baker, Frances Langford, and Irene Ryan—WJSV, 9 p. m.

Remember The Met, a nostalgic program of vignettes depicting the triumphs and tribulations of famous, not-so-famous, and obscure singers and musicians in the Metropolitan Opera Company—WMAL, 9:30 p. m.

Thrilling adventure and spine-tingling escapes of the men who make pictures are recounted and dramatized—WMAL, 10:30 p. m.

Henry Weber presents Sol Letvin, concert pianist; Attilio Baggiore, tenor; the octet, and the Weber Concert Orchestra, in a program devoted to the second and third movements of Mendelssohn's Concerto No. 1 in G Minor—WOL, 10:45 p. m.

"I Take This Man"

BY ANNE TEDLOCK BROOKS

Chapter 13

THE SECOND week in Rio was a little better. There were her daily visits to the hospital to see little, gray Madge Sullivan, who had come to mean much to Brenda.

Madge had traveled a great deal and lived close to a great many people, and Brenda was amazed at the wide scope of her philosophy of life in general.

Brenda took delight in fixing her own breakfast and light lunch in the apartment. A maid came in to clean the place every day, but Brenda scarcely saw her.

She took her evening meals at the nearby cafe unless she was in the mood to take a cab down to one of the large hotels.

Senora Cruze was delighted with Brenda. She admired her work and was pleased when she asked her to sit for a portrait. The work progressed rapidly, day by day.

On her third day at the great Cruze mansion the senora asked her to stay and lunch with them. After that she would not allow Brenda to leave until late in the afternoon. The daily siesta was held right after lunch, but after that the older woman was ready for another 2 hours in the studio they had improvised in one of the great upper rooms.

An Invitation

"We want you to stay and have dinner tomorrow evening and go to the opera with us," Senora Cruze said one morning to Brenda.

"That is lovely of you. I should enjoy it very much." She remembered the last one she had attended. It was with Lynne's and Cary's party one evening the winter before. At that time she had not ever thought of them in any way excepting that they were perhaps her best friends in the city.

Planning to go with the Cruzes brought it all back to her. As she stood at the easel working, her mind was divided in the task before her and in the event of so long ago. It had been snowing when they left Lynne's apartment. Brenda was wearing her mink coat. It was the first time she had purchased anything so extravagant, and she was excited with the thrill of the luxury of the beautiful fur. She was wearing a heavy blue satin gown, and Cary had whistled admiringly when she came in to dinner. It had all been so gay . . .

Brenda's thoughs came back to Senora Cruze. She was saying: "Won't you please me by wearing the dress you had on the first night I saw you? It became you so much."

Alan had liked the dress, too. It was of sheerest white silk, the skirt with yards and yards around the bottom. The jacket removed to show her beautiful shoulders, which Senora Cruze admired.

Brenda was suddenly aghast. "But my tan doesn't match. You see, my face and throat won't look like my shoulders."

"Then keep on your jacket. But the white against that golden tan will be exquisite."

"You are an artist yourself, Senora Cruze."

The older woman smiled. "I have never had a daughter. I should love dressing a beautiful creature. You have such exquisite taste. But I should like to see many, many soft silks made up for you, Brenda. I'm an old woman and there is nothing so out of place as an overdressed old lady!"

She was musing, almost to herself, when Brenda went on with her work.

Gorgeous Brenda

The next day Brenda felt a thrill of excitement at going to the famous opera house on the palm-lined avenido.

Dinner was served early, and the women dressed before going down. As Brenda finished the last touches of her toilet the maid tapped at her door. She was bearing a small golden chest.

"Senora Cruze presents for tonight," the girl spoke slowly in broken English.

Brenda took the chest in her hands and placed it on the dressing table. She opened it. On the blue velvet lining lay an ornament for her hair. It was like a small diadem of flashing diamonds. She gasped.

"Oh! I—I can't wear this!" she murmured.

"Senora Cruze say pl-ease."

The maid lifted the ornament out of the box. She set it upon Brenda's dark hair. The black curls lay against her forehead and the sparkle of the diamonds flashed colored fire.

When she came down the great marble stairway, Brenda felt as unreal as if she were taking part in a play. The figure in the chair at the fireplace stirred.

"Oh! Mrs. Tremaine! You are wearing the Cruze diamonds!" Senor Cruze came forward smilingly.

Senora Cruze rose, too. "Are they not beautiful there, Pedro? At least some one wears them as they should be worn!"

She caught Brenda's hands and turned her about. "I am so glad."

"Oh, but they are worth a fortune. I shouldn't wear them! I have no right to such gorgeousness!"

"Just for tonight, to please us?" Pedro Cruze asked.

"For tonight then." Brenda answered slowly.

Suddenly she had a feeling that she wished for Alan, more tonight, so that he could go with them. Alan would love to hear "Figaro." It was his favorite opera, he had told her once.

The night was perfect. As the white limousine rolled out of the palm-lined drive, Brenda knew they were followed immediately by Senor Cruze's bodyguard. It gave her a strange feeling, and made her appreciate the less intricate mode of living which she enjoyed.

Creates Sensation

Pedro Cruze escorted the women to the portals of the building with quiet dignity. He was resplendent with topper, white tie and black evening dress. Senora Cruze wore a light velvet cloak over her blue gown. Brenda's dark head rose above both her companions. The three presented a striking picture, as they walked across the brilliantly lighted foyer. Other people were arriving. It was almost time for the curtain to go up.

The orchestra had already begun playing, but light laughter and chattering groups were heard throughout the auditorium.

"This way, Senor Cruze," said the attendant.

"Who is the stunning girl?" whispered more than one man to his companions. "The American with the diamonds."

"Such beauty! Who is she? She is with the Cruzes. Who can it be? I've never seen her before." The women whispered among themselves.

Brenda was amazed at the focus of opera glasses turned toward the Cruze's box; one just did not appear so obviously curious back in America.

"You are a sensation, my dear," whispered the Senora happily.

"It's your diamonds, Senora," Brenda said laughingly.

"Shall we say, perhaps, that it is the combination?" added Pedro, who was enjoying the attention. Never had the Cruze box received such notice since they had entertained the royal family of Denmark one winter.

"You will be besieged with introductions after the curtain goes down. Ah! it begins!"

Brenda sat through the first act thrilled and happy to hear one of the great operas with which she was not familiar. Her opera-going days had been few indeed. Only at the invitation of friends, and a few times with Paget Blair.

She had studied her program, and now she leaned forward to see the stage setting and the costumed characters. She became so absorbed in it that she knew nothing of the passing of time, and came back to earth with a start when the curtain came down.

Meeting New People

Her color was high and the Cruzes looked at her happily. Never had they entertained a guest with such enjoyment before. "Shall we smoke?" the Senora asked.

Then they moved out in the foyer, with their cigarettes.

It was surprising how many people must stop and chat for a few moments. Brenda was already confused with their names. She knew she would remember but a few of them.

"You have been keeping her in hiding, my dear Senora," said the wife of Gen. Dom Truian, whom Alan had pointed out one night. "My dear, I think I saw you at a military ball."

"Yes. I attended one several weeks ago. You had left the receiving line when I passed."

"So sorry. We must see more of you."

She and the swarthy general moved on to allow others to approach. Brenda was glad when the intermission was up. She was tired but happy when the Cruzes took her to her apartment.

She had not been home since morning. The mail was on a little table, she found, when she went in. The letter on top was from Cary Winship. Her fingers were icy as she picked it up.

Brenda stared at the letter. From Cary! Then she tore it open with shaking fingers. What could Cary write her about? She read it hastily.

It was a friendly letter, that was all. But some of it haunted her for hours afterward. He had said, "We are over our heads in work. How I need you, Brenda! If we ever get our way dug out of this, I won't contract for so much in the future."

She put the letter in her desk drawer. Then she sat down, late as it was, and wrote her nightly letter to Alan. She told him all about her whole day. Told him about the diamonds and the stir they created, as she modestly wrote it, at the opera. Told him about the opera, too, and how she had wished for him to see it with her.

She folded the letter and placed it on the accumulating stack of them she had written for Alan for him to read when he returned from the interior.

She hung the white dress in its encasing bag, and took a warm shower. She had taken off the diamonds and returned them to Senora Cruze in the limousine. They had laughed over her fear of wearing them.

Haunting Words

She slipped into cool pajamas and got between the sheets, but she could not sleep.

"How I need you, Brenda," the words haunted her.

She impatiently turned her thoughts aside, by conjuring up the portrait of Senora Cruze. It would soon be finished. She was anxious to see it in the gorgeous gold frame that the senor was already having made for it. He often came to the studio and hung over her painting the last few moments of each afternoon.

"It is so like you, Yzalie. The eyes speak and the lips are smiling." He was very proud of the tiny woman who had shared all of his happier years. "We will hang it above the fireplace in our reception salon."

"I must finish it exactly as they would want it," Brenda told herself each day. To her now it seemed the most important work she had ever done.

She worked feverishly at it the next day and the next.

Senora Cruze said at lunchtime, "You are troubled, little Brenda. Are you well?"

"Oh, yes. I had mail from home when I returned the night of the opera. It is nothing. It will wear off soon."

By the end of the week she knew that she was impatient to finish the portrait. The days she had painstakingly used on it were well spent. "I honestly don't know how I could improve it," she told herself over and over.

"We are almost through, Senora. You have been so patient. You have given up your social life to sit for me."

"Pooh! What is that? I much prefer this! But through? I shall miss the hours here in the studio."

Brenda had not touched Cary's letter since it came, until the day the portrait was finished. It was still early in the afternoon the day it was done.

They made a little ceremony of showing it to the servants, and just before she left the house some of the Cruzes' friends dropped in for tea. Brenda was still flushed from the excitement of their extravagant praises.

After she returned to the apartment, she felt let down. As if she, having accomplished the goal she had set for herself, had no other interest. Yet, she knew that this was not so. The Cruzes had showered her with invitations for affairs in the months to come, while she would still be awaiting Alan's return. And there was Aunt Madge to visit at the hospital.

Sudden Decision

There were lots of interesting places she must visit yet. She still wanted to study the paintings in the Cruze wing of the museum. She moved restlessly about the rooms.

She undressed and slipped into a negligee. Without purpose, she opened the desk drawer and her hands touched Cary's letter. She sat down and read it again.

Three months yet before Alan could possibly return. He said that it might be even longer. Three months here in Rio without any real purpose in life. "I wish I might help Cary out of his difficulties. Just one more time. He would remember his promise and not take on such large contracts after this," she thought.

She had picked up the telephone before she realized what she was doing. She hastily replaced the receiver and stood staring at it. "I must not go. I won't go. Alan would not care, though, if that is what I want to do. I must not want to go. No, I won't even think about it," she scolded herself.

A moment later, though, she was speaking to some one at the Pan-American Airways. Her heart beat furiously as she replaced the receiver the second time.

It was done. Her reservation was made. There was no turning back now. She would fly, and within 28 hours after she left, she could be in her office back at the Winship Co.

A great sense of happiness pervaded her being.

"I will work hard. It will mean so much to Cary to have my help."

There was so little time to get ready to go. She wrote a note to Mrs. Sullivan at the hospital. Then she called Senora Cruze to cancel an engagement for the next week.

Brenda was glad for her to say that she thought it a splendid idea excepting that she would miss her. But it would be something to occupy her time until Alan's return. Brenda assured her that she expected to be back at least a week before Alan. She would be at home to welcome him.

Nun, Friend Of D. C. Poor 57 Years, Dies

Sister Benedict Marie Succumbs at 85 In Home for Aged

After 57 years of seeking alms for the aged poor in Washington, Sister Benedict Marie, of the Little Sisters of the Poor, died Monday. Requiem mass will be said at 9 a. m. today in the chapel of the home of the Little Sisters.

Coming to Washington as a young woman of 28, she grew old in the service of other aged persons. She died at the age of 85, but, until only a few weeks ago, she continued to rise at 4:30 a .m. and carry on duties at the Little Sisters' home.

Collected for Poor

Years ago, Sister Benedict Marie rode in a wagon, drawn by a white horse—a familiar sight to older residents of Washington—as she went about collecting food, clothes and funds for aged poor people.

"She wouldn't come home until she had filled up the wagon," a friend recalled yesterday. "She would not skip a place where she was likely to get even a loaf of bread."

In more recent years she made the rounds in an auto, until her own advancing age made it necessary for her to concentrate on home duties in the past year or two.

Her Only Mission Here

"Washington was her only mission," a friend pointed out, for she came here soon after entering the order of the Little Sisters of the Poor in France, 57 years ago. She was born in Germany and her friends knew of no relatives in this country.

At the Home for the Aged Poor, which the Litttle Sisters have at 220 H street northeast, Sister Benedict Marie was ill for three weeks before her death.. But she continued to plan for the work to which she had given so many years..

Requiem mass today will be said by the Rev. Henri Wiesel, S. J., rector of St. Aloysius' Church. The Marist Brothers' choir will sing. Burial will be in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

Gen. Washington's Closest Living Kin Dies Here at 91

Mrs. Harriot Washington Parks Tallmadge, great-grandniece of Gen. George Washington, died yesterday in the Washington Home for Incurables.

She was 91 years old and Washington's closest living kin. Her great - grandfather was Samuel Washington, George Washington's brother. Her grandmother, Harriot Washington, had lived at Mount Vernon and is mentioned in Washington's will.

Mrs. Tallmadge had been in failing health for two years. The family owned a home in Washington, but in recent years Mrs. Tallmadge had lived near Glen Echo, Md. She had lived in the Capital and vicinity for more than 50 years.

She was born October 28, 1848, at Charleston, W. Va. Her husband was the late Theodore Tallmadge, a Capital lawyer. She leaves a son, Andrew Parks Tallmadge, of Washington, and a stepson, Theodore Tallmadge, Columbus, Ohio.

The Rev. Franklin Johns Bohanan, pastor of St. Paul's Episcopal Church, Rock Creek Parish, will conduct funeral services in the church at 2 p. m. tomorrow.

Bolles Advocates Funeral Board

"Bootleg funerals" will be outlawed in Washington if a bill introduced yesterday by Representative Bolles (Republican), of Wisconsin, becomes a law.

The measure, requested by a group of local undertakers, seeks to set up a board of licensure to regulate the funeral and embalming business in the National Capital.

MAJ. GEN. WILLIAM GRAVES

Bannerman, Hull Aide, Dies at 66

Chief Special Agent Was 'Mystery Man' In State Department

Robert C. Bannerman, the State Department's "mystery man," died yesterday in his home, 1545 Wilson boulevard, Arlington, Va. He was 66 years old.

BANNERMAN

Mr. Bannerman was chief special agent of the State Department, but for most of the 22 years of his service he kept the nature of his duties a secret so successfully that they were known to few with the exception of department officials and his intimates.

Throughout his career he kept himself and his work strictly anonymous. He even withheld his name from publication in the State Department's register. He never granted interviews.

Guarded British Sovereigns

One of his biggest and most successful undertakings was in connection with the visit to the United States last summer of King George and Queen Elizabeth of England. As his duties included responsibility for the safety of illustrous visitors to this country, it was he who arranged the elaborate police guards that protected the monarchs from the moment they crossed the Canadian border until they left the country.

Mr. Bannerman was on active duty at the department until he became ill four days ago.

Funeral services will be held at 11 a. m. tomorrow in the Gawler undertaking establishment at 1756 Pennsylvania avenue northwest. Burial will be private.

Educated in Scotland

Mr. Bannerman was born October 25, 1873 at Pigeon Cove, Mass., and was educated in Scotland. He served in the Postoffice Department as railway mail clerk and postal inspector until 1910, when he entered private business at Winnipeg, Canada. In May, 1917, he became special agent in the State Department and later was promoted to chief special agent.

Survivors are his wife, Mrs. Eloise Margaret Bannerman; four daughters, Mrs. Danna Young, Willimantic, Conn.; Mrs. Merrill Doyle, Kerrville, Tex., and Miss Mary Bannerman and Mrs. William Bradford, of Arlington, and a son, Robert L. Bannerman, also of Arlington.

Gen. Graves Dies; Directed Siberia A.E.F.

Detailed by Wilson To Help Czechs Get Out of Russia

Maj. Gen. William S. Graves, 74, U. S. A., retired, commander of the American Expeditionary Forces in Siberia, 1918-20, died yesterday at his home in Shrewsbury, N. J., the War Department announced last night.

Gen. Graves' difficulties with the Allied army leaders in Russia in attempting to carry out his orders from President Wilson were even greater than those of Gen. Pershing in France. Instructed to maintain his troops as an independent command and assist 40,000 Czechs who had fought for Russia against the central powers to return to their homes, he managed to do the former but met with opposition on all sides

He was criticized repeatedly by British and French leaders during his stay in Russia. American writers, however, have had high praise for his conduct in the midst of the intrigue and clashing interests of the disorganized country, and the United States Government honored him with the Distinguished Service Medal.

Publication of his experiences several years later in his book, "America's Siberian Adventure," brought a challenge to a duel from Lieut. Gen. Konstantin Sakharoff, commander of the White Russian forces. Graves ignored the challenge, remarking: "The book speaks for itself."

He was born in Mount Calm, Hill County, Tex., and appointed to West Point in 1884. After being under fire during the Philippine insurrection, he served in various posts until the World War, when he was made secretary of the War Department general staff. He was assistant chief of the general staff from December, 1917, to June, 1918, and was then given command of the Eighth Division.

After his return from Russia he commanded the First infantry Brigade, the First and Eighth divisions and the Sixth Corps Area.

Gen. Graves leaves his wife, a daughter, Mrs. Dorothy Orton, wife of Col. William R. Orton, of Morgantown, W. Va.; a son, Sidney C. Graves, who lives at 2401 Foxhall road here, and a sister and four brothers, all of Gatesville, Tex.

The funeral will be at 11 a. m. tomorrow in Fort Myer Chapel, with interment following in Arlington Cemetery. Gen. Malin Craig, retired chief of staff, heads the list of pallbearers. The others are Maj. Gens. Walter A. Bethel, Edward F. McGlachlin, Charles D. Rhodes, Cols. Edwin W. Bookmiller, John P. Hains, Harry R. Lee, John R. M. Taylor and Capt. Frank E. Powell.

Maj. Simpson's Funeral Today

The funeral of Maj. French C. Simpson, U. S. A., who died January 27 in Hawaii, will be held this morning at 11 o'clock in Fort Myer Chapel. Burial will follow in Arlington Cemetery with full military honors.

Honorary palllbearers for Maj. Simpson, include Maj. Gen. Henry Gibbons, Rear Admiral William R. Furlong, Col. Edmund B. Gregory, Lieut. Col. Edwin S. Bettelheim, Majs. Norman D. Murphy, George J. B. Fisher, Wilbert V. Renner and Capt. James Regan.

Power Rites Friday

t Neal Power, Georgetown University alumnus and a member of its first board of regents, who died Friday at his home in San Francisco, will be buried here Friday morning in Arlington Cemetery. In the World War he served as a colonel in France.

Easby-Smith, D. C. Attorney, Dies of Wound

Accidentally Shot Cleaning Small Rifle In Basement of Home

Frank S. Easby-Smith, 40, lawyer and member of a prominent Washington family, died yesterday at Emergency Hospital of peritonitis and pneumonia, as the result of a gunshot wound suffered Friday while cleaning a .22-caliber rifle in the basement of his home at 4944 Lowell street northwest.

Mr. Easby-Smith's chauffeur found him in the basement and game room of his new home late Friday afternoon with a gunshot wound in the stomach. Police said the shooting was accidental.

Born in Washington, Mr. Easby-Smith was educated at the Friends School here and at Staunton Military Academy, Staunton, Va. During the World War he served with the ambulance corps overseas, and upon his return entered Georgetown College. In 1923 he was graduated from Georgetown University Law School.

He was the only son of Col. John S. Easby-Smith, noted lawyer, classical author, and recipient of the Distinguished Service Medal for his service in the World War as an administrator of the selective service law in the office of the provost marshal general.

Mr. Easby-Smith's law offices were in Stoneleigh court. He was a member of the District Bar Association and Augustus P. Gardner Post, No. 18, of the American Legion.

Surviving, are his father and mother, Col. and Mrs. Easby-Smith; his wife, Mrs. Mildred Withers Easby-Smith; a son, John W., and a daughter, Julia, all of Washington; and a sister, Mrs. Paul Peyton, of New York City.

There will be a low requiem mass at 10 a. m. tomorrow at Our Lady of Victory Church, Conduit road northwest. Interment will be in Arlington Cemetery.

Mrs. Prosperi Dies In Silver Spring

Mrs. Josephine S. Prosperi, 88, widow of Lieut. Augustus G. Prosperi, U. S. N., died yesterday at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Charles E. Vantine, 8914 Second avenue, Silver Spring, Md.

Born in Annapolis, Mrs. Prosperi had lived in Maryland all her life. She made her home in Silver Spring for the last 10 years. She leaves two other daughters, Mrs. Fannie Pierce, of Arlington, Va., and Mrs. Lela H. Michaelis, of Lansdowne, Pa., and a son, Augustus G. Prosperi, of Overbrook Hills, Pa.

Funeral services will be held at 11 a. m. Friday at the Vantine home. Burial will be in the Naval Cemetery in Annapolis, Md.
